LT. GOV. TIM MURRAY and Mayor William Phelan urged residents and local legislators to support the governor's Municipal Partnership Act during a press conference Monday at City Hall Plaza. Behind Murray and Phelan is the famed Granite Ball from Quincy's quarries.

Also Seek Telecommunications Tax Loophole Closure

Murray, Phelan Urge Support For State Insurance Plan

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Lt. Gov. Timothy Murray and Mayor William Phelan urged residents Monday to support two legislative measures, one aimed at saving taxpayers million of dollars on the city's health insurance payments, and, the second, at eliminating a tax loophole for telecommunications companies.

Both Murray and Phelan spoke at a joint press conference at City Hall Plaza which climaxed when Murray presented a facsimile check for $3.5 million to the mayor for a local business.

The funds awarded as a state Business Investment Grant will allow Granite Communications Co. of North Quincy, to build a company parking garage at its 100 Newport Avenue location.

Phelan noted that the company had been considering leaving Quincy as there was insufficient parking for its 350 employees. The grant, part of the state's economic stimulus program, is aimed at "keeping that corporation here."

Not only will Granite Communications continue to provide jobs for Quincy residents, but also create patrons for local firms, Phelan said, calling the governor's incentive program, a refreshing new approach.

Most of Monday's press conference centered on the need for cities to change their approach to employee health insurance. Both Murray and Phelan outlined the benefits of having city unions join the state's Group Insurance Commission (G.I.C.).

The GIC recently passed both the Senate and the House in Boston and will be available for city employees shortly if they and their unions want it. The major advantage is the number of choices of insurance plans and the clout that the GIC has in negotiating costs for each plan.

Phelan said that if Quincy's unions adopt the GIC, then taxpayers could save as much as $8.2 million and employees themselves could save $1.3 million in premium payments. City officials must approve the GIC and 70% of each union's members must vote to join GIC.

Murray noted that health insurance costs have increased by 63% to 130% in some communities since he and Phelan were elected as mayors in 2001. Prior to being elected as Patrick's lieutenant governor, Murray served as a city councillor and mayor of Worcester

Building Permit Contested

New Appeal May Delay QHS Start

By TOM HENSHAW

The long and frustrating road to a new $126 million Quincy High School may have run into another detour.

A week after the first building permit was issued to begin clearing the way for construction, the first petition was filed asking the Board of Appeals to revoke the permit.

Environmentalist Bill Aylward, a longtime critic of the school's placement on Faxon Field, is seeking the annulment on grounds that an earlier order by the Conservation Commission is still in litigation.

Martin Aikens, chairman of the Board of Appeals, said his board has 60 days to hold a hearing on Aylward's petition, which has to be advertised 14 days in advance of the hearing.

Could work on the new high school be placed on hold until the appeal is settled?

"The board would decide that," said Aikens.

The Conservation Commission's Order of Conditions was handed down last Nov. 17 approving the Faxon Field site for the new high school in spite of protests that it was disturbing a wetland.

The required number of 10 citizens appealed the order but the State Department of Environmental Protection went ahead and affirmed the Conservation Commission ruling just the same.

An appeal from that decision was dismissed and the case against the State DEP went on to Suffolk Superior Court.

The latest petition to the Board of Appeals claims that the Building Department has no right to issue a building permit while the litigation is still unresolved.

Ground-breaking for the new school was scheduled for Monday, June 18, but the date was canceled when the teachers went on strike. No new date for ground-breaking has been set.

Bids for mechanical, plumbing, electrical and heating contracts were scheduled to be opened Friday and a contract to demolish two wings of the school administration building on Coddington Street starting in early August is to be awarded this week.

Michael Ryan, chairman of the School Building Committee, said actual construction of the new school building should begin in the fall and be completed by August, 2010.

The Massachusetts School Building Authority has approved $72 million in reimbursements for the $126 million building.

Trash Collection Strike Averted Last Minute

Quincy's trash collection contractor Allied Waste has reached a last-minute contract agreement with its employee members of Local 379 the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, avoiding a strike and any interruption in the collection of trash and yard-waste.

Local 379 has 169 members in its shops in Quincy and Watertown. They are responsible for daily pickup of trash, recyclable materials, and yard waste.

"Things were not going so well until the Mayor got involved over the weekend," said Local 379 Treasurer/

Secretary Gerry Godin, "I want to thank him for ensuring that the hard-work employees of Local 379 were treated fairly."

Local 379 walked out at midnight Saturday night. A deal was reached in the early morning hours of Sunday.

"I want to thank Mayor Phelan for sharing some of his experiences in handling similar situations," said Allied Waste's Quincy Manager Rick Maera. "The costs of health care are affecting everyone and he helped explain how the City has handled their situation in the recent past. It was helpful."

Allied Waste removes trash from more than 30,000 homes and businesses throughout Quincy. They are the company formerly known as BFI.

"The two sides deserve credit for avoiding any disruption to Quincy residents," said Phelan. "Any negotiation requires both parties to understand each other better and if I helped that happen, then I'm happy to hear that. The important thing is the Quincy residents were not impacted by this issue and the members of Local 379 were treated fairly."

City Receives Grant To Staff Teen Summer Hangouts

Quincy has received a grant from the Executive Office of Public Safety to provide police and recreational staffing at Fenno Street basketball courts and the Sterling Middle School during the summer months.

Announcement was made by Mayor William Phelan, Police Chief Robert Crowley and Recreation Director Barry Welch.

"We need positive places for our young people to go to during the summer months," said Phelan. "We need to keep our focus on telling teenagers what they can do instead of always focusing on what they can't or shouldn't do. This grant will allow for positive activity throughout the summer months where young people can go, hang out, recreate, and have fun."

The grant will allow for a police officer to be added to both locations seven days a week from 6 to 11 p.m. The officer will be in casual clothing and be responsible for getting to know the teens and interacting in recreational activities. Two recreation leaders will be on staff from 6 to 9 p.m. to help facilitate games.

"This is a chance to extend the community policing concept and build a relationship between our teens and our police officers," said Chief Crowley. "The neighbors in these areas can know that the teens that do congregate in these areas will do so with a positive purpose."

Phelan pointed out the work that Councillors Jay Davis and Doug Gutro did on behalf of their constituents.

"Councillor Davis and Councillor Gutro deserve special mention for their efforts to work on behalf of the neighborhoods but with an understanding that teens need a place to hang-out at night," said Phelan. "I think this program could serve as a model to be emulated in other parts of the city in future years."

Last summer, the Mayor's Office, Councillor Davis, the Police Department, and Sterling Middle School ran a successful teen program featuring evening recreational activity and job training for teens.

"It's no accident that Quincy is the second safest city in Massachusetts," said Phelan. "Our after-school and summer programs give young people a chance to spend their time constructively, avoiding the hazards associated with idle time. This particular program will partner our teens with our police department and build valuable bonds between the two that will pay very valuable dividends for our community."

The program began last weekend and will continue throughout the summer, until the grant allotment is exhausted.

Katelyn Nee Graduates Air Force Basic Training

Air Force Airman Katelyn M. Nee has graduated from basic military training at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Texas.

During the six weeks of training, the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization, and military customs and courtesies; performed drill and ceremony marches, and received physical training, rifle marksmanship, field training exercises, and special training in human relations.

In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree through the Community College of the Air Force.

White House Wreath To Mark J.Q. Adams 240th Birthday

The annual wreath from the White House will be placed on the tomb of John Quincy Adams Wednesday, July 11, at 12 noon, marking the 240th birthday of the sixth president of the United States.

The tomb is in the crypt of United First Parish Church, the Church of the Presidents, where his father, John, the second president, and their wives, Abigail and Louisa, also are buried.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS
The wreath will be presented by Lieutenant Commander Raymond Herd and members of the US Navy Color Guard while the Air National Guard Band of the North East and other guest soloists perform.

The tradition of placing wreaths on the graves of deceased presidents on their birthdays was begun during the Administration of President Lyndon B. Johnson. Adams was born July 11, 1767.

More Demolition Projects

Condemned Squantum House Falls To Wrecker

The house at 28 Ashworth St. in Squantum had been a neighborhood eyesore for years, according to Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee who fielded complaints regarding the property from the time he took office to the day recently when wreckers demolished the building.

In late spring, neighbors described the wretched condition of the house at a City Council meeting. At that time, councillors considered and, then, approved an anti-blight ordinance giving the city more power to deal with neighborhood eyesores and unsafe structures.

The neighbors' efforts finally worked.

"It was a big bone of contention in the neighborhood," Public Works Commissioner Steve O'Donnell, said recently.

According to O'Donnell, a demolition crew from James Grant Company, Readville, cleared the old house and the land under a $9,600 contract with the city.

"We removed the structure and cleared the land because the structure was unsafe," City Solicitor Robert Quinn said last week, adding that the owners will be responsible for the cost. "There will be a lien placed against the property."

The Squantum house is one of several demolition projects either completed or scheduled in the city.

NEED Corporation of Quincy cleared portions of the Southern Tide Mill on Southern Artery under an $8,500 contract with the city. The section burned in a fire was not considered part of the original historic structure.

More recently, the former Tan-Line building at 148 Parkway was demolished to clear the path for the Quincy Center Concourse.

Seek Medical Gear To Loan

The Council on Aging is seeking donations of medical equipment that is no longer needed by the current owner but can be loaned to under a $17,000 contract with the city.

On the summer schedule is the demolition of the administration wing of Quincy High School as the city prepares to build a new $126 million high school. The demolition of the public works/traffic garage on Sea Street is also underway.

City officials announced recently that Francesco Demolition of Duxbury was awarded the $33,800 contract for the old garage at the Department of Public Works site on Sea Street.

The DPW garage is one of five buildings at headquarters and will be rebuilt. O'Donnell said the employees and equipment now using the building are being temporarily reassigned while a new structure is completed.

A Gift From MWRA

City Gets New Free Fire Rescue Truck

Quincy firefighters now have a state-of-the-art Rescue 1 truck ready for emergency calls and it didn't cost the city a penny, thanks to State Rep. Ron Mariano.

Valued at $250,000 to $500,000, the Rescue 1 Engine recently rolled into Quincy Fire Department headquarters for service.

The fire engine was officially transferred, at no cost, to the city by the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority (MWRA), the region's water and sewer provider.

Mariano negotiated the transfer deal with MWRA Director Fred Laskey after learning the agency no longer needed the vehicle for its tunnel construction project at Fore River. The tunnel provides agency access to the MWRA's pumping station at the Quincy/Weymouth line. Mariano represents both areas.

"The truck was no longer needed once the tunnel was completed," Mariano said. "These things can cost half a million dollars."

Friendly Visitors Sought At COA

The Quincy Council on Aging is seeking volunteers to call on the elderly who live alone and would welcome a friendly visitor.

The COA is also seeking seniors who live alone and would like a friendly visit themselves.

Call the COA at 617-376-1508 and ask to speak with Lena Trough, the friendly visitor coordinator.

The Council is mandated by law to do background checks on all volunteers.

"Obviously, it's needed," added Mariano referring to Quincy's former Rescue 1 truck which was declared beyond repair in recent years. Basically out of service, the old truck had been stripped of its equipment which was dispersed to other engines.

As for the MWRA, Mariano considers the transfer Quincy's due. "We take a lot of the burdens (of the MWRA) from having a pumping station. It's only fair to get some mitigation."

At a special ceremony recently, Mayor William Phelan presented Certificates of Appreciation to Mariano and Laskey and thanked them for their actions on behalf of Quincy.

On hand at the ceremony were Fire Chief Timothy Pettinelli, Ward 2 Councilor Daniel Raymondi, Deputy Fire Chief Gary Smyth and Firefighter Ernie Arienti, head of the firefighters' union.

The city got a "magnificent vehicle" for free, said Raymondi when contacted after the event. "Representative Mariano has been terrific. He brought all the parties together. Post-construction, it was just sitting there not being used."

Deputy Smyth said that Rescue 1 is now fully equipped with the "Jaws of Life," defibrillators, air bottles and all the necessary medical tools and shoring equipment. The Rescue 1 vehicle will be used, in such emergencies, as fire and auto accident rescues. "It replaces the original rescue truck that was old."

Now that Rescue 1 is ready for action, the question is how to man the vehicle.

At their last meeting before summer recess, City Councillors voted unanimously to urge Fire Chief Timothy Pettinelli and Mayor William Phelan to use the $102,000 collected in fire alarm receipts in fiscal year 2007 to man Rescue 1 in fiscal year 2008.

However, that won't work, according to Mayor William Phelan's spokesman, David Murphy. Murphy said this week that the mayor has already increased the overtime line to cover manpower shortages.

In addition, Murphy said that funds collected through fees must be used to cover the cost of the specific service. At this time, Murphy said that fire alarm receipts help offset the cost of fire department personnel handling fire alarms and that is the purpose of the fees.

NEW RESCUE 1 ENGINE was transferred free of charge to the City of Quincy, from the MWRA, the region's water and sewer agency at the request of State Representative Ron Mariano.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On July 4, 1804, staging the first-ever Fourth of July celebration west of the Mississippi River, Lewis and Clark fire the expedition cannon and order an extra ration of whiskey for the men. Not knowing the name of the creek they camped by, they named it Independence Creek in honor of the day.

• On July 8, 1898, "Soapy" Smith, one of the most notorious con men in the history of the West, is murdered in Skagway, Alaska. Traveling around the Southwest, Smith and a companion would set up shop in the street selling bars of soap wrapped in tissue paper. Smith promised the crowds that a few lucky purchasers would find a $100 bill wrapped inside a few of the $5 bars of soap. Sales were brisk after his plant in the audience "found" a $100 bill.

• On July 5, 1916, children under 16 are banned from New York City theaters due to an outbreak of polio. Some 200 theaters shut down throughout the summer.

• On July 6, 1942, in Nazi-occupied Holland, 13-year old Jewish diarist Anne Frank and her family are forced to take refuge in a secret sealed-off area of an Amsterdam warehouse where they hid for two years before being found.

• On July 3, 1950, the TV game show "Pantomime Quiz Show" debuts as a network series on CBS. The program, a variation of charades, ran for 13 years, although it changed networks several times. The show began as a local program in Los Angeles in 1947.

• On July 7, 1976, for the first time in history, women are enrolled into the United States Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. On May 28, 1980, 62 of these female cadets graduated and were commissioned as second lieutenants.

• On July 2, 1992, theoretical physicist Stephen Hawking's book, "A Brief History of Time" breaks British publishing records. His book had been list on the nonfiction bestseller list for three and a half years and sold more than 3 million copies in 22 languages.

Mayoral Preliminary Inching Closer

A possible mayoral preliminary election may be inching closer to reality.

It all depends.

It all depends on two lesser-known potential candidates, both of whom have taken nomination papers out.

The question is will at least one of them return them with 50 valid signatures?

The latest is Robert Boussy of Farrington Street, Wollaston. He joins Charles Dennehy, Jr. of Willard Street, West Quincy who was one of the first to pick up papers in May.

Neither has held elective office but they aren't exactly strangers on the political scene.

Boussy ran for city councillor at-large in 2003 and finished sixth in a six-candidate field. He has also taken out papers and not filed them.

Dennehy took out papers for mayor two years ago but did not return them. Instead he ran on stickers, a virtual political impossibility.

Neither Boussy nor Dennehy would be considered real threats to Mayor William Phelan or his major challenger, Tom Koch, former city park commissioner who resigned in January to run for mayor.

But Boussy or Dennehy-or both-would force a September preliminary election if they return their papers in good standing by the July 31 deadline.

And that would affect both Phelan and Koch.

A preliminary election would mean more time campaigning and more money to finance it for Phelan and Koch.

Who would benefit the most?

Phelan has the bigger war chest. But Koch is doing pretty well building his.

If Koch came close or even topped the preliminary election he would be in great shape for the November final.

If Phelan won-especially by a wide margin-it could be all over.

But both could benefit from a preliminary battle. It would detect weaknesses and give them time to make changes before November.

Although Dennehy and Boussy are given little chance of winning, they might be a factor in who does win.

Right now it looks like a close election.

Tracey, you might say, has a footnote in Quincy's political history:

the wife of one mayor and the daughter of another, Arthur Tobin, now clerk magistrate of Quincy District Court.

And not to forget Shirley Tobin, the wife of one mayor and the mother-in-law of a second.

Sort of like Abigail Adams.

TRACEY

TOM KOCH estimates he has personally knocked on some 1,200 doors throughout the city in his campaign for mayor.

And, in doing so, has worn out a pair of shoes.

Has he lost any weight?
"I'm kind of up and down," he says.
"I lose it while walking door to door but gain it back eating late."

GEORGE BURKE was kidding with Peter O'Connell the other day and told him maybe he should run for mayor.

O'Connell laughed and replied:

"No, I've been there, done that."

O'Connell was a contender in one of the best-remembered mayoral preliminary elections in 1989.

That was the year Mayor Frank McCauley decided not to seek a fifth term. It brought out four major candidates: former Mayor Joseph LaRaia, Councillors Steve McGrath and Jim Sheets and O'Connell.

Sheets, who had served eight terms (16 years) as Ward 4 councillor and O'Connell, making his first run for office won the nominations.

Sheets went on to win the November final and the first of a record six terms.

There are still observers today who wonder what O'Connell would have accomplished as mayor with his vision and fresh ideas.

Summer Programs For All Ages At Thomas Crane Library

Library adventures await children, teens and adults at Thomas Crane Public Library this summer as the staff presents programs for all ages during July and August.

"Catch the Beat @ Your Library" is this year's theme for the schedule which will feature free raffles, a juggling act, a freestyle Frisbee demonstration, knitting and scrapbooking programs, as well as free movies, concerts, a magic show and a puppet show. There will also be a Talent Night at the Main Library.

All programs and events are free, but some children's programs are limited to Quincy residents and require registration by calling 617-376-2411.

To qualify for the free raffle, children up to age 13 or their parents, can pick up "Reader's Raffle" slips at the Main Library or at any branch library.

After the young patron has read or listened to a book, filled out a slip and returned it to any library location, he or she will be entered into the weekly drawing for bookstore gift cards. Drawings will begin July 6.

Today, patrons can wear their special costumes to the library's Disney movie marathon, which begins at 10 a.m. with "Pooh's Grand Adventure." Other scheduled Disney adventures will feature Peter Pan and several favorite princesses. Individuals may attend one or all of the movies.

In between each film showing, participants can create their own pirate hat or royal crown and show off their costumes.

July also brings the return of the Summer Storytellers Series and Jumping Jammies pajama storytime with Joan Goodman.

"We will be celebrating the release of the final Harry Potter book with a number of special events, such as Divination class with Madame Trelawney, a Potter party and book discussions," notes children's librarian Julie Rines.

These summer programs are sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library, Massachusetts Regional Library Systems, the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners, Waste Management, the Massachusetts Cultural Council through the Quincy Arts Lottery grant program and a South Coastal bank C.A.R.E.S. grant.

Contact library staff at the telephone number above or visit thomascranelibrary.org for additional information.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1927 real photo postcard view of the Methodist Episcopal Church on East Squantum Street in Atlantic. The church had just been built on land that was the site of the old Quincy Elementary School. On the right was the pastor's home and just out of sight next to it was the original wooden church that later became the Masonic Hall. The Methodist congregation merged with other Quincy churches in the 1980s and this building was used as a Sikh Temple for a few years until it was converted into condominiums. In the distant left can be seen the old Atlantic fire station with the tower and beyond that the old Hancock Paint factory. Under construction at the time of this photo was the center section of today's North Quincy High School behind the church. The east wing of the high school was built in 1931 and today would block the view of the left. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

READERS FORUM

Let's Value Our Teachers More

A few weeks ago on Quincy cable television we watched the moving testimony of numerous Quincy schoolteachers before the Quincy School Committee, and we were so impressed by their eloquence and dedication and professionalism.

During the recent strike, we were dismayed to see the teachers pitted against the taxpayers. Quincy taxpayers should be grateful that they live in a city with first-rate schools, even if it means paying a few more dollars in property taxes.

Is anything more important to parents with young children than excellent public schools? Would homeowners be happy to live in a city with a second-rate school system, a city that prospective homebuyers turned away from in favor of other neighboring towns? Would our homes be worth as much in a city that did not respect and properly compensate its teachers?

We are sure that the decision to strike was a very difficult one for the teachers, but we think their determination and resolve was a good lesson for us all. If we really believe in the value of a good education, let's value our teachers more. Let's not ask them to bear the burden of a broken health care system. We do hope that the tentative agreement reached between the city and the teachers is fair to the teachers and that all the residents of this city, even those without children in the system appreciate all the hard work that they do. We have been inspired by what we have heard from them over the last few weeks.

Quincy Center Concourse Just A Hallucination

Someone once said, "A vision without a plan is a hallucination."

As I look at City Hall's push to create the Quincy Center Concourse, I wonder if it isn't just hallucination.

The City Council voted to formally approve the $30 million bond authorization, which will fund the Quincy Center revitalization being pushed by Mayor Phelan.

The centerpiece for the new Downtown Quincy appears to be the Concourse cutting across Quincy Center east to west. Under the bond, the city will encourage new uses for the Hancock Parking Lot and the Ross Parking Garage. A thin of these monies is for the Concourse.

According to city officials, the city does not expect to take out a $30 million bond but will borrow against the authorization. The state's economic development agency will hold a public hearing in Boston on June 28.

Also, in last week's Quincy Sun was a letter from John McDuff, Jr. concerning Quincy's revitalization plans. McDuff, who came to Boston like me, remembers the destruction of "blighted" neighborhoods such as the West End and the New York streets of Boston's South End.

McDuff calls it the "Downtown Destruction Plan" and he does have a point. Back nearly 50 years ago, urban renewal rolled into Boston to "improve" neighborhoods. Bulldozers razed a neighborhood to improve it but the only ones who benefited were developers. Affordable housing destroyed, luxury residences built and the poor shuffled off to some other neighborhood. The same thing happened in the South End.

What vision does City Hall have for Hancock Street after the Concourse is built and operating? Will this bring folks onto Hancock Street or just across Hancock connecting Route 3A with the Burgin Parkway? When this east-west road is open, will traffic be relieved on both Furnace Parkway and West Squantum Street?

How will the Concourse affect the revitalization of Quincy Center? How will massive projects for both the parking lot and garage benefit Downtown Quincy's economy or taxpayers' wallets?

Are we going to see mega-development changing the face of Downtown Quincy? Some see residential units above current retail establishments on Hancock Street. I can see building above some current businesses in the area but as I look southbound on Hancock Street, don't most of the current shops seem destined for bulldozers like Boston 40 years ago?

Recently, Jennifer Logue, who's running for City Council at-large, asked many of these same questions: What is the real plan for Downtown Quincy? Is the Concourse simply just a Trojan horse for much greater development plans?

Sounds like Downtown Quincy may become a playground for developers with all kinds of ideas to make money.

How will the revitalization benefit working families, middle-class homeowners, the elderly on fixed incomes and young families trying to begin a life for their families here as opposed to somewhere else?

We're moving too fast and the vision remains blurry.

Weld Signs College, Golf Course Petitions

By FRANK MCCAULEY

Gov. William Weld has signed into law two home rule petitions that will pave the way for a new system of government at Quincy College and construction of a golf course/recreational facility at the former landfill site in West Quincy.

Mayor James A. Sheets made the announcement after receiving verification from Weld's office. The two petitions were passed by the city council in March and by the state legislature on June 21.

Sheets said he was thrilled with the news. His home rule petition for Quincy College calls for the college to be governed by a new independent board of trustees.

The other home rule petition will allow the city to enter into a lease agreement of up to 50 years with Quarry Hills Associates for the construction of a golf course recreation complex to be maintained by the developers but owned by the city.

PAID RAISES FOR CITY OFFICIALS APPROVED

The City Council has approved pay raises ranging from 2 to 14 percent for department heads and other top full-time city officials.

The salary increases are the first in five years for Mayor Sheets and city councillors and the first significant raises in five years for 50 department heads and other non-elected employees.

The mayor's salary is going up 12 percent from $55,587 to $62,500 per year while city councillors' pay will rise 25 to $12,607. The raises for the mayor and city councillors will become effective on Jan. 1, 1995.

QUINCY-ISM

The 10th annual Chris Peter Blood Drive will be held July 19 from 2 to 8 p.m. at St. Thomas Aquinas Hall, Darnos St., Houghs Neck. Christine Carroll, daughter of William and Angela Carroll, was named to the Dean's List at Salve Regina University. Storyteller Len Cabral will appear in concert at the Thomas Crane Public Library, Washington St., July 12, at 7 p.m. His appearance will open the eighth annual Summer Storytellers Series, sponsored by the Quincy Arts Council and the Friends of the Library. Stephanie Craig of Quincy is a recent graduate of Framingham State College. She received a Bachelor of Science degree from the school.

Robert M. Long of Quincy recently received his juris doctors degree from the New England School of Law.

Kevin Foley of Mary St., Quincy, in a letter to the Quincy Sun Readers' Forum, posed the question, "Do we really need a Wal-Mart in Quincy?" Answering his own question, Mr. Foley, a third generation resident of Quincy, said, "I don't think so." Robert M. Maguire, 71 Sims Rd., Wollaston, took the opposite position, stating, "I think it's a great thing for the city of Quincy." Josephine Shea, Deputy Supt. of Administration Finance of the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office, was the guest speaker at the Quincy Lodge of Elks annual Flag Day ceremonies. Colonial Savings Bank, 12 Beach St., Wollaston, was offering new cars for as little as $9,999 for three years. Public Works Commissioner David Colton presented the Employee of the Year Award to DPW draftsman Nancy Allen. Justin Mahoney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Mahoney, graduated first in his class at Lackland Air Force Base in Texas. Edward Keohane, owner of Seaside Funeral Service of Quincy, was elected president of the National Selected Morticians, an international fraternal association of independent, privately owned funeral service firms.

Stephen P. Dunleavy of Quincy, has been named executive vice-president for the Shawmut Center, opening the New Boston Garden Corp. has announced. 138 Official and Hearing Aids, 1361 Hancock St., was offering Hearing Aid Complete, 30-day trial for $499. Kenneth Whalen, Jr. was a recent honors graduate of Bunker Hill Community College, Boston. The Quincy and South Shore Board of Realtors has changed its name to the South Shore Association of Realtors, Inc. The name change was announced by Board President Arthur Foley. Normand Grenier, executive director of Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services, was appointed to a two-year term as a member of the Neighborhood Reinvestment Council Corporation. Cong. Gerry Studds announced the U.S. House of Representatives has approved a grant of $230,000 to benefit the United First Parish Church and the Adams National Historic Site. Half the money will go for operating expenses at the Adams Site. The other $115,000 will go to technical assistance in rehabilitating the church.

A 'Thank You'

To Cemetery Workers

A sincere "thank you" to all the cemetery workers who worked so hard to get the grass cut and make everything look nice in the city's cemeteries in time for Memorial Day.

This holiday is a day of remembrance for veterans and of those we love and we appreciate the long hours that went into making the cemeteries beautiful.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Easy Scrod Fish Cakes

One of our favorite seafood is a fish cake or croquette made with any kind of fish as well as salmon.

Sometimes I use mashed potatoes as a filler, but today's recipe can be made somewhat different. It depends on a favorite.

Although I sometimes make a fish cake with canned salmon, this time I made it with scrod, and I could control the amount of salt usually in the salmon or even in a fish cake purchased at the market or eaten in a restaurant. Any other fish will due also.

Easy Scrod Fish Cakes

- 1 pound of fresh fish
- 1 egg
- 1 stalk celery (chopped finely)
- 1 small onion (chopped finely)
- 1 teaspoon fresh chopped parsley
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 cup bread crumbs (and extra for rolling the fish cake)

salt and pepper to taste vegetable oil for sauteing seafood seasoning (optional)

In a pan, simmer a small amount of water, just enough to cover the fish. Season the fish with salt and pepper and the lemon juice. Place the fish, cover until fish is done.

In the meantime, saute the chopped celery and the onion. Add the salt and pepper and the parsley and the seafood seasoning. Remove from heat and then mix together with the bread crumbs and the egg. By now the fish is done and flaky. In a bowl, break apart the fish with a fork. Cool and then add the mixture. Add a little water if mixture is too dry.

Spread out some bread crumbs (I used corn flake crumbs) on a piece of wax paper or aluminum foil. Make a fish cake the size you prefer and roll it in the crumbs. Saute in vegetable oil until brown on each side. Serve with fresh lemon if desired.

Summertime Storytellers Return To Crane Library

Children's Librarian Lori Seegraber will teach youngsters to whip up a simple meal for the whole family Monday, July 9, at 6:30 p.m. in the Adams Shore Branch Library, 519 Sea St.

The "Cooking for Kids" program is for children age 8 and older accompanied by an adult.

Two favorite programs will return to the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Tuesday, July 10.

The summer storytellers series will kick off with a visit from Debbie O'Carroll presenting Magical Medley, a show full of stories, magic tricks and audience participation.

Youngsters age 5 and older will meet a mind-reading ghost, play a game with the tap-dancing magician and help a befuddled wizard solve a mystery.

This is the first of six weekly storytelling performances.

Storyteller Joan Goodman will return with Jumping Jammies, a pajama storytime full of stories and songs for children ages 2-5 accompanied by a adult.

Both programs take place at 7 p.m., Debbie O'Carroll in the library's main meeting room and Joan Goodman in the children's room.

Harry Potter fans can join children's librarian Cathy deVeer for Divination Class with Professor Trelawney to test their powers of divination by predicting what will happen in Harry Potter and the Death Hallows.

The lively discussion for children age 10 and older will be held Thursday, July 12, at 7 p.m. in the children's room of the main library.

All programs and events are free.

They are sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library, the Massachusetts Regional Library Systems, the State Board of Library Commissioners, Waste Management, the Massachusetts Cultural Council through the Quincy Arts Lottery grant program and a South Coastal Bank CARES grant.

For more information about summer events, call 617-376-2411 or visit thomascranelibrary.org.

Photography Exhibit Reception At Crane Library July 12

South Shore photographer Steven David Roberts' collection is currently on display in the Coletti Reading Room on the first floor of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy. A public reception will be held on Thursday, July 12 from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Roberts' collection will be on display throughout July. He uses digital photography to capture the visual sensation that surround us.

"My goal is to present images that reveal themselves the more one studies them," said Roberts who added, "I want my work to evoke an emotional response, not only the first time someone experiences it, but every time."

An active outdoorsman, Roberts is rarely without a camera and many of his images were captured while hiking, kayaking and sailing. These images may be viewed on line at www.sdimages.com

"I hope my photography never stops evolving and that every day brings new opportunities to view and capture the world from a fresh perspective," Roberts said, describing his photography as a work in progress.

QARI Offers Summer Citizenship Courses

Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI) will offer two summer citizenship courses designed to hone the English language skills of immigrants prior to taking citizenship exams.

The first, Beginning Citizenship ESOL, will be held Fridays, July 6 to Aug. 24, from 9 to 11 a.m. at Quincy Community Action Programs, 1509 Hancock St., Quincy Center. The cost is $25 for the course.

It is for members of the immigrant community with beginning English skills who are interested in improving them to meet the requirements of citizenship.

(ESOL is the acronym for English for Speakers of Other Languages.)

The second course, Citizenship: Passing the Test, will be held Tuesday, July 10 to Aug. 27, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Stop & Shop Supermarket, 65 Newport Ave., North Quincy. The cost is $25 for the course, $15 for the book.

It is for members of the immigrant community with Advanced Beginner or Advanced English language skills who have applied or soon will apply to take the citizenship exam. This course is taught in English.

Those interested in taking either of the two courses should visit the QARI office at 1509 Hancock St., Suite 209, during office hours, 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

If necessary, evening appointments can be made.

For more information, contact QARI at 617-472-2200 or visit info@qari.info.

Alexandria DePietro Joins Disney World Dance Troupe

Disney World, Florida, will have a new dancer next month when Alexandria Marie DePietro of Lakeville joins the troupe.

Alexandria, daughter of Robert and Dianne DePietro, is the granddaughter of Quincy's Vincent and Ethel (Bitsy) DeVecchio and Michael and Pauline DePietro of New Port Richey, Florida.

In a recent competition, Alexandria was crowned third runner up to Miss Dance of Rhode Island.

For the past 15 years, Alexandria has been a student of Erica's Dance Academy, Middleboro. Both Collen

USS Salem, Museum Go On Summer Hours

The USS Salem and Naval Shipbuilding Museum went on summer schedules this week, opening to the public seven days a week from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

"We have worked very hard to make the ship a fun opportunity for adults and children alike," said Michael Condon, executive director of the 716-foot heavy cruiser.

"What makes this such a nice family day trip is both the hands-on nature of the museum and the sheer scale of the ship."

The ship is set up as though it is currently in port awaiting orders to return to sea. The public address system is programmed to perpetuate the illusion.

Tours of the ship and its museums, both escorted and self-guided, are $5 per person. Discount admission is available to groups of 10 or more.

Sacred Heart School Hosts Annual Science Fair

Sacred Heart School's sixth, seventh and eighth grade students recently demonstrated their ability to apply the scientific principles they study in class to projects that interest them. For more than a month, all 92 middle school students diligently and enthusiastically worked on their entries in the school's annual science fair.

Under the direction of Miss Catherine Murphy, the middle school science teacher, the students formulated a problem, stated a hypothesis, collected data, wrote up results and presented their conclusions to their fellow students, teachers and parents.

There were several projects working with food. Molly McGlynn compared homemade baking soda and commercially prepared baking soda in cookies to see what tasted better. Tuyen Nguyen investigated how much heat is needed to melt a Hershey Kiss and Connie Ng asked which gum's flavor lasted the longest.

Quite a few projects involved plants such as Julianne Downey's report on "Do Herbs like to Dance" where she measured the growth rates of plants that were exposed to different types of music. Suki Chan investigated whether temperature affects plant growth and Kathryn Leone asked if the color of the light affected plant growth.

Other projects were more practical.

Jennifer Dunphy looked at which laundry detergent cleans the best and Brandon

Erwin looked at which brand of batteries had the longest life.

There were also projects that studied behavior. Meghan Healy explored whether the phases of the moon affect children's behavior and Manami Hamada asked does age affect taste? Amanda Brandi looked at the working memory of boys and girls and Brandon Giang studied the reaction times of lefties versus righties.

These and many other projects were very well done. The auditorium was alive with the excited voices of students demonstrating their projects. The science fair was a huge success and all the students are to be congratulated on their efforts.

TUYEN NGUYEN displays her science project at Sacred Heart School. Students in sixth, seventh and eighth grade participated in the annual fair.

Mayors Phelan, Menino Attend

WORK, Inc. Holds 42nd Awards Ceremony

Over 350 persons, including Quincy Mayor William Phelan and Boston Mayor Thomas Menino, attended the 42nd Annual WORK, Inc. Awards Ceremony held recently at the Lantana, Randolph.

WORK, Inc., one of the state's largest providers of employment training and support for individuals with disabilities, serves over 1000 persons across the state.

The annual ceremony honors individuals with disabilities who have overcome significant burdens. The ceremony also salutes employees, businesses, and government officials that support the programs.

"Our annual awards ceremony allows us to shine a spotlight on individuals whose dedication, perseverance, and commitment to achieving independence rises to extraordinary levels," explains WORK, Inc.'s president and CEO Jim Cassetta. "It also allows us to recognize the organizations and people who make our mission possible.

Cassetta noted that this year's event was particularly significant as both Boston and Quincy officials attended.

WORK, Inc. will soon have a presence in both cities, as the agency will move its headquarters to a larger, more modern facility on Freeport Street, Dorchester in the fall of 2008. At the same time, the firm will continue to maintain a strong presence in the Quincy area with at least two offices and 11 group homes.

Boston City Council President Maureen Feeney and Quincy's Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin joined with Phelan and Menino in praising the programs.

Phelan thanked the agency for being good neighbors at their North Quincy location and for their efforts helping Quincy residents. Boston's Mayor Menino welcomed WORK, Inc. to Boston and promised the city's support.

Jay McQuaide, director of Internal Communications for Blue Cross / Blue Shield served as host of the ceremonies.

Among the major highlights of the ceremony were the award presentations by the Rogers family in honor of the late Joseph Rogers, a longtime WORK, Inc. client. Rogers was tragically killed by a motorist while crossing a street in Weymouth in February, 2005.

Rogers had spent most of his life institutionalized at the Fernald School and Templeton Colony before being admitted to a WORK, Inc. group home in Quincy.

After acquiring new and independent living skills and a competitive job, he moved to his own apartment.

In 1991, Rogers was the subject of a powerful documentary made by his nephew and aired on PBS and in movie houses. The film detailed the accomplishments Rogers achieved after his release from the previous institutions, and featured segments of his life as a developmentally disabled adult who lived and worked in the everyday world.

For more than a decade,

TWO MAYORS, Quincy Mayor William Phelan and Boston Mayor Thomas Menino were among those honored recently at the 42nd Annual Awards Program of WORK, Inc. Krabby Joe's Seeks Extended Hours At Outside Deck

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The new owner of Krabby Joe's at Marina Bay has appealed to the License Board to extend the hours of operation on the outside deck to after 11 p.m.

Kristie Hendricksen, also the owner of Siro's at Marina Bay recently purchased Krabby Joe's in the spring. She told the board that conditions before she purchased it were "horrible" from patrons using the wrong rest room, to trash on the outside doorway. She said their even their fire alarms were connected to each other.

Hendricksen said she has

Painted and cleaned it up and had hoped that by owning both places, she would be allowed to serve pizza later.

She said many patrons order a pizza, then go out to the Gazebo to eat only to have her go up to them at 10:45 and tell them they have to leave.

She said she will do anything to accommodate - there are no speakers outside, no music unlike some of the establishments in the area that have music.

She said she lives at Maroia Bay and is aware of all of the issues.

She said that other restaurants only 20 feet away from her can remain open until 1 a.m.

She looked at the board and said "what can I do to make you happy and proud?"

Chairman Joseph Shea who more than once said "we appreciate your candor" read a letter from Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee who said although Hendricksen has a "favorable reputation", he was not in favor of lifting the restrictions, said it was the "location, not the management."

The board voted to take the matter under consideration, and scheduled another hearing at the July 10 board meeting.

Jay Davis To Seek Ward 4 Third Term

Avenue, Grove Street and California Avenue will also be paved."

As chairman of the Community Preservation Committee, Davis said he also worked to protect open space in Ward 4 including Turning Mill's Estate, a six-lot subdivision off Forrest Avenue.

Last summer he headed a group of educators, police personnel and community activists to start the West Quincy Teen Program. The program emphasizes sports and community service as positive activities for area teens looking things to do during the summer.

Davis has chaired the powerful Ordinance and Public Safety Committees.

"I have utilized by leadership skills to work with all of the councilors and the Mayor to pass legislation such as the Zoning Moratorium and the Code Enforcement Officer," he said.

"These two pieces of legislation directly impact the quality of life for all of the residents in our city."

"Some of the matters I expect to tackle if I am re-elected will be the development of the Crown Colony Office Park, once the connectors to and from Routes 3 and 93 are completed, the construction of a new high school and the renovation of the Sterling and Central Middle Schools."

A graduate of Syracuse University and Suffolk Law School, Davis and his wife, Honor, live with their two daughters, Madison, 9, and Megan, 6, on Shawmut Street in West Quincy.

He has been a practicing attorney in Quincy for more than 12 years and is currently managing partner in the law firm of Graeber, Davis and Cantwell, P.C.

Davis also volunteers for a number of community agencies including Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, the Quincy Public Schools Business Partnership, South Shore YMCA, Quincy Youth Soccer, Quincy Girls Softball, St. Mary's Basketball and the Beechwood Knoll PTA.

For 10 years he was a coach for Quincy Youth Baseball. He has also been a volunteer Big Brother, a pro bono (volunteer) lawyer for both DOVE, Inc., and the Volunteer Lawyers Project, and served as a councilor as well as a member of the program board for the American Legion Boys State program.

Davis will kick off his re-election campaign with a reception at Firefly's Restaurant, Adams Street, today (Thursday) from 7 to 10 p.m. Tickets are $25 per person.

Those who would like to attend the reception on are interested in helping with Davis' campaign, are asked to call him at 617-472-8722

Art-To-Go July Series At Crane Library

The creative project for the week of July 2 for youngsters in the Art-to-go series at the Thomas Crane Public Library will be "Rainsticks."

Art-to-go is a series of weekly art activities that travel to libraries throughout the city, open ended to accommodate a wide age range.

The projects are easy enough for toddlers and preschoolers to do with an adult's help and free form enough for school children to add their personal touch.

They can drop in anytime from 2 to 4 p.m. to create a project.

Supplies may be picked up at the Children's Room of the Main Library on Mondays, Adams Shore on Tuesdays, Wollaston on Wednesdays and North Quincy on Thursdays.

The project for the week of July 8 will be "Musical Bookmarks."

Registration will begin Monday, July 2, for "Cinderella, a Woodland Fairy Princess" puppet show for children 4 and older.

The show itself will take place Wednesday, July 11, at 2:30 p.m. in the Wollaston Branch Library, 41 Beale St.

Registration is limited to Quincy residents and may be made by calling 617-376-1330.

Monday, July 2, is also sign up time for the Talent Night at the Main Library Wednesday, July 11.

A Walt Disney movie marathon featuring Winnie the Pooh, Peter Pan and a couple of favorite Disney princesses will be featured at the Maine Library Thursday, July 5.

The marathon will begin at 10 a.m. with "Pooh's Grand Adventure." Between films, the kids can make a pirate hat or royal crown and show off their costumes, if they choose to wear one.

Koch Pledges New Steps To Fight Drug Problem

Mayoral candidate Tom Koch has proposed a series of initiatives, including stepped up enforcement and a new leadership role by City Hall, to address what he called a spiraling drug problem in Quincy.

In a letter to a support group for mothers of recovering addicts, Koch said that the drug problem affecting every neighborhood in the city is an issue that "begs for leadership from City Hall," and he pledged to give police the tools they need and to use the full power of the mayor's office to increase support and prevention programs.

"This is not a problem that will disappear by ignoring it," Koch said in the letter. "You should not be forced to confront the devastating affects of drug abuse on your own, and we are going to change that. It's time to acknowledge the facts and tackle this issue head-on. Our police department, community activists and non-profit agencies do a great job with the resources they have, but City Hall must play a role and provide as many tools as possible."

Koch detailed the following initiatives:

- Immediately double the size of the five-person Drug Unit by using existing resources and by giving the police the flexibility to focus resources to critical areas.

- Increase cooperation with the State Police, the MBTA police and federal agencies to tap resources not currently used in Quincy.

- Expand the role of the Community Police Unit to include drug unit operations. In addition to their regular assignments, community police officers will regularly work together with detectives on investigations, provide information, and help neighborhoods and families deal with the aftermath of drug cases.

- Use the mayor's office as the central point for a new partnership with schools, police, non-profit agencies and hospitals to increase treatment, support and prevention programs.

- Apply for grant money, hold regular community forums, and work with existing groups such as the self-formed "Parents Helping Parents" to expand outreach into neighborhoods.

Koch cited a local newspaper report that Quincy had more reported drug overdoses than the City of Brockton and a recent report by the State Department of Public Health showing that Quincy's overdose rate was significantly higher than the state average as "stark evidence" that something needs to be done.

"We need to communicate with our residents, and the mayor's office needs to lead. That's what we plan to do," Koch said. "A serious drug problem affects every person in our city in some way because it leads to so many other issues. We are going to do something about it, and the first step is simply listening to the community."

Koch said Mayor William Phelan recently refused to acknowledge that the city had a drug problem, saying instead that it was only "an issue." On the same cable program, Koch added that the mayor said "We have a real good handle on that issue in Quincy."

"From listening to people at coffee hours, at their front door, and at community event across the city, I could not disagree more," Koch said. "And the facts clearly back that up."

For more information, visit www.kochforquincy.com or call 617-773-KOCH.

NORTH QUINCY HIGH School seniors register to vote at a recent voter registration drive hosted by Quincy Asian Resources at the school. A similar drive was also held at Quincy High School.

At North Quincy And Quincy High Schools Quincy Asian Resources Registers 85 New Voters

By CHRISTINE LAM

On May 24, as the senior class of 2007 of North Quincy High School was signing out of school on their very last day, they were also stopping by the Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI) Voter Registration booth to register to vote.

Staff members at QARI, with the help of high school volunteers in the junior class, encouraged seniors to stop by the booth and complete voter registration forms.

Crowds of people gathered to take advantage of the opportunity, and before long, all the mail-in forms at the table were completely filled out. One senior said, "This is great!" as she completed her form.

More than 50 forms were completed within less than three hours.

The registration drive continued at Quincy High School (after obtaining additional forms from City Hall), also as part of Senior Sign Out day. In total, 85 completed registration forms were returned to City Hall.

By supporting voter registration, QARI hopes that more people will vote and take part in the country. By hosting Voter Registration Drives (this being the first of a number in the planning), QARI hopes to increase the number of people voting on Election Day. In particular, they will target the Asian population to increase the civic involvement of this demographic.

Voting is a privilege – and a responsibility – of each U.S. citizen. Because every vote counts, people make a difference by voting. With this in mind, one senior even asked if he could take forms home for his parents and relatives. It is never too late to register to vote!

Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

FOOT PAIN AND YOUR GOLF SWING

If your packing list for vacation includes a set of golf clubs, you may want to check with your feet first. If your feet are not in tip-top condition, they can negatively impact your golf swing – which can negatively impact your vacation. Pain in the heel of, or in the ball of the foot are the most common spots for stiff joints, nerve damage, or stretched tissue. Heel pain can make a good solid stance difficult when it is necessary for feet to be planted firmly for a swing. Arthritis pain in the big toe can make it hard to follow through on a swing, and neuroma in the heel of the foot can cause a lot of pain.

There's no question that exercise is good for you, but it can put extra demands on your body. When your feet hurt, it's all too common to accept this as due to a hard day at work or play. Healthy feet aren't supposed to hurt, and it's our job to find out why yours do. If being active is a big part of your life, consult your podiatrist about how to prevent as well as treat foot injuries and conditions. Located at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER, we can be reached at 781-986-3668. Office hours available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

P.S: The good news is that you can treat almost all the above-mentioned causes of foot pain and get your golf swing back quickly!

A Job Well Done

On Thursday, June 15, at approximately 2:15 a.m., Sgt. John Kelly was on routine patrol driving through the parking lot of the Stop & Shop parking lot on Southern Artery. Sgt. Kelly observed a Cadillac parked by the entrance, in the fire lane, with the engine running. He also saw a male standing outside the car looking all around.

As the cruiser neared, the male immediately got into the driver's seat and another male exited the store with numerous food items in his arms without a bag. Store employees came out of the store and told the man to go back inside and pay for the food, then waved to Sgt. Kelly, stating they did not need his help.

Sgt. Kelly observed the Cadillac from a distance and watched as the male who was inside the store got into the car without any food. Sgt. Kelly check the registration and learned the owner lived in Quincy and there were no warrants. The Cadillac left the area and Sgt. Kelly resumed patrol.

Fifteen minutes later, Sgt. Kelly drove by Tedeschi's Food Shop on Washington St. and observed the same Cadillac parked out front. He then took up a position where he could see inside the store through the large glass windows. Sgt. Kelly witnessed the driver of the Cadillac taken an item off the shelf and conceal it in the back of his pants, under his untucked shirt. At the register, the suspect took several items from the candy shelf and put them in his pockets when the clerk turned his back.

The suspect then paid for a sub sandwich and lottery tickets and exited the store. The suspect began walking towards his Cadillac, but turned and walked in the opposite direction when he saw the sergeant.

The suspect stopped when Sgt. Kelly instructed him to do so. When asked what was under his shirt, the suspect said, "nothing." The suspect then walked hastily towards the Cadillac and tried to get in the driver's seat, but Sgt. Kelly stopped him, then searched the suspect and found the following items on him: a large bag of beef jerky from the back of his pants, two packages of peanut butter cups and a candy bar in his right front pants pocket.

The suspect was placed under arrest for shoplifting and when Officer David Cooper arrived, he was transported to the station for booking. To solidify the case, Sgt. Kelly spoke with the clerk, who stated the suspect purchased the sub sandwich and lottery tickets. The items, valued at $10.55, were returned to the unknowing clerk.

The Cadillac was towed from the lot. Due to the diligence of Sgt. Kelly, the suspect, who was intent on shoplifting, was removed from the street. Nice Work!

H.E.L.P. works again! On Friday, June 22, at approximately 4:35 p.m., a citizen called the police to report an elderly woman appeared lost and was wandering about at the corner of Berkeley and Clarendon Streets. The citizen spoke with the woman and noticed she was wearing a gray rubber H.E.L.P. bracelet with the Quincy Police number on it.

When Officer Mark Smith arrived, he was unable to get the woman's name, but gave the description to the dispatcher, who went through H.E.L.P. files and determined the woman lived nearby. As Officer Smith drove the woman to her home, she recognized the area and thanked the officer for his help.

Elder Services was contact. The H.E.L.P. program is available to all ages who have a tendency to wander or can't recall personal information to get home safely. This free program is simple: a community police officer will come out and take a photo of the candidate, gather some information and issue a gray bracelet. This information will only be used to help in locating someone who has been reported missing.

For more information, contact Lt. Dan Minton at 617-745-5719 during the day, and Carol Flynn at 617-479-1212 at night.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Gasoline And Propane

A newly appointed lieutenant asked me a question the other day, and while thinking of my answer later on the ride home, the following incident came to mind.

When you first become an officer on a fire department, you're a firefighter one day, promoted on another and sitting in the front seat of an apparatus, taking the lead for 3 to 6 men at an incident the next. Years ago, when I first became a lieutenant, I responded to a fully involved car fire.

This incident was my first fire incident as an officer. By two-way radio I reported that we had a fully involved car fire. I then jumped off the apparatus, grabbed an axe, and continued performing the routine of a firefighter joining in on extinguishment efforts with the other two firefighters.

We quickly extinguished the fire, overhauled hot spots, I gathered the needed information for my report and cleared the scene, reporting the same over the radio. Our efforts were direct, effective and successful.

While returning to the station I reviewed my performance thinking the incident went quite well, when it occurred to me that I failed miserably. I'll never forget the impact when that thought occurred to me, "I failed miserably!"

Why? It's not enough to serve the public in these positions; you have to learn to do so mindful of firefighter safety as well. Successful emergency intervention requires the wherewithal not to become part of the problem.

How is that accomplished? It's not enough to have experience; it's not enough to be well-trained, an officer must have the ability to get the job done, while maintaining his focus on the safety and welfare of his men at the same time, once assured, then I should have joined in on extinguishment efforts. I never forgot that lesson and applied it at every incident thereafter.

So back to the question posed to me by the new lieutenant. I was asked what I thought were the riskiest occupancies to respond to within Quincy. Instantaneously, I thought of residential basements. Why?

An officer in a district has the opportunity to prefire plan all sorts of occupancies. He can visit commercial property, familiarizing himself with specific hazards located within them, or the structure itself.

As a lieutenant in suppression, if there were combustible metals located within a building, I wanted to know what type and where. If flammable or combustible liquids were present, how much was there and where specifically was it stored. I can fill the page with examples while the motivation for doing so was to prepare for whatever type of specific emergency could be faced, while that proactive effort could minimize property loss should there be an incident, help protect lives against specific hazards and protect firefighters during extinguishment efforts.

Some occupancies don't necessarily require specific prefire planning. For example, if approaching an incident, the type of business can tell you what sorts of hazards you'll typically encounter. In an auto repair garage for example where there is minimal storage, I'd be mindful of fire extending to acetylene cylinders and flammable liquids.

In a residential shed or garage, there might be stored gasoline, a propane cylinder for a grill, pesticides or fertilizer for lawn care. As an officer, these are issues that concern me and that I would convey to others as we approach a fire. Each type of occupancy has its own hazards and should be approached mindful of those hazards. So often these occupancies can be visited to develop a prefire plan, sometimes they don't have to be. So why did I instantly think a residential basement fire is so risky?

We typically have no access to residential property, while we have little input into what owners and residents store within them. Propane grills are great, but where is that cylinder being stored when not in use, or where is that extra cylinder stored? Is there gasoline in that basement? If there's a lawn, there's a lawnmower that probably runs on gasoline. Gasoline exposed to fire in a confined space can be explosive. I've witnessed it blowing the walls of a building off its foundation. A propane cylinder exposed to excessive heat can BLEVE dwarfing the effects of a gasoline explosion, affecting an entire neighborhood.

When a firefighter approaches an interior residential fire, it is typically done in zero visibility. Smoke obscures a firefighter's efforts while he blindly goes forward attempting to find the source of heat and smoke. Once found, the water from a charged hose line is applied. He has no idea what is stored within, trusting that there are ordinary combustibles and that water, turnout gear, an air supply and a team effort will see him through the extinguishment effort. But what happens in such an incident if a homeowner defies conventional wisdom and stores gasoline or propane within a basement?

Suffice to say that a city does not need a furniture factory, as was the case in South Carolina, to invite a fatal disaster. While I'm not suggesting here that we go back to the "50s" pushing manually operated lawnmowers, or wait for charcoal to heat and glow. I am asking that gasoline and propane be stored safely and correctly for all involved.

Gasoline and propane have no place stored within a residence. In fire prevention, we are here to answer any questions you may have regarding their proper storage. Thank you!

Emergency Dispensing Sites Training At City Hall July 11

Mayor William Phelan and the Quincy Health Department are continuing to recruit and train volunteers for the Region 4B Medical Reserve Corps (MRC), a cadre of trained medical and non-medical professional prepared to assist officials during an emergency.

The Quincy Health Department will host Emergency Dispensing Sites (EDS) training, Part 1: The Mechanics for Medical Reserve Corps members and the public on Wed., July 11 at 6 p.m. in the second floor conference room in Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The class will aim to teach volunteers about setting up a mass prophylaxis operation, orient attendees to the function of the different stations in an EDS site and introduce the roles required to staff the stations.

Prior to the training there will be a meeting of the Quincy Medical Reserve Corps at 5:30 p.m. to discuss the direction of the MRC unit and outline objectives and goals for the next year. The meeting is open to members of the Quincy MRC or those interested in becoming members.

The public is welcome to attend both the meeting and the training at 6 p.m.

Previous attendees of this training in other communities have had very positive experiences from this training, such as it promotes team work, and fosters an understanding of how an EDS would work as well as the roles that members of the community would fill.

"We were excited to see so much of a response from the community," said Alison Minkoff, Region 4B assistant emergency preparedness coordinator. "We're looking forward to this training and seeing more new faces."

The Quincy Health Department will also host the second half of this training, Part 2: Facilitating Clients on July 25 at 5:30 p.m. at City Hall. Attendance at the July 11 training, or completion of the course at another site is required to attend. Part 2 focuses on building an awareness of barriers that clients may experience, at an Emergency Dispensing Site and the course offers strategies to overcome these barriers.

Anyone interested in joining the MRC is invited to attend this training or contact the Quincy Health Department. You do not need to have attended an orientation to attend the July 11 or July 25 trainings.

To RSVP for either EDS training or for more information on the Medical Reserve Corps, contact Alison Minkoff at (617) 665-3702 or email Region4BMRC@challiance.org.

$95,000 Grant For 'Green' New QHS

Quincy's state legislators announced Monday that the city has been awarded a $95,000 grant for the new Quincy High School project by Massachusetts Technology Collaborative's Renewable Energy Trust—Green School Initiative.

Senator Michael Morrissey explained that the grant "will support design activities at the new high school related to high performance green design." Morrissey is Senate Chairman of the Joint Committee on Energy and has worked closely on Green School funding issues with the Trust and the Collaborative.

Reps. Ronald Mariano, Bruce Ayers, and A. Stephen Tobin joined Morrissey in announcing the grant.

"This grant award is attributed to the hard work and dedication of the City which has actively pursued green building planning for the new school's construction," said Morrissey.

According to Mariano, the MTC's approval indicates that Quincy can now apply the grant funds to the 330,400 square foot project for activities such as Green Team Support, Commissioning, and Renewable Energy System Design.

"Moving these design projects forward will help achieve the ultimate goal of certification as a Massachusetts Green School," said Ayers.

Tobin said that the funding will help the school's design team utilize wind power, solar and solar thermal as teaching tools in the classroom

Logue Launches Petition Drive To Stop Concourse Project

Councillor-at-large candidate Jennifer McCauley Logue has launched a petition drive urging city officials to abandon the controversial Quincy Center Concourse project.

The "Stop the Quincy Center Concourse!" petition posted online at <http://www.PetitionOnline.com/quincyma/petition.html>. It reads:

"On June 19, 2007, the City of Quincy, Massachusetts began demolishing downtown businesses to make way for the Quincy Center Concourse. This multi-million dollar, four-lane roadway straight through Quincy Center will eliminate parking, destroy or displace dozens of businesses and make the downtown area less pedestrian friendly.

"We the undersigned residents, taxpayers, business owners and Quincy business patrons strongly oppose this expensive and unnecessary roadway. We urge Mayor Phelan and the Quincy City Council to immediately halt any further land takings or demolitions, and to abandon this ill-conceived plan before irreparable harm is done to downtown Quincy."

Logue said she started the petition at the urging of numerous local residents.

"As I've made my way around the city, knocking on doors and speaking to groups, many people have asked me if there was a petition they could sign to voice their opposition to the Concourse project—so I started one," Logue said.

"It's time for our elected officials to stop listening to developers and start listening to the people. I urge everyone who opposes the Concourse to sign the petition to send a clear signal to City Hall that we citizens don't want to see Quincy Center destroyed simply to make way for a multimillion-dollar road we neither want nor need."

Because the concourse project will affect people who work in Quincy Center and/or patronize downtown restaurants and businesses, those who wish to sign the petition do not need to be a Quincy residents, Logue said.

"People who live in other towns but work in Quincy, or who come to our shops and restaurants also have a stake in this project," Logue said. "So they should have a right to voice their opinion on the project, too."

Citizens who wish to sign the petition may do so by going to www.PetitionOnline.com/quincyma/petition.html and submitting their name and town. A link to the petition also may be found on the home page of Logue's campaign Web site: www.logueforcouncil.com.

Logue, former executive director of Discover Quincy and the daughter of former Mayor Francis X. McCauley, is making her first run for public office. If elected, she will be the fifth woman to serve on the City Council in the city's history.

Murray explained the telecommunications tax loophole which allows such companies to cap their tax payments to local cities and towns. Murray said it was important to "close the archaic tax exemption" for the sake of taxpayers and small businesses.

"Everyone should be paying their fair share," Murray said.

As for Quincy, Phelan said the city would save over $1 million if it passes.

After the press conference, several members of I.B.E.W. Local 2222 tried to convince Phelan that rolling back the loophole was not good for business. Local 2222 serves Verizon customers.

Jack Conway & Co. Sponsors Tournament For Mainspring

Over 120 players recently enjoyed a beautiful first day of summer at the Easton Country Club and raised over $10,000 at the 23rd Annual MainSpring House Charity Open golf tournament to benefit the Homeless of Brockton.

Jack Conway & Co. Realtors has sponsored the event since its inception to bring in funds for MainSpring House in Brockton, Conway House in Middleboro, Evelyn House in Stoughton, and Montello House in Brockton, as well as satellite Coalition sites throughout southeastern Massachusetts.

"The weather couldn't have been nicer and the golfers had a fantastic time," said charity organizer Denis Lilla, vice president of sales for Conway Co.

Tom Washington, executive director of MainSpring was overwhelmed with the support. "This is an outstanding success every year, Denis and everyone at Conway does an amazing job. We are extremely grateful."

Golfers were treated to a luncheon buffet, prizes, and many sports related raffle items, which raised additional funds for MainSpring.

"We've been sponsoring this tournament for 23 years and it gets better every year," said Chairman Jack

Conway. "Everyone is here for the same reason, to raise money for this worthwhile cause and help those less fortunate."

Conway and his wife Patti helped found MainSpring in 1982 and have continued their support.

MainSpring Coalition for the Homeless currently serves 90 homeless single adults and 30 homeless families each night, 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Each year, MainSpring serves more than 1600 homeless men, women and children in southeastern Massachusetts, and is the only organization of its kind in the region.

For complete details visit www.mainspring.org, or call 1-508-427-6448.

With 45 offices from Boston to Cape Cod, Jack Conway & Co. Realtors is the largest independent real estate company in Massachusetts.

Hints For Homeowners

Lock In Pavers For Lasting Results

(NAPS) - If you're like most homeowners and concerned about improving the value and appearance of your home, here's an idea that could be a step in the right direction: putting in pavers.

Installing driveway pavers is a relatively simple way to create curb appeal and add a dramatic look to the entrance of your home. Pavers can also be used to expand your home's outdoor living space with an attractive patio, walkway or entryway.

Regardless of the application, the variety of pavers available offers plenty of possibilities in creating decorating and functional hard surfaces around the home.

To ensure your paver surface retains its beautiful appearance, you can use Quikrete PowerLoc Jointing Sand; a polymer-modified sand specially designed for sweeping into paving stone joints or replacing existing joints. Once placed and dampened, the nonstaining sand hardens to lock pavers in place, resulting in a surface that is resistant to erosion, weed growth and insects.

Here's how to do it:

- Once your forms are installed and the site is prepared, create a firm, stable base with Quikrete Patio Paver Base Sand.

- Place interlocking pavers, bricks and patio blocks into desired design on top level base.

- Next, pour the jointing sand across the entire surface of the pavers being installed.

The approximate coverage per 50-pound bag varies between 50 to 55 square feet of tumbled pavers and between 85 to 95 square feet of regular pavers, depending on joint width.

- Using a large push broom, sweep across the entire surface and into the paver joints, filling completely.

- Pack sand down into the joints with a tamping tool. For larger paving projects, the sand can also be compacted with a plate vibrator.

- Prior to dampening, remove all excess sand from the surface with a push broom or small brush.

- With a garden hose sprayer, apply a gentle fine mist across the paver surface and sanded joints.

- Repeat dampening at regular intervals (three times) for the first hour after initial wetting to ensure water reaches sand sub-base. Be careful not to overwater or flood joints.

- Protect from rain for at least eight hours. Allow surface to dry for 24 hours before light foot traffic and 48 hours before heavy use.

Home Remodeling Adds Value, Livability

Q. I don't see the point in remodeling a home. The building materials deteriorate over time, the stylish new fixtures fall out of style, and you just have to do it all over again in 10 years. You just can't rely on a home to be a good investment, in my opinion. So, why spend a ton of money on remodeling? — Franklin S., Cincinnati

A. That's a valid question. How much value is actually added to a home by remodeling work? How much money should you spend, if any?

Because certain remodeling projects can run in the tens of thousands of dollars, a little research before deciding what to improve is well worth the effort. For example, Remodeling Magazine and Bankrate.com recently published a list of the top 10 remodeling projects in 2006 and the return those projects brought when a home was sold.

Replacing a home's exterior siding with a fiber cement siding was the No. 1 project, with owners recouping 88 percent of the cost, on average. In some cities, 100 percent of the project cost was recouped when the home was sold. Minor kitchen remodels and bathroom remodels hit Nos. 4 and 5 on the list, respectively.

Remodeling is often about more than just numbers, however. Updating an old kitchen, replacing windows and doors and adding insulation can give your home a fresh look and reduce energy costs. These types of repairs can also qualify for a federal income-tax credit of up to $500, if completed before Dec. 31, 2007. More information on the credit can be found at the Alliance to Save Energy Web site (www.ase.org/taxcredits).

So, while it's important to look at possible remodeling projects with a critical eye, don't completely dismiss their value. Sometimes the financial returns aren't as important as the happiness one gets from a house that feels more livable.

Here's the Rub on Inner Thighs

Q. The part of my body that bothers me the most are my inner thighs. Despite many attempts to lose weight, my thighs still rub together, making it uncomfortable to exercise, not to mention wear shorts to the gym. What am I missing with my workouts to help eliminate the dreaded "rub" of my thighs?

A. Genetics, lifestyle choices, body composition and activity level all play a role in the size, strength and appearance of your inner thighs. Tackling inner thigh "rub" by working on factors you can control, such as exercise, is a great place to start.

These are three exercises you can add to your current program to help strengthen the muscles of your inner thighs.

1. Squats are great for your legs. Start with your feet and knees facing forward and feet shoulder-width apart. Bend your knees and sit your weight on your heels as you lower toward the ground. (Do not go down lower than 90 degrees at your knees.) Return to standing position, keeping your weight on your heels and feet and knees forward.

2. Plié squats are similar to the squats mentioned above; however, your foot position is turned out. Begin with your feet slightly wider than shoulder width and turn your feet to point outward. Line your knees up with your feet, and lower your body toward the ground. Keep your knees and feet turned and upper body upright (not bending forward) until your knees reach 90 degrees. Pressing through your heels, return to the standing position.

3. Another great exercise is side lunges, which are great for all of the muscles of your leg. Start with your legs wider than shoulder-width apart, with your feet facing forward. Keeping your feet facing forward, shift your weight to the right by bending your knee forward. Your weight should be on your right heel, and your hip, knee, ankle and foot should all be in alignment while your left leg remains straight. Bend your knee only low enough to maintain control, and then straighten the right leg to standing position. Complete the same movement on the left side.

Complete each of these exercises for 10 to 15 repetitions and one to three sets. After you master these exercises with just your body weight, you can add resistance from either dumbbells or medicine ball. Remember to maintain a strong and aligned upper body while completing these lower-body exercises.

Although there is no guarantee as to just what your body will look like, adding these three exercises to a total body exercise program along with eating properly can help you see overall results.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. Andrea Renee Wyatt, M.S.S., C.S.C.S., is a certified personal trainer with an extensive background in strength and conditioning as well as therapeutic recreation.

People With Diabetes Need More Than Sunglasses To Protect Their Eyes

BOSTON — Summer means bright sun, ultraviolet rays and of course, sunglasses. But did you know that people with diabetes need more than sunglasses to protect their eyes?

Diabetes puts people at risk for cataracts, glaucoma and diabetic retinopathy, a leading cause of vision loss. But in the majority of cases, vision can be preserved if the disease is caught early and treated.

The experts at Joslin Diabetes Center's Beetham Eye Institute offer these quick reminders to keep your eyes in great shape not only in the summer but also all through the year:

- Diabetic eye disease can be painless until it reaches very advanced stages, and the earlier you can catch it, the more likely you can preserve your sight.

- You can have perfect vision and still have diabetic eye disease.

- An annual dilated eye exam can identify eye complications early on.

- If your doctor finds early signs of diabetic eye disease, a number of treatments may be recommended, including laser eye surgery, contact lenses, glasses and medications.

- Keeping your A1C (average monthly blood glucose levels) on target, controlling blood pressure and quitting smoking also can help preserve vision and prevent vision loss.

Joslin Diabetes Center has been on the cutting edge of diabetes-related eye disease prevention and care since its inception and has set standards across the world for the treatment and care of people with diabetes. With more than 360,000 people in Massachusetts diagnosed with diabetes, and thousands more having the disease and not knowing it, there is great risk of vision loss due to diabetic retinopathy. Comprehensive eye exams on an annual basis, proper management and care of your health, and of course, your favorite pair of sunglasses are all key to seeing your eyes in a new light.

For an appointment at Joslin's Beetham Eye Institute, call (617) 732-2552.

New Massage Therapy Opens In North Quincy

Mayor William Phelan and representatives of Quincy 2000 recently attended the opening of Mary's Massage Therapy at 423A Hancock Street, North Quincy.

The company's owner, Mary Chan, said her facility offers specialized and localized massage for relief of pain in head, neck, shoulders, hip, knees, feet and post-operative pain. Personalized programs of massage and Acupuncture can be arranged.

Two specialists in Acupuncture are also available to offer the traditional Chinese treatment of disorders of the stomach and large intestine.

Chan's facility also specializes in a variety of therapeutic massages, such as Chinese, Acupressure, Thai, Hot tone, Swedish, Deep Tissue, Foot, and Lymph Drainage massages.

Chan explained that regular massages are considered part of a natural and balanced lifestyle in many Asian countries because the healing effects are not only physical, but also spiritual.

In addition, Chan pointed out that acupuncture is recognized by the World Health Organization as suitable for treating many physical conditions. The science of acupuncture is 2500 years old.

Mary Chan trained at the Guang Dong Academy of Therapeutic Massage in Canton, China, and has 20 years of applied experience in the Boston. Her colleagues, all fully licensed by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, trained at top institutions in Bangkok and Beijing.

Mary's Massage Therapy is open Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on Sundays by appointment. There is parking at the Vane Street lot off Billings Road or on the street. Call 617-773-3380 for an appointment or contact via e-mail, www.marysmassagetherapy.com.

Current rates are $45 per half hour and $80 per hour for Hot Stone and Thai Massage and $40 per half hour and $70 per hour for other massages. Acupuncture is $80 for the first visit and $70 for follow-up visits.

Itchy and Scratchy

Itchy, red swollen bumps on the skin are an all-too-familiar summer sign that bugs — and bug bites — are flourishing.

That annoying itch may be a good sign, however.

"Itchy is normal. Tender is not," when it comes to bug bites, said Dr. Robin Carder, assistant professor of dermatology and pediatrics at UT Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas. Tenderness, she cautioned, may be a sign the bug bite is becoming infected and deserves more medical attention.

"It is normal for a bug bite to be a little red or swollen, and it may even blister," Dr. Carder said. "But the lesion should be more itchy than sore. If it becomes tender, that may be a sign of infection."

Common insect bites such as mosquitoes and chiggers are relatively easy to treat with over-the-counter remedies.

"Antihistamines like Benadryl (either the oral or the topical form) can be very effective in relieving the itch and decreasing the swelling, or hive-like response," Dr.

Carder said. Topical steroids, such as hydrocortisone, also work well. Both can be found in touch sticks that can make it easier to target the affected area.

It's especially hard to keep children from infecting itchy bites with their repeated scratching, but Ken Haller, M.D., associate professor of pediatrics at Saint Louis University, has a suggestion: Dab a bit of roll-on antiperspirant directly on the bug bite, and the itching will stop.

"The aluminum salts in the antiperspirant help the body to reabsorb the fluid in the bug bite," Dr. Haller said. "The swelling goes down and the itching goes away."

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

TOOTH-COLORED FILLINGS

Not only are the silver-colored fillings known as amalgams unattractive, they are outdated. A category of tooth-colored fillings, known as composite resin dental fillings, utilize plastic resin to fill cavities. Composites were once used only on front teeth due to insufficient load strength. However, in recent years, the strength and durability of composites has been improved to the point where they are suitable restorations in the back teeth. In addition, composites may be used to improve aesthetic appearance of the teeth in terms of both shape and color. Composite has the advantage of closely matching the shade/color of natural teeth. The material also bonds with the tooth structure to support teeth and insulate them from temperature change. Now, no matter how many cavities you have filled, your smile can appear unblemished and brilliant. To find out if tooth-colored fillings are a good option for you, please contact us. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Help is available through cosmetic dentistry. You will feel more confident when you can freely smile whenever you want. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where you'll find that our staff is knowledgeable, friendly, and accommodating. We're confident that you will be pleased with our professionalism and high standards. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. The preparation for composite resin fillings requires the removal of less tooth structure than is necessary with an amalgam filling.

Quincy Shuts Down Morrisette, 6-0

LEGION BASEBALL

By DOMENIC POLI

Saturday night's Fourth of July fireworks display in Weymouth persuaded Morrisette and Quincy Legion to move their game from 8 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Both teams' coaches knew the festivities, which began at 9:30, would distract their players and they agreed to start the game early.

The time change sat well with Quincy manager Dan Sweeney and coach Sean Sullivan.

"It's not a bad thing to have a day game once in a while. We have enough night games," Sullivan said.

The matchup between the city's two teams remained gridlocked until the bottom of the third.

Quincy Post 95 finally drew first blood when it scored two runs thanks to some sloppy play by the Morrisette middle infielders.

With the bases loaded, a ground ball to shortstop allowed the first Quincy Post 95 run to come in through the back door. A bad throw to first by the second baseman after a flip from the shortstop brought in the second run.

stroled to the batter's box. Conley scorched a ball into center and Kiley raced around third for home. Conley got to second on the relay to the plate and an over-throw allowed him to slide safely into third.

The next batter, Jay Lewis, was then struck by a pitch to load the bases.

And that's when Steve Kussman comes in.

Kussman pounded a pitch to the left field fence. The basepaths became a merry-go-round as everyone raced for the plate. By the time the play ended, Quincy Post 95 had made it a 6-0 game.

Morrisette tried to get something going in the top of the seventh.

John Orlando hit a ball up the middle that the second baseman played to his right — but the throw was too late at first. Ricky Salvucci was next up, and he knocked a single between the third baseman and shortstop.

Mike Joyce then flew out to center and Orlando was able to take third on a tag-up.

Morrisette, down 6-0 with runners on first and third with one out, was trying to make some magic happen, but 6-4-3 double play hit by Steve Sullivan squashed all hopes of that.

It was a perfect representation of how things had worked out for Morrisette the whole game.

"We didn't hit. That's the whole story — we couldn't hit," Morrisette manager Ray Cattaneo said. "We played a decent game out there, got a good pitching job, we just didn't hit."

"The defense played well," he added. "The only thing that hurt us was making that [attempted] double play. We had it made if it was a good throw. They wouldn't have scored that inning and it might have been a different game."

Quincy Post 95 will host Milton Post this Friday at Adams Field, while Morrisette plays at Weymouth on Sunday.

Wollaston Blue, Wollaston Red Teams Finish Week 4-0

Senior Babe Ruth

The following are results for the two Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth (16-18 year olds) teams, which play in the Senior Babe Ruth circuit:

Wollaston Blue 11 Boston Broncos 9

Eric Moreschi was the winning pitcher as the Wollaston Blue defeated the Western Division-leading Boston Broncos by an 11-9 score.

Danny Myers came on in relief to earn his first save of the season.

Brendan Carnell, who is batting .550 on the season and Moreschi who each finished the game with two hits paced the offensive attack. Dave Regan, Matt Edgerly (.444 average) and Joe Edgerly each contributed with two RBI apiece.

Right fielder Paul Oldham threw out a runner at the plate in the six inning and Steve McGarty made a game-saving catch with the tying runs on base in the top of the seventh inning.

Wollaston Blue 11 Westwood 6

Matt Edgerly pitched a complete-game against Westwood for his second victory of the season.

The offensive was led by M. Edgerly (two hits, two RBI), Rob DeAngelis (two hits, two RBI), Dave Regan (three runs, two hits), Joe Edgerly (two RBI), Dan Munkley (two RBI), Brendan Carnell (two runs), Dave Griffin (RBI/. 555 avg.), Danny Myers (RBI) and Eric Moreschi (RBI).

Wollaston Red 8 Hingham 2

In the first of two wins over Hingham, Wollaston

Red's Paul Doolan earned the win on the mound. Eric Anglehart finished the game in relief.

Steve Matos, Jonathan Glennon and Sean Naughton all finished the game with two hits to lead the offensive attack.

The team played error-free baseball in the win.

Wollaston Red 3 Hingham 2

Matt Jaehning's complete-game gem helped lead Wollaston Red to its second straight victory over Hingham.

Jaehning helped his own cause with a RBI and Joe Griffin laid down a perfect suicide squeeze to score Steve Matos with the team's third and final run.

Dan O'Connell, Sean Naughton, Matos and John Sullivan all played excellent defense.

Two Wollaston Baseball Teams Playing In New 16-Year Old Prep League

Wollaston has two teams playing in the newly organized 16-year-old Prep Baseball League.

The two teams, Wollaston Morrisette and Wollaston Black, recently squared off against each other in league play with Wollaston Morrisette besting Wollaston Black 16-6.

Alex Tragellis (3-0) pitched a complete game for Wollaston Morrisette to earn his third victory of the season.

Kevin Magoon and John

Sullivan each finished the game with three hits and three RBI to pace the Wollaston Morrisette offensive attack. Ryan Stifler chipped in with two hits and three RBI.

Danny Jackson (triple/two runs), Brian McLean (two hits/two runs) and Sean Naughton (hit/two runs) all had big offensive games for Wollaston Black.

17-Year-Old Woodward School Graduate Selected To Bermuda National Women's Soccer Team Soccer Sensation Jasmin Johansen Goes International

By SEAN BRENNAN

Jasmin Johansen, the best student-athlete to ever take the field for The Woodward School for Girls' varsity soccer team, has gone international.

Johansen, 17, who finished her illustrious high school career with a school record 104 goals, 64 assists and 168 total points-numbers that dwarf all other scoring stats in the school's 112-year history, has been selected as a member of the Bermuda national women's soccer team.

Johansen, whose father, William "Jerry" Johansen captained Bermuda's North Village Football Club when he was younger, was invited down to tryout for the national team last month. She quickly caught the eye of national team coaches Vance Brown and Jeremy Salaam, and when all was said and done, Johansen made the team.

"In January, The Royal Gazette (Bermuda's national newspaper) contacted me and wanted to do a story about my soccer career at Woodward and about me breaking all the records," Johansen said last week. "The national team and coaches read that story and called me to see if I would come down and tryout for the team. I did and I made the team."

Johansen's skill set and goal-scoring abilities allowed her to stand out amongst the 50 to 60 other women who were at the national team tryouts. The team itself is made up mostly of women in their 20s, many who play competitive soccer at American universities and colleges, but even though she may be young, Johansen's talents earned her a spot on the team.

"The tryouts were very challenging," she added, "but I showed up in shape and even though I am one of the youngest players on the team, I did well and I earned my spot. Most of the national team players play over here (U.S.) in college, but I am the only person from the Boston area on the team."

Johansen, who was eligible to tryout for the Bermuda national team because her parents, William and Jerilyn are Bermudan, will get her first taste of international competition beginning this week.

She joined her new team in New York last week, before flying over to Greece to play in the Small Islands Games in Rhodes. The team is scheduled to play against Guernsey and the Western Islands in the first round.

"I've been training up here in Mattapan with my dad and a trainer since the tryouts," Johansen said. "We have been focusing on doing some of the same drills that were incorporated at the tryouts."

"The level of soccer at the national level is obviously different than the play up here at Woodward. When I played in high school, I could blow by people and score at will, what I am working on now is improving my one-touches and working hard at thinking on my feet instead of just going hard every time I have the ball."

Johansen, played at the right wing forward position in high school, but will be asked to play back at the midfield position on the national team. With this change in position, Johansen's responsibilities will grow, and like everything else she does on the field; this change should only drive her to adjust and to get better.

"They have me mostly at midfield-forward," she said. "In high school I scored most of my goals on breakaways, but now it is more strategy, passing and working more as a team. It about working as a unit, but the main objective for me is always to score goals."

With her summer commitment to the Bermuda national team taking up most of her time, Johansen will use this experience to get herself ready for the next phase of her soccer and educational career.

In the fall, she will enter Spelman College (Atlanta, GA). At Division III Spelman, Johansen will be playing soccer, but even more exciting for her, she will begin her long-awaited college experience.

"I am playing soccer and I was thinking about pursuing a Business degree, but I think it is best if I go undecided," Johansen said. "I want to tryout and do a lot of different things in regards to courses and my studies. But with soccer, I am expecting to see a lot of playing time. I am just excited and ready to go."

One person who is going to miss Johansen; and not just for her uncanny ability to score goals at will on the soccer field, but also for the attitude she brought to Woodward every morning, will be her high school coach, Bob Giordano.

"Jasmin is so humble, but she also has this strong inner strength about her that just became infectious to everyone she played with and met during her time here at The Woodward School for Girls," he said. "A big part of her life and who she is comes from her parents, William and Jeri. Her mother is so sweet and was a big part of Jasmin's education and really was her backbone when it came to school. But I have to give Jasmin all the credit for the way she handled herself here at school."

"She won't say anything, but being an 'outsider' at those national team tryouts (Johansen is the only team member not to be born in Bermuda) was not an easy thing to overcome. But give her credit, she stuck with it and eventually fit in perfectly with the rest of the team. It is all about the game and being a part of something great that makes her tick and makes her so special. We all know that she is going to do really well in the future."

Before she graduated from The Woodward School for Girls last month, Johansen had her number five soccer jersey retired, framed and hung on the school's "Wall of Honor." The ceremony closed the door on her time at the school, but it also marked the beginning of a new phase in her life.

"I am ready to experience everything that comes to me over the next four years at Spelman," Johansen proudly added, "and I am excited about this opportunity to play the game I love for the Bermuda national team. Who knows where it will take me, so I am going to just enjoy every moment."

Quincy Merchants Softball League Season Underway

The Quincy Merchants Softball League recently began play in its 35th season. Eight local teams make up the league, which was formed back in 1973.

This year, the defending league champions Hofbrau, go up against teams from Malachy's, Kilroy's, The Water Club, The Holy Ground, The UPS Store, Boston Cigar Factory and The Shocker's.

The games are played at several locations throughout Quincy, with games "under the lights" at Kincaide Park on Tuesday's and Friday's. Each team plays 21 games with the playoffs starting at the end of July.

The Quincy Merchants Softball features modified fast pitch to provide a challenging and fun game for players and fans alike. Anyone interested in joining the league for next year may call Billy Scannell, league president, at (617) 633-9226.

The following are the league standings as of June 29:

1. Hofbrau: 12-0
2. Kilroy's: 11-2
3. Malachy's: 9-4

Do your gardening chores early in the day, and drink plenty of water. If you leave on vacation, have someone check on your garden. Container plants can't go many days without water. Have someone check on your vegetable garden and harvest as needed, if left to rot on the vine, disease and insects can quickly take over.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Be prepared to face some challenges stirred up by an envious colleague. Your best defense is the Arian's innate honesty. Stick with the truth, and you'll come out ahead.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your sensitivity to the needs of others is admirable. But be careful to avoid those who would take unfair advantage of your good nature, especially where money is involved.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Having an optimistic attitude is fine, as far as it goes. But don't be lulled into a false sense of confidence. There are still problems to deal with before you can totally relax.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might feel somewhat "crabby," as you fuss over plans that don't seem to work out. Maybe you're trying too hard. Ease up and let things happen without forcing them.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Heed that keen Leonine instinct. It's trying to tell you to delay making a decision until you're sure there are no hidden problems that could cause trouble later on.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a good time to reach out to those who might be nursing hurt feelings over recent events. Best advice: Ignore any pettiness that could delay the healing process.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your understanding helps a colleague get through a difficult period. Although you didn't do it for a reward, be assured that your actions will be repaid down the line.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You score some high marks in the workplace, which will count in your favor when you face the possibility of changing direction on your current career path.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your goal lies straight ahead. Stay focused on it and avoid distractions that could throw off your aim and cause potentially detrimental delays.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Keep that burst of exuberance in check and resist pushing through your new project before it's ready. In your personal life, a family member again needs help.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Paying attention to your work is important this week. But so are your relationships with those special people in your life. Make time for them as well.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Good news: Someone is about to repay a long-standing debt. But be warned. That same someone could try to charm you into lending it back unless you say no and mean it.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are sensitive to matters that involve your home and family. You would make a fine social worker or family-court judge.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It has been said that courtesy is one of the most important factors of true love. Too often we tend to forget this. Too often we are careless toward those whom we love best and polite toward those for whom we care little or nothing. . . True and abiding love is divine, but to keep it so we must observe its ritual. We dare not take those we love for granted. Love must be kept in repair.

The ancient Greeks had six different works to express love, four of them towards persons; the love of physical attraction, the love of friends; the love of children and parents; and finally, the highest form, spiritual love. This last is the word used by St. Paul in describing the ideal love for home and family relations. . . Yes, courtesy is love's habit. . .

Perhaps if one were allowed to add one small Beatitude as a footnote to the others, it might be this: Blessed are the courteous. . .

Quincy Officers Trained To Deal With Autism

Four Quincy police officers recently participated in an Autism and Law Enforcement Education Coalition (ALEC) training session held on the growing problem of autism spectrum disorder.

Officers James Dentremon, Jack Keenan, Matt Miller and Declan Breslin took the course offered by District Attorney William Keating and the Family Autism Center of South Norfolk County ARC.

"We get so many calls involving autistic persons that we are considering setting up an in-service training program for all policemen," said Lt. Charles Santoro, the Quincy police training officer.

Keating praised Chief Robert Crowley and his Quincy police for their support of the ALEC educational program.

"Law enforcement officials are recognizing the need to give the officers on the street the tools they need to deal with any situation, including children and adults with autism," he said.

The Center for Disease Control estimates one out of every 150 children will be diagnosed with autism. People with autism are seven times more likely to have encounters with the law than other people.

ALEC, which is funded through the State Department of Mental Retardation' Division of Autism, provides police officers, firefighters and other emergency personnel with the tools needed to respond to such situations.

Along with videos and lectures, training sessions include presentations by public safety officials with autistic family members to offer a personal aspect of the condition.

Norwood Police Sgt. Martin Baker, the lead trainer for police officers, recalled incidents in his career when he encountered individuals on the autism spectrum and was unsure how to handle the situation.

Now the parent of a child with autism, he has answered many service calls involving individuals with autism and has trained hundreds of fellow officers on ALEC's behalf.

"The training has received an overwhelming response from police officers," said Baker. "Many have commented that they had been in situations we describe but had not been certain how best to proceed."

The goals of the training is to give police officers a level of confidence that, when they have a situation involving someone with autism, they will know what it is and deal with it appropriately."

Request Items Be Removed From Graves

The board of managers of Public Burial Places has requested that all items be removed from grave sites in the city's cemeteries.

The sole exception will be planted flowers.

"This will ensure that our cemeteries will be properly maintained and safe for our workers and visitors," said Board Chairman Richard T. Sweeney Jr.

Squantum Christian Fellowship Participating In Worldwide Missions Project

Squantum Christian Fellowship will be involved in a worldwide missions project called Operation Kid-to-Kid.

For this project, children attending Avalanche Ranch vacation Bible school will provide soft Prayer Bears and copies of 'The Survivor's Bible' for orphans in Africa.

Operation Kid-to-Kid will show kids that with Jesus' help, they can impact their world. The Prayer Bears will be shipped to International Bible Society, who will distribute them to orphans in Central and South Africa.

Because of children's generosity, Operation Kid-to-Kid has grown to become one of the world's largest global outreaches of children serving children.

Past programs have allowed more than a million children in North America to send hundreds of thousands of hygiene items, Spanish Bible materials, blankets, and shoes and socks to children around the world.

For more information about Operation Kid-to-Kid, visit www.ok2k.org.

Operation Kid-to-Kid is one part of Avalanche Ranch which runs daily from July 16-20 at Squantum Christian Fellowship. Children age 3-11 are invited to attend. The week includes crafts, games, snacks and fun music.

For more information, call Helen at 617-328-8771 or visit www.squantumcf.org.

'Neighborhood First' Projects Making Progress

Mayor William Phelan and his "Neighborhood First" teams said that progress continues on many of the projects developed by local Neighborhoods First Committees.

In Adams Shore, crews are busy completing beautification of O'Hara Circle. New flowerbeds have been added at the neighborhood centerpiece. Old shrubs will be removed and new shrubs will be added.

In South Quincy, the memorial on Taber Street has been improved with two new large flowerbeds. Older invasive shrubs will be removed in the coming weeks.

The intersection at Hancock Street and Furnace Brook Parkway is getting a major aesthetic facelift with new plantings installed on the DCR land at the intersection. A high-profile intersection, the site will be home to new flowerbeds and plantings with help from professional landscapers Foye and Letendre.

In Wollaston, a new fence surrounds Sailors' Home Pond and a new aerator is on the way to this neighborhood treasure.

In Houghs Neck, Merrymount and Squantum, road and sidewalk work continues. Sidewalks will be repaired in every neighborhood in Quincy this summer.

"We are directly responding to the needs of the neighborhoods," said Phelan. "Our neighborhood committee helped identify our priorities and we are working hard throughout the summer to improve each and every neighborhood in Quincy."

Buildings And Equipment To Be Upgraded $3 Million Bond For Capital Improvements

Mayor William Phelan noted that the City Council unanimously approved his second year plan for capital improvements to municipal buildings and equipment.

The $3 million bond will allow the city to make much needed repairs to city buildings and replace aging trucks and equipment.

"We are systematically investing in the capital needs of our city, ensuring that we address our current issues and plan for our future," said Phelan.

"The pavement management plan has given us a model of success in how to manage our limited resources and our goal is to plan wisely, invest the taxpayers money properly and avoid reactionary financial responses."

The current approval will allow the city to:

- Repair the roof at the Atlantic Middle School.
- Repair the roof at the Broad Meadows Middle School.
- Purchase two new Council on Aging vans.
- Purchase two new street sweepers for the DPW.
- Purchase utility trucks for the Park Department's daily operations.
- Invest $200,000 in upgrades to fire stations.
- Improve rest rooms at Fore River Clubhouse.
- Improve communication and security programs at schools.
- Purchase a new bucket truck for the Fire Alarm Repair Division.
- Add new lighting to Veterans' Stadium.
- Make repairs to the roof at City Hall.

This is the second year of Phelan's Capital Improvement Plan. The mayor intends to introduce a Capital Improvement Plan each year with the operating budget of the city to ensure that the long-term capital needs of city government are addressed in a systematic fashion.

"There is no shortage of needs, our buildings and fleets had been neglected during the strong economic times and now we must play catchup," Phelan said.

"If we simply develop a plan that we can financially sustain over time, we can avoid spending more money in building repairs in the future."

"A little preventive repair and maintenance can go a long way toward avoiding larger costs in the future."

New Rake In Action At City Beaches

Mayor William Phelan and Park Commissioner Mark Jaehnig announce that the City's new beach rake has been busy raking and cleaning Quincy's municipal beaches for the summer months.

The beach rake was purchased with bond money from the Mayor's Natural Resource Investment Initiative. The source of the funds was the city's hotel/motel tax fund.

"Our beaches are neighborhood, waterfront parks that more and more residents are realizing," said Phelan. "They are great places to bring the family, relax or play, and enjoy the beautiful natural treasures we have here in Quincy."

The beach rake was out last week at Avalon Beach, Mound Street Beach, Edgewater Drive Beach, and Perry Beach. It will continue this week at beaches in Merrymount, Squantum and Germantown.

"We have made a commitment to keeping our beaches clean. This will not be the last time our sand rake cleans our beaches," said Jaehnig.

Seek Medical Gear To Loan

The Council on Aging is seeking donations of medical equipment that is no longer needed by the current owner but can be loaned to someone else.

The present highest priority is given to bath transfer seats.

Mayor Asks License Board Switch To Afternoon Hours

Mayor William Phelan has requested the License Board to switch its meeting time from mid-morning to late afternoon to make it equally convenient for both residents and businesses.

In a letter to License Board Chairman Joseph Shea, the mayor called the current 10 a.m. Tuesday morning meetings "favorable to businesses and an impediment to public participation."

He asked a change to 4 p.m. so that both would have an equal opportunity to attend.

"The current time of the meeting prevents many people from attending and/or participating in the license board hearings," said Phelan.

"I have heard from many people who wish this change to happen so that they have the same opportunity that the business community has to participate in the process.

"It's merely a matter of evening the playing field so the board has a better balance of input from our neighborhoods.

"It could also make it easier for city councillors to advocate for their constituents.

"The decisions made by the License Board can have lasting impacts on a neighborhood.

"I don't know many residents that are home at 10 a.m. I think the current time schedule is a detriment to many people and I hope the board considers the change in the interest of public participation."

$1 Million, $250,000 Tickets Sold Here

Quincy Sweepstakes Winners Still Unknown

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Quincy's two Star Spangled ticket winners hadn't come forward by this week's Quincy Sun deadline, but two small business owners can still celebrate.

The Star Spangled Sweepstakes was a new venture for the Massachusetts

State Lottery which offered a $20 million Grand Prize to one ticket winner and a total of 50 other large prizes. The drawing was held on July 4 and each ticket cost $20.

No one in the city won the $20 million grand prize but winning tickets were sold at two local stores. Each owner is paid a commission on the total prize by the Massachusetts State Lottery.

A winning ticket for one million dollars was sold at Bernie's General Store on Sea Street and a $250,000 ticket was sold at Sabina's Market on Beale Street.

'Major Milestone' Says Phelan

$30M Downtown Renewal Plan Gets State Green Light

Mayor William Phelan's $30 million plan to revitalize downtown Quincy, cooking on the front burner for the past four years, has been approved by the State Department of Housing and Community Development.

The Department found finances for the Quincy Center District Urban Revitalization and Development Plan (URDP) to be sound, the 55-acre project area to be decadent and the plan itself to be sufficiently complete.

"The project area would not be private enterprise alone and without either government subsidy or the exercise of governmental powers be made available for urban renewal," said Undersecretary Tina Brooks.

"The proposed land uses and building requirements in the project area will afford maximum opportunity for privately financed urban renewal consistent with the sound needs of the city of Quincy as a whole."

The plan "will stimulate the creation of 400 or more housing units, including affordable housing, and add 660-900 jobs downtown," she said in a letter to Phelan, who first advanced the plan in January, 2003.

Phelan called state approval "another major milestone achieved... an important step in realizing the three-decade-old goal of bringing life back into the downtown."

He first proposed the URDP in his mid-term address in January, 2003.

"For too long," he said, "the residential taxpayers have carried the underperformance of the downtown and its lagging commercial tax base.

"We are seeing a reversal of that trend... and our redevelopment efforts will result in a dramatic turnaround.

"We are nearing a point where we could see hundreds of millions of private dollars invested in our downtown."

The plan anticipates landtaking of private property by eminent domain and a relocation plan that must still be approved by the State Bureau of Relocation prior to the start of any business relocation activities.

The area to be developed runs roughly from the MBTA Station on the north to Hancock Court on the south and from Burgin Parkway on the west to Mechanic Street-Revere Road-Dennis Ryan Parkway-Washington Street on the east.

The URDP is designed to attract residential and commercial development... producing a mixed use center that will provide shopping, housing, services and entertainment in an area that, fifty years ago, was known as "Shoppers Town USA."

The development plan calls for the sale of the city-owned John Hancock Parking Area and the Ross Parking Garage for private development of first class retail, housing, office space and parking.

Jo-Ann Bragg Seeks Return To School Committee

Former School Committee member Jo-Ann Bragg took out nomination papers Tuesday to return to that board.

"I am running for the seat Linda Stice is leaving and not running against the two incumbents up for re-election," she said.

Bragg said she will make an official announcement next week.

A top vote-getter in past school committee elections, she was first elected in 1994 and served three four-year terms, including two years as vice-chairman.

She left the school committee in 2003 to make an unsuccessful bid for city council at-large.

Bragg's entrance brings the school committee field to six candidates so far.

Two are incumbents Elaine Dwyer, present vice-chairman, and David McCarthy.

The other candidates with papers in circulation are Nicholas Puleo, Eileen Mullen, and Stan Underwood.

Krabby Joe's Hours Extended To 1 A.M.

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

On a 3 to 2 vote Tuesday, the License Board lifted the restrictions given to Kristie Henriksen, owner of Krabby Joe's at Marina Bay, allowing her to remain until 1 a.m. instead of 11 p.m.

Voting against it was Chairman Joseph Shea and Jay Duca, director of inspection services. They both wanted the closing time to be 12 midnight as suggested by Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee.

Henriksen, who also owns Siro's Restaurant located beside Krabby Joe's said "I want to please the residents" and added that after 13 years of owning Siro's, "I feel I have proved myself."

She said she has no outside speakers, no entertainment, and no music. She said she had renovated the place and had a wall installed so that residents could not hear any noise.

Only one abutter spoke against the closing of 1 a.m. saying Henriksen should have known the restrictions before she purchased Krabby Joe's.

One resident, Andrew Purrillo said he was a long time resident of Marina Bay said he had "full recognition of what would happen, and that he has never been disturbed."

Another supporter, Bob Constantino said that since Henriksen purchased Krabby Joe's, it appeals to a different crowd, and how she has transformed the area.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said Krabby Joe's is attracting a more mature crowd, and that Henriksen doesn't deserve to have the same restrictions put on former owners.

He suggested closing time to be 12 midnight.

After the long discussions, Dean Rizzo, of Quincy 2000 spoke in favor of lifting the restrictions saying the board should "keep the playing field the same." (other businesses in the area close at 1 a.m.)

Maralin Manning, director of the Quincy Business Association, said that although she didn't represent Marina Bay, she was representing "businesses in general." She said that "Henriksen should 'unilaterally have the same hours as all other businesses in the area.'" Her statement drew applause from the audience.

Ritz Motel Demolished, Site Use To Be Studied

The Ritz Motel at 84 Hancock Street was demolished last week nearly a half century after it first opened and nearly a year after its last long term or short term rental.

According to Richard Meade of Daniel J. Flynn Real Estate, his firm plans to hold neighborhood meetings to consider possible uses for the property. At this point, there are no "specific plans for redevelopment," he said.

"We're not sure what we're going to propose," Meade said this week, adding that neighborhood input will be important. "We'll meet with the neighbors."

Meade, also, said that his company had planned to demolish the old motel structure even without city officials' recent encouragement.

The building had become a nuisance and a threat to "public safety," Meade said.

Flynn Real Estate purchased the motel and land early this year. It is zoned Residence C and can be used for retail, business or residences.

Not only the building but some of the patrons of the Ritz Motel had become something of a nuisance and the Ritz' last hurrah actually arrived nearly a year ago after visits by Quincy police.

Mayor Wants Traffic Detail At Neponset Bridge

Mayor William Phelan wants the return of the State Police traffic detail to the Neponset Circle, at the foot of the Neponset Bridge.

Phelan requested in a letter to Gov. Deval Patrick that the detail be assigned for the morning commute while the bridge is under reconstruction in the coming years.

"For many years, the State Police helped traffic flow off the bridge," said Phelan. "That service was discontinued and now with the new construction, we are beginning to see the reemer-gence of traffic snarls on the bridge and into Quincy. We need an officer to help our commuters and to keep air quality in the area from deteriorating."

Phelan pointed out that the idea to restore the police detail came from a neighborhood meeting.

"Many great ideas arise from residents at our community meetings," he said. "My administration prides itself on a close working relationship with the community and I want to thank the citizens who offered this suggestion. We are planning a new schedule of meetings for August and September to continue to work closely with our neighborhoods and our residents."

Bush No John Quincy Adams

John Quincy Adams and George W. Bush have one thing in common.

They followed their fathers into the White House; the only sons in history to do so.

But similarity, I think, stops there.

I got to thinking about them as the sixth President's 240th birthday approached Wednesday, and with it the traditional Presidential wreath from the White House which was placed on his tomb in the crypt of United First Parish Church.

Adams, I believe, would have known enough to stay out of a hellhole like Iraq.

Adams was better prepared for the White House and especially foreign affairs, having served as U.S. minister to the Netherlands, Portugal, Russia and Great Britain, secretary of state and U.S. senator before being selected President in 1824. He later served with distinction as a Congressman.

History regards him as one of the greatest diplomats ever—a far cry from Bush's cowboy diplomacy.

Adams today probably would have taken a diplomatic approach to the Iraq situation and gone to war, as a last resort—if war was really needed.

I don't know how history will treat Bush but it can't overlook the Iraq war, which many see as "Bush's Blunder."

He seemed gung-ho to get us there.

On March 19, 2003 he issued orders to attack and in his address to the American people focused on Saddam Hussein as a villain and a world threat. A villain he was but a world threat is questionable.

"Our nation enters this conflict reluctantly, yet our purpose is sure," he said. "The people of the United States and our friends and allies will not live at the mercy of an outlaw regime that threatens the peace with weapons of mass murder."

Those weapons, of course, were never found.

Interestingly, in that speech, he never mentioned the words terrorist or terrorism.

HOUGH'S NECK FIRE STATION, Quincy, Mass.

THIS IS A 1907 real photo postcard view of the old Houghs Neck fire station just after it was built on the corner of Manet Avenue and Sea Street. This building cost $5,000 and it replaced an old shack that had been moved down from Wollaston. It was the new home to Hose Company No. 5, which was equipped with a new horse-drawn combination hose and chemical wagon with four ladders. In charge was Captain W.H. Taylor shown here with his Steward and two call men and their dog. The electric trolley tracks coming from Manet Avenue onto Sea Street can be seen under the horses. The present fire station on this site was built in 1947. Highlight of the festivities will be the selection and crowning of Miss Quincy Bay Friday evening.

$25,000 REHABILITATION PROGRAM FOR SOUTHWEST AREA

A comprehensive community rehabilitation program will get underway shortly in the Water St-Southwest Quincy area; it was announced by the Department of Planning and Community Development.

Estimated costs were pegged at $25,000, including federal funds from the Community Development Block Grant and the Housing Rehabilitation Loan Program. Planning Director Lars N. Lundin said the immediate objective of the program will be to correct those conditions, which exist in the neighborhood, which endanger the health and safety of the residents.

READERS FORUM

Opposed To Proposed Track At Pageant Field

I am writing to voice my opposition to the proposed track at Pageant Field.

This beautiful area is one of our most precious open spaces enjoyed by myriad groups - families, sports teams, dog owners, and the like on a daily basis. The beauty of this space is reflected in the abundant plant life, marsh and seascape.

For the past four years I've been taking my dog there for walks on the trails and field. Dog owners who use the park have worked hard the past few years to maintain the cleanliness of the park and educate newcomers to the need to keep the area clean.

We all recognize and appreciate the importance of this space from a historical and cultural viewpoint so would like to see preserved as is.

Regarding the track project, this beautiful spot shouldn't be sullied by a track which would be utilized by a small number of people. The cutting of some of the oldest and most beautiful trees and relocation of the boathouse, not to mention the water runoff and impact of construction created by the track will ruin the area.

In his recent newsletter (Ward 5) Councillor (Doug) Gutro cited that the Adams family has given "conditional" approval to this project.

To my knowledge there aren't any Adams descendants even living in Quincy at this time. We all appreciate and revere the contributions of Quincy's "first family" but should their influence trump the wishes of those of us who live in, work in, and support this city with our taxes.

I think not.

I don't believe the cost of one million dollars (and we know it will probably be more) to build this track is financially prudent given there are currently many unfinished projects in this city. The WWII War Memorial on Hancock Street and the adjacent "Formal Gardens", started under the previous mayor's term, stand incomplete as an ever present eyesore. Especially on a windy day when the piles of dirt kick up dust clouds. It's become a sad symbol of the city's level of neglect to projects like this.

Before we spend money on new projects let's finish the old ones first.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Free Summer Concerts Start July 15 At Crane Library

Bring a chair or a blanket and "Catch the Beat" this month when free summer concerts get underway on Sunday afternoons on the grounds of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The concerts, which begin at 3 p.m. and last an hour, will be held in library's atrium if the weather is inclement.

On July 15, "Jumpin' Juba" will feature boogie piano player Bruce Ward and blues guitarist/vocalist Steve Hurl performing their repertoire which ranges from New Orleans blues to boogie-woogie to 50's rock and beyond.

On July 22, the New England Percussion Ensemble will offer a unique program that takes the audience from the sounds of ancient times to the modern, from the days of skin-covered hollow logs to today's plastic tubes and trash bags.

On July 29, "The Remnants" will present a variety of folk, country, blue grass and gospel music by combining vocal harmonies with solid instrumental performances.

All concerts are free and are sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library. For more information, call 617-376-1301 or visit thomascranelibrary.org.

Music-Related Movies At Library Begin July 12

In July and August, the Thomas Crane Library will present a free series of music-related movies on Thursday nights as part of this year's summer reading theme "Catch the Beat."

All movies begin at 7 p.m. at the Main Library, 40 Washington Street, Quincy and are sponsored by the Friends of Thomas Crane Public Library. For more information, call 617-376-1301.

The program begins July 12 with "Sweet and Lowdown," a 1999 tribute to jazz guitarist Emmet Ray played by Sean Penn. PG-13

On July 19, three silent films will be presented during the Silent Movie Show. Master pianist Richard Hughes will provide both the musical and historic background for these black and white films which are suitable for all ages from 6 to 106.

through performance in this film which earned her the 2006 academy award for Best Supporting Actress. PG-13

The August calendar begins with "Coal Miner's Daughter" on August 9. This film, starring Academy Award winner Sissy Spacek, relates the true story of country music star Loretta Lynn. PG

On August 23, "Masked and Anonymous," the 2003 film describing a civil war tearing the country apart will feature Jeff Bridges, Penelope Cruz, John Goodman, Jessica Lange and Luke Williams. PG-13

Maria Perry Worldwide Contest Winner

Singing With Boston Pops

'Dream Come True' For Quincy Native

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Quincy native Maria Perry is singing a lot of happy songs these days, as she is the 2007 Grand Champion of PopSearch.

Just last week, half a million people applauded her when she sang "Not While I'm Around" on the Esplanade with conductor Keith Lockhart and the Boston Pops Orchestra on July 4.

Perry was center stage on Independence Day because she'd won a worldwide performance contest sponsored by the Boston Pops. She was chosen number one after competing with hundreds of other singers in live concerts and Internet performances throughout the spring.

Ahead is a five-day August tour with the Boston Pops and likely more dates for the 51-year-old singer who grew up in Wollaston and graduated from St. Ann's School, North Quincy, and Fontbonne Academy, Milton. She then studied at Boston Conservatory of Music.

Perry, who now lives in Kansas City, Missouri City, hadn't sung for 10 years until this spring when her brother, Bob Perry of Milton, urged her to enter the PopSearch 2007 contest.

"My brother sent me an e-mail. He told me about the competition," Perry said in a telephone interview with The Quincy Sun from Kansas City this week. "Sometimes, you have to challenge yourself and go for it."

Perry credits her husband, John Stock, for getting her performance of "I'll Be Seeing You," on YouTube, the Internet site, for the early

MARIA PERRY sings with Boston Pops on the Esplanade during the Fourth of July Celebration

May screening of contestants and voting by viewers.

"My husband knows computers. He was able to get it up and running," Perry said, recalling that that first Internet competition narrowed the field to 16. Stock, a native of Kansas City, is a project manager and business analyst.

From early May through the end of June, there were grueling competitions with hundreds of singers in Boston and over the net. Perry topped them all and was named PopSearch champion on June 29.

On May 20, Perry was chosen as a quarter finalist. The Boston Pops flew her to Boston where she and 15 other contestants competed in Symphony Hall before a live audience and three judges.

The 16 individual performances were once again put on the Internet for online voting so anyone, anywhere in the world, could vote. At this point, the live audience and the judges at Symphony Hall also weighed in on the decision.

"A lot of people in Quincy voted for me," Perry said of the online support.

Throughout June, the voting continued online as the field was cut to six contestants and then, three. One of the most exciting days for Perry was June 28 when she sang in Symphony Hall before a live audience with the full orchestra as back-up.

And the rest is history. The following day, the winner was announced.

"It was incredible. It was a dream come true," Perry said this week during her first days back home in Kansas City after a week with family and friends in the Boston area.

"I ended up seeing so many people. My family threw me a party," She said, recalling the celebrations on the South Shore. "I was able to catch up with my family which was great. Then, friends and family, also, celebrated in Kansas City."

As the contest continued, Perry got support from friends and former schoolmates from the South Shore. She got e-mails from old friends with whom she'd lost touch. "A lot of people I knew 30 years ago. People I'd sung with."

"They supported me every step of the way. I'm so lucky to have such support. Such an outpouring," Perry said.

As a teenager, Perry sang at weddings and services and choirs and then, in her twenties, in Boston clubs. She has so many favorite songs in her repertoire that she sings country, Western, vocal for bands, and cabaret songs. "I love so many genres of music."

As for her talent, it comes from her family.

"Everybody in my family is very artistic," she said. Her mother Edie Perry was a music teacher and vice-principal of St. Ann's School. "I grew up with music. It was everywhere."

Perry's mother now lives in Milton with her brother Bob. She, also, has three sisters. Diane lives near San Francisco; Suzanne in Chelsea and Donna in Beverly.

In recent years, Perry worked in business but recently became a certified ZUMBA instructor as a way of keeping music in her work. The new ZUMBA aerobics regime is based on Latin dance music.

As for her roots in Quincy, Perry well remembers Wollaston Beach and she and her husband return frequently for family visits.

Her home now is Kansas City where they have lived for the better part of a decade.

"Right now, it where our home is. It's charming and it's lovely and my husband's family is here." She said, adding, "We do go back and forth a lot."

A Job Well Done

On Wednesday, June 6, at approximately 10:30 a.m., Detective/Lieutenant Richard McCusker met with his detectives to set up a sting on a suspect involved in stolen credit cards. He informed them the Quincy Police Department received information from the loss prevention manager at Neiman Marcus in Boston that credit card information on many clients were stolen from one of their stores in Las Vegas and all stores were notified.

The manager stated a woman called the jewelry department and placed an order for a Tahitian pearl necklace, valued at $7,500. She gave her name and account number, adding she wanted the necklace shipped to a college roommate living in Quincy.

Neiman Marcus Loss Prevention recognized the name of the college roommate and the address because this was the second telephone order placed by someone on the stolen list and shipped to the same female suspect in Quincy. When the order for the Tahitian pearl was not shipped, the female suspect called to find out why.

She was told that there was a problem with the account. The female suspect said she accidentally gave her maiden name and then gave another stolen card name (with the same first name) and number.

Loss Prevention was aware of the second attempt and allowed the sale to go through with the intent on catching the suspect. The suspect again called inquiring where her necklace was and was told there was an error on the shipping address.

Lt. McCusker and Detectives Dennis Maloney and Jason MacIsaac went to Federal Express in Randolph to intercept the package and create a plan to catch the suspect(s). Detective MacIsaac was provided a Federal Express uniform, delivery forms and the package from Neiman Marcus.

Using an unmarked white van, Detective MacIsaac pulled up to the Fayette Street address and rang the bell with clipboard and package in hand. A female answered the door and confirmed she was the person as the name on the package. Once she signed for the package, Detective Lt. McCusker, Det. Maloney and Officer Tom Pepjonovic came to the door and asked the suspect if they could come in to talk to her.

The suspect/resident was advised about the investigation and she denied any involvement, but did state that she just arrived in Massachusetts after being in Las Vegas last week. The suspect was advised that she could face criminal charges, but she continued to deny any involvement.

Other people in the apartment were the suspect's sister and the suspect's ex-husband. It was soon learned the suspect had two warrants in California and one in Quincy. She was placed under arrest and transported to the station for booking.

The detectives asked the residents if they could search the apartment and they consented. They checked the area around the computer and found a pile of "customer special order forms from Neiman Marcus in a trash barrel torn in pieces. On the papers were the names of the credit card victims and orders placed under their names.

Permission was given to access the computer and additional information was obtained showing that the computer was used to place orders. More importantly, there was an email showing that the suspect, with actual maiden name, had travel plans to leave for Vietnam on July 15th.

Loss Prevention was notified of the successful ending. They said that they would forward a videotape of the suspect in the Las Vegas store to help prosecute her. They also stated that the suspect was the focus of an ongoing investigation involving a compromised customers American Express account, with $20,000. worth of unauthorized gift cards.

The suspect, a 23 year old transient, was charged with "Larceny over $250, Identity Fraud, Attempting to Commit a Crime and Receiving Stolen Property under $250, for the stolen customer order forms from the Las Vegas store.

David McCarthy To Seek Second School Term

David McCarthy has announced his candidacy for a second term on the School Committee, his announcement drawing more than 250 people to a kickoff fundraiser at the Sons of Italy Social Center.

"The next few years are very critical to the Quincy education landscape," he said.

"The major projects that will be ongoing will impact the city, strengthening the school system that is already moving forward.

"As new programs, projects, and facilities are orchestrated in Quincy, stability is needed to ensure success.

"I promise to work very hard to ensure the students capitalize on every opportunity available."

McCarthy joined the School Committee in 2004 and was named chair of the Health, Safety and Security subcommittee where he distinguished himself as an advocate of security and safety in the public schools.

He instituted citywide security procedures, lobbied for additional security personnel and implemented the popular "School Messenger" system, broadening communications with high and middle school parents.

He worked with the superintendent on a new health curriculum for middle schools, assisted high school principals in reimplementing

DAVID MCCARTHY

ID badges and coordinated new alarm systems for both high schools.

McCarthy has been a member of the Building Needs subcommittee, playing a pivotal role in the new Quincy High School and has made the upkeep and maintenance of all the schools a priority.

"We should look like a winner and act like a winner because Quincy's schools are attaining that superb caliber of results citywide," he said.

As an advocate of Special Needs, he has been a member of the Special Education subcommittee since the start of the School Committee membership.

"The Special Education community is very close to my heart, as three of my children are in the program," he said. "They and other Special Education students rely on the therapies and resources to compete in today's world.

"Quincy does a superb job working with these families in trying to get the resources they need. This special group of children are wonderful and I will never forget them and work as hard as I can to get what families need."

McCarthy has also championed the QPS Children's Development Center on Old Colony Avenue, which is used to keep Quincy kids close to home while getting the professional services they need.

He has spearheaded the popular "Friends of QPS Music," an organization formed to oversee and comment on the schools' citywide music program.

As chair of the Budget and Finance subcommittee, he has made it a point to work closely with the administration and superintendent to review all options and keep the financial landscape of the schools healthy.

"The finances of the city are in order and have been in order during the current administration's tenure," he said. "If those finances are in order, then the schools' budget will be in order."

"The management of the budget is the key to a balanced productive school system and we manage our expenses very well."

Beechwood Offering Senior Cooling Center

Beechwood on the Bay has come through with an answer to global warming. Well, the local aspect of it, anyway.

Beechwood is offering a "senior cooling center," a place where Quincy's seniors, who are at risk when ever the temperature soars, can go to cool off.

"Air conditioning is the number one protective factor against heat-related illness and death," says the State Department of Health and Human Services.

People can reduce their risk for heat-related illness by spending time in air-conditioned homes and centers like the one at Beechwood.

"Our drop-in center is cool and welcoming. Quincy seniors are invited to stop by to participate in some or all of our summer activities," says Maryann Mahoney, coordinator of Beechwood's Senior Center.

Other suggestions for combating the heat include frequent drinking of water or non-alcoholic fluids, wearing, lightweight, light-colored, loose-fitting clothes and eliminating strenuous activities.

Periodically checking on neighbors who do not have air-conditioning is recommended. By knowing who is at risk and what preventive measures to take, heat-related illness or death can be prevented.

Beechwood is open from 7:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday and until 9 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday. Cooling Center hours can be checked by calling Maryann at 617-471-5712.

The also calls for creation of new public open space, including the Adams Green Project, to provide improved access to three historic landmarks — United First Parish Church, Hancock Cemetery and Old City Hall.

The revival of Quincy Center has been the dream of city officials for the past 35 years, starting with the Quincy Center Development Plan advanced in 1973, which fell afoul of antiquated zoning laws.

Davis Re-election Reception July 26

Ward 4 Councilor Jay Davis will kick off his reelection campaign at a reception Thursday, July 26 from 7 to 10 p.m. at Firefly's Restaurant, Adams Street.

Vincent R. Moscardelli, 69

Realtor, Former Principal Of Central Junior High School

A funeral Mass for Vincent R. Moscardelli, 69, of Braintree, a Realtor and former principal of Central Middle School, will be celebrated Friday at 11:30 a.m. in the Church of Saint Clare, 1244 Liberty St., Braintree.

Mr. Moscardelli died Sunday at Quincy Medical Center after a long illness.

Born in Weymouth, he was raised in Quincy and attended Quincy schools. He was a 1955 graduate of Quincy High School and a 1960 graduate of Boston University. He later received his master's degree in education from the former Boston State University.

Mr. Moscardelli was an outstanding athlete in high school, playing football, baseball and basketball. He was inducted into the Quincy High School Baseball and Football Halls of Fame.

He also was a recipient of the Munroe MacLean Award for Quincy High Basketball.

Mr. Moscardelli was honored earlier this year as a co-recipient of The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year Award for his longtime community service.

He had lived in Quincy before moving to Braintree 40 years ago.

He served in the U.S. Army Reserves.

Mr. Moscardelli was employed in the Quincy Public School system for 20 years, including 12 years as principal of Central Junior High School. He retired in 1982.

He was also a Realtor and in 1987 he founded Central Real Estate with two locations in Quincy, 128 McGrath Highway and 339 Hancock St.

In 1996 Mr. Moscardelli received the South Shore Realtor of the Year Award. He served on the Board of Directors for Greater Boston MDA, ERA Boston Broker Council, South Shore Association of Realtors and the Quincy Lions Club.

Active in community affairs, he received numerous awards including the 2003 Clifford H. Marshall "Attitude is Everything" Award, the 1999 Campbell Award for Community Service and the "Jerry" Award for fundraising for the Muscular Dystrophy Association for 7 years. He sponsored and coordinated a golf tournament for many years.

Mr. Moscardelli was a member and past president of the ERA Broker Council and past president of the Quincy Education Association.

He was a member of the Massachusetts Association of Realtors, National Association of Realtors, Plymouth and South Shore Association of Realtors, the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, Quincy Business Association, Quincy Retired Teachers Association, Quincy Retirement Association, Massachusetts Teachers Association and the National Education Association.

He was also a member of the Quincy Lions Club.

Mr. Moscardelli enjoyed golfing, fishing and gardening.

Husband of the late Mary Leah (Fitzsimmons) Moscardelli, he is survived by two daughters, Merilee Moscardelli-Trenholm of Braintree and Suzanne Hegarty of Braintree; his mother, Nancy (Belcastro) Moscardelli-Burke of Quincy; a brother, Francis G. Moscardelli of Lebanon, Tenn.; two granddaughters and many nieces, nephews and cousins.

Burial will be in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Visiting hours are today (Thursday) from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m. at the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Cites Security Concern

Phelan Asks MBTA For Anti-Graffiti Barrier At Neponset Bridge

A permanent barrier to prevent graffiti spray painting of the train bridge over the Neponset River, is sought by Mayor William Phelan.

Phelan, in a letter to MBTA General Manager Dan Grabauskas, thanked the MBTA for their past work in removing the graffiti but said a permanent barrier would prevent vandals from further spray-painting.

"This is a most visible location and a main entrance to our city," said Phelan. "The MBTA has responded to requests to remove the graffiti but I think its best we spend our resources in solving the problem instead of responding to it. Mr. Grabauskas is a good manager and I am confident that we can work toward a solution to this blight."

The MBTA had removed a large graffiti problem on the bridge in the past months. Shortly after the old graffiti was removed, new graffiti appeared.

"Aside from being an aesthetic nuisance, it would strike me as a security concern that anyone can simply access the bridge," said Phelan. "Thousands of commuters cross this bridge every morning and I think improving the security to the bridge is a valuable and necessary idea. I ask that the MBTA work toward finding a permanent solution to the security problem."

No Hot Dog Stand In Front Of City Hall

There won't be a hot dog stand in front of City Hall after all.

The License Board Tuesday voted against Scott Palmer's idea to put a mobile concession selling New England's Original Franks To Go, at McIntyre Mall in front of City Hall.

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele read an report based on a peddler's ordinance stating that no food can be sold within 100 feet from a park or playground. Scheele said concessions can be done on a temporary basis such as flag day or other special events.

Palmer said the city of Quincy is "bustling" and that his type of concession would "attract tourists."

He said although some people refer to the concession as a "hot dog stand" he refers to it as "a business."

Chairman Joseph Shea said there was once a concession at that space, but the ordinance at the time was not clear. He said the board had to choose, and added he "feels bad for Scott."

Friends Of Wollaston Beach Meet Tonight

The Friends of Wollaston Beach will meet tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. in the Juniors Room on the first floor of the Squantum Yacht Club.

Volunteers will be assigned for the Beach Volleyball Challenge scheduled for Sunday, July 29, and plans for the "Wolly Walk" Saturday, Aug. 18, will be finalized.

Team registration for the Beach Volleyball Challenge is ongoing and slots are being filled on a first come, first served basis.

For more details, call Karen at Tony's Clam Shop at 617-773-5090 or Ward 5 City Councillor Doug Gutro at 617-328-7982 or visit www.wollastonbeach.org.

Eileen Mullen Candidate For School Committee

Eileen Mullen of 17 Trafford St. announces her candidacy for the school committee.

"As a Quincy resident and proud parent of two Quincy public school students, I pay close attention to educational issues in our city," she said.

"Now that Linda Stice has resigned and left an open seat, I wish to do what I can to continue to keep our schools strong and safe."

Mrs. Mullen was unanimously endorsed on June 25 by the Norfolk Central Labor Council AFL-CIO. She has pledged support to seek background checks for those performing work on or near schools as well as advocating for Project Labor Agreements.

EILEEN MULLEN

A graduate of Aquinas College in Milton and the College of Management/UMass Boston she also holds a Masters Degree in Education in Program Development from Eastern Nazarene College.

She has represented Ward 4, Precinct 5 as a Quincy delegate to the state Democratic Convention, citywide as a parent liaison to the school committee and a former president of QPAC.

Mrs. Mullen is self employed as an educational advocate and tutor and is the former owner/operator of Delightful Days Family Daycare in Quincy.

"I bring business and educational skills and qualifications to the School Committee and will work diligently on behalf of children so that each child in our school system can reach their full potential for learning," she said.

Her campaign kick-off will be held Thursday, July 19, from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Sons of Italy Social Center, 120 Quarry St.

AREA LEGISLATORS recently welcomed members from the Plymouth and South Shore Association of Realtors® to the State House for Realtor® Day on Beacon Hill. The group from PASS attended several events during the day, including a legislative briefing, a luncheon with the legislators and a photo in front of The Grand Staircase. PASS is the second largest Realtor® association in Massachusetts covering 18 communities in the Commonwealth. Legislators shown with members from PASS in the front row are (from left) Rep. Robert Nyman, Sen. Michael Morrissey; Peter Ruffini, president of PASS; Rep. Frank Hynes, Sen. Robert Hedlund, Rep. Viriato deMacedo and Richard Coughlin, PASS Realtors® Political Involvement Committee chairperson.

Neighborhood Housing Homebuyer Workshop

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in conjunction with the Brockton Housing Partnership, will host a first-time Homebuyer Workshop Monday, July 16 from 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturday, July 21 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The workshop is open to Massachusetts residents, regardless of income. It will be held at Re/Max Landmark, 630 Park St., Stoughton.

Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive a homebuying certificate. All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend the educational workshop.

At the workshop, participants will have the opportunity to speak with a lender. Topics covered include mortgage options, legal aspects of the home buying process, how a home inspection works, and other presentations from related professionals.

Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs. There is a $15 fee per person. Call (617) 770-2227 ext. 29.

'Home Doctor'

How Does Your Home Stand Up To Bad Weather?

(NAPS) - The Home Doctor offers answers to commonly asked questions.

Q. A recent hailstorm did extensive damage to the siding on my house, and I need to replace it. What are my best options for durable siding that will stand up to bad weather, while still offering me the broad style and color selections I want?

A. When severe storm patterns pop up on the weather map, the last thing homeowners want to think about is the damage that storms could cause to the exterior of their homes. Storms can create fierce wind gusts that can cause objects to dent siding and even tear it off completely.

In the past, homeowners had very few options for weather-resistant siding with good visual appeal. According to Realtor Magazine, new siding can cost up to $6,000 for the average-sized home, so why shouldn't homeowners get the best of both worlds for that amount of money? Fortunately, durable siding is now available that is pleasing to the eye and warranted to last for many years.

I recommend choosing a vinyl or polymer siding. These materials maintain their integrity for years, and the upkeep is minimal. At worst, you will occasionally need to wash dirt off the siding with an average garden hose. They are very low maintenance.

One good option is Monogram 46 vinyl siding from CertainTeed Corporation. The 46 means the material is .046" thick, so it has increased strength and impact resistance. It is also designed to withstand wind-loaded pressure up to 222 miles per hour and features the wisest color selection of any siding, making style choices endless.

So the next time severe weather storms threaten your town, know that your siding can stand out and stand up to whatever is blown its way.

To learn more about this and other CertainTeed products, call (800) 782-8777.

Hints for Owners

Termites: The Silent Destroyer

(NAPS) - While you're relaxing in your backyard or at the park enjoying the onset of warm weather, be aware that intruders could be quietly invading your home. These trespassers can sneak past any locked doors or watchdogs, and are almost too small to spot—they are termites.

Termites, which can live in colonies of up to several thousand, have proven to be one of homeowners' greatest adversaries. Battling termites can be a pain for you, your family and your wallet. These pests have been around for more than 250 million years and can be divided into two groups: those that live entirely in wood (drywood) and those that tunnel underground (subterranean), making proper identification and treatment essential.

"A termite queen can lay several hundred eggs a day," notes Paul Hardy, senior technical director for Orkin, Inc. "Termites' abilities to reproduce so quickly and enter houses undetected make them a formidable pest for homeowners."

Termites never sleep and are stealthy, silent invaders. Any house or building can be vulnerable to termite attacks. Whether your home is stucco, brick or wood, once termites enter, they work day and night and eat anything made of cellulose, including plants, cotton and wood. Watch out for these signs of an infestation:

- Wood that sounds hollow when tapped.
- Pencil-sized mud tubes on exterior walls.
- Distorted, cracked or bubbling areas of paint on wood surfaces.
- Swarms of winged insects.
- Discarded wings of "swarmers."

With the ability to adapt easily to changing environments, termites are a problem nationwide—no one is safe from a termite invasion without proper preventive tips to protect your home against these relentless soldiers:

- Seal any places that termites might enter, including small cracks and crevices. Termites can enter building through cracks as small as 1/32 of an inch.
- Termites love to swarm around sources of food, water and moisture, including tree stumps and roots, mulch, firewood and leaves. Remove the accumulation of water and wood sources around the exterior of your home.
- Keep gutters and downspouts clear, and trim siding or stucco to at least two inches above soil level.
- Contact a pest professional at the first sign of an infestation.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Journal Shows Commitment

Q. My friend recently met with a personal trainer after joining a new fitness center, and she was asked to begin keeping a daily lifestyle log. The log is supposed to keep track of her nutrition and other activities throughout the day. After a week she is supposed to turn in the log so she can discuss it with her trainer. Would keeping a lifestyle log benefit me? I'm trying to become healthy and lose a little weight.

A. Maintaining a journal or lifestyle log is a very effective way to stay committed to your fitness goals and to have a written account tracking the process. Although not a new concept, the traditional food log can be modified to include exercise, activities and other components necessary to a healthy lifestyle.

Many fitness professionals are asking clients to keep logs so they can get a snapshot of what is happening with their clients when they're not meeting with them, and to better help them develop realistic goals. Most people meet with a trainer or fitness professional only a few times a week, leaving plenty of unknown lifestyle habits.

Developing or maintaining a healthy lifestyle includes factors not often realized. The traditional nutrition logs/journals include monitoring eating habits by keeping track of calories, portion sizes and fluid intake. Lifestyle logs also include daily exercise completed, hours of sleep per day, activities outside of organized exercise — such as playing with your children or walking the dog — and levels of perceived stress.

Noting on a scale of 1 to 10 how well you feel with each lifestyle component is also helpful. For example, if you only got five hours of sleep, you would note whether you felt well-rested, fatigued or tired throughout the day.

After keeping a log for a few days of normal activity, the results can be used to help make changes to your current nutritional and lifestyle routines to help you reach your goals. You might be amazed at how just a few tweaks can make a major difference. You can also keep past logs as a guideline for you to see what worked and what did not work for you.

When keeping a log of your daily activities, it is most important to be honest. Withholding information is only going to keep you from reaching your goals. Lifestyle logs can also be used to hold yourself accountable. Knowing you will have to write down a poor lifestyle choice might make you think twice before doing it.

Whether you are meeting with a fitness professional or managing your own fitness program, keeping a lifestyle log can be an extremely useful tool, and might be the missing link in developing a healthy lifestyle.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters@wfs.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Traveler Alert: Get Immunizations Before Your Trip

(NAPS) — Are you thinking of a sunny getaway to the Caribbean, Africa or South America? As you plan any trip, it is easy to think of only the exciting attractions, the fine dining, the sun-drenched beaches and the escape from the daily grind. Yet, you should also think of getting vaccines that will help protect you from diseases that may be common at your destination.

Twinrix [Hepatitis A Vaccine (Inactivated) and Hepatitis B (Recombinant) Vaccine] is the only hepatitis A and hepatitis B combination vaccine available in the United States. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has approved an accelerated dosing schedule using Twinrix, which consists of three doses given within three weeks, followed by a booster dose at 12 months.

According to travel medicine specialist Bradley

A. Connor, M.D., Past President, International Society of Travel Medicine, "This new vaccine dosing schedule will be helpful for last-minute adult travelers who are going to areas that are known to be at intermediate to high risk for both hepatitis A and hepatitis B viruses."

Hepatitis A and/or hepatitis B viruses are common in many areas throughout the world such as Africa, Asia, South America and parts of the Caribbean. In fact, hepatitis A is one of the most common vaccine-preventable diseases encountered by travelers. Both hepatitis A and hepatitis B infections cause serious diseases of the liver. Severe infections can cause serious illness and even death. Vaccination is recommended for people at risk of infection who are traveling to areas where hepatitis A and hepatitis B viruses are common.

"Hepatitis A and hepatitis B are serious liver diseases which can be prevented through vaccination," says Dr. Connor. "Twinrix's new accelerated dosing schedule offers an option that could benefit individuals such as those preparing to travel internationally to high-risk areas."

Preventing Dangerous Infections

Hepatitis A is commonly spread by close personal contact and by eating food or drinking water contaminated with the hepatitis A virus. Hepatitis B is commonly transmitted through infected blood or bodily fluids.

"People at risk of exposure to these viruses should talk to their doctor about taking steps to protect themselves including getting vaccinated," urges Dr. Connor.

About Twinrix

Twinrix is indicated for immunization against hepatitis A and hepatitis B viruses in persons 18 years of age and older.

As with all prescription medications, please talk with your healthcare provider to see if Twinrix is right for you.

In clinical trials with Twinrix, the most common side effects included pain and redness at the injection site, headache and tiredness. These effects were mild and did not last more than 48 hours. (See Adverse Reactions section of the Prescribing Information for Twinrix for other potential side effects.) As with any vaccine, there is a small risk of allergic reactions. If you notice any problems following vaccination or if you are allergic to any component of the vaccine such as neomycin, yeast or latex, please inform your healthcare provider.

For more information, call (888) 825-5249.

Keeping Pets Healthy During Hot Weather

By MARTHA M. SMITH, DVM

(Boston, MA) — With the lazy days of summer upon us, don't forget what the transition to warmer weather means for your family's pet.

Longer days, more travel and increased physical activity can really take a toll on your cat or dog. However, you can alleviate a lot of stress and offset any potential health problems by adopting these simple guidelines:

- Never leave your dog in the car even with the windows cracked. Although it may seem cool outside, the temperature inside your car can easily as high as 150 degrees in matter of minutes. If you're planning to run a few errands, it's best to leave the pets at home.

- Be sure to check the water level in your pet's bowl regularly, and plan on bringing extra bottled water for your dog or cat when traveling away from home.

- Make a point of keeping your pet on a leash to ensure that they don't get lost and/or ingest anything that could make them sick.

- If your pet has light skin or hair, apply sunscreen to the animal's ears and nose and allow them to rest in a shady spot regularly.

- Hot weather may encourage pets to drink from puddles, so be sure that your driveway and yard are free of any potential toxins. After a heavy rain, fertilizer, weed killer and other common lawn chemicals can contaminate puddles, and antifreeze poses specific hazards due to its sweet taste. Even small doses of these chemicals can be fatal. Puddles can also contain deadly bacteria called leptospirosis.

- Check your pet for insect stings and bites. Typically the affected area will be swollen, but take note of any other symptoms and monitor them. If the animal seems especially uncomfortable or if the swelling is excessive, consult your veterinarian to ensure that your pet isn't having an allergic reaction.

- Be sure to keep your pet current on a flea and tick preventative and apply it monthly. Products obtained through your veterinarian work best and will help reduce the risk of tick borne diseases such as Lyme disease.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

A GROWING POSSIBILITY

If recent research provides any indication, it may someday be possible to grow new tooth enamel from cultured cells. This breakthrough would enable dentists to produce tissue that could be used to replace damaged or missing enamel. Ordinarily, tooth enamel cannot regenerate because it is formed by a layer of cells that is lost by the time the tooth makes its appearance in the mouth. As part of the new research, scientists found that developing epithelial cells continued to proliferate when the cells were cultured on top of special "feed" layers of cells. When these epithelial cells were mixed with cells from the middle of the tooth (dental mesenchymal cells) and placed on miniature "scaffolds," enamel-like tissue formed after four weeks.

This informative column on "growing possibilities" has been brought to you as a public service. The combinations of the latest advances in dental technology and our focus on continuing education allow us to offer you the high level of care you're looking for. When you come to our office, you will find our office relaxing and our staff warm and friendly — we treat our patients like family. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where you will find an unsurpassed level of dedication and professionalism. We continually seek to make sure that your journey to a new smile is stress-free and comfortable. For more information or to schedule an appointment, please call us at 617-479-6220. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydent.com.

P.S. Currently, one of the best ways for the dentist to replace missing enamel on worn or damaged teeth is to use a bonding procedure that involves coating the tooth surface with a coat (or coats) of plastic resin.

Food And Nutrition Myth Busters

By MINDY HERMANN,
R.D.

(NAPS) — It is easy to find out almost anything about food and nutrition on the Internet; unfortunately, the information is not always accurate. Here are a few common food and nutrition myths and truths:

Myth: Avoid vegetables because they may be contaminated.

Truth: "Vegetables and fruits are essential elements of a healthy diet. Use proper food handling and cleaning techniques and rinse all your vegetables and fruits in running water," advises Dr. Werner. Remember to rinse melons and other produce with skin or rinds to prevent contamination from bacteria on the skin.

Myth: Milk allergies are very common.

Truth: "Many people mistakenly think that the bloating and gas of lactose intolerance is an allergy. Lactose intolerance is more common and occurs when the body does not produce enough lactase, an enzyme needed to digest milk," says Ellen Mandel, P.A.-C, R.D., C.D.E., an assistant professor at Seton Hall University in New Jersey. "People who cannot tolerate lactose often can eat low-fat varieties of yogurt and cheese as a source of calcium." Finding alternative sources of calcium may also be helpful, such as Whole Grain Total, Total Raisin Bran and Total Honey Clusters, which are high in calcium.

Myth: Sugar makes people hyperactive.

Truth: "Research does not show a link between sugar and hyperactivity in adults or children," advises Judy Dodd, M.S., R.D., L.D.N., an Adjunct Assistant Professor at the University of Pittsburgh. "Nonetheless, foods high in sugar but low in nutrition contribute empty calories and should not take the place of healthy foods."

Myth: Food eaten in the evening turns to body fat.

Truth: "Too many calories eaten over the course of a day or week will turn into fat, regardless of the time of day," says Dodd. "Many people are in the habit of snacking after dinner and may not realize how quickly those calories add up."

Myth: High-carbohydrate foods are fattening and should be limited when trying to lose weight.

Truth: Many high-carbohydrate foods—bread, pasta, cereals and fruits—are low in fat and relatively low in calories. For smart weight loss, eat fewer calories, include all food groups and increase physical activity.

Morrisette Leaves Holbrook In A Haze, 3-0

By DOMENIC POLI

Haze put an early cap on Morrisette's Monday night game against Holbrook as players were unable to see the ball due the thick fog, forcing umpires to call the game in the bottom of the sixth.

Morrisette (7-7-1) won the abbreviated matchup 3-0. The winning pitcher was Joe Garland.

The bottom of the third was when Morrisette got its offense pumping.

The inning's first batter, Morrisette catcher Matt Rodriguez, pounded a double to left field. After Rodriguez moved to third on the ground out back to the pitcher by second baseman Glen Misho, Carberry legged out a single to shortstop and would soon seal second base. Ricky Salvucci would walk two batters later, setting the table for Johnny Orlando.

Orlando's rocket that one-hopped the left field fence put a quarter in Morrisette's merry-go-round, as the basepaths cleared and three runs came around to score.

"He got the big hits. I think he's our top hitter," Morrisette manager Ray Cattaneo said after the game. "And he's playing a good shortstop."

Connelly then grounded out to short to end the inning. Adam's Field's dimensions provided a little excitement for both teams in the top of fourth.

First, Vega started things off by scorching a line drive right past Garland head, into center field. Then, Doherty walked on four pitches.

That's when things got interesting.

On a passed ball, Vega and Doherty raced to advance to the next base. The backstop's thick, bouncy padding, however, deflected the ball right into the hands of catcher Matt Rodriguez.

LEGION BASEBALL

Trying to get the runners to go back to where they started, Rodriguez fired the ball to Connelly at first. Connelly then threw it over to Salvucci at third. Salvucci then chased Vega all the way up to second base and tagged him out, ousting the lead runner from the field.

Doherty, however, managed to take second in the long, dizzying play.

Nothing would amount from the fourth inning, as McSweeney struck out swinging and Rudin was retired by a full-extension diving catch by Vialpando in center.

The game remained fairly quiet until the top of the fifth, when Garland ran into a little trouble.

He could not seem to find his control and walked the inning's first three batters. After a brief mound meeting with his coach, Garland gathered his composure and retired the next three hitters in order. He got Merrigan to pop out to Connelly in foul territory, struck out Campbell swinging and got Vega to ground out to third to dig himself out of a jam.

"This is what we worry about with Joe because he doesn't pitch that much and if he starts walking them, he can get pretty wild," Cattaneo said. "But he came out of it. He got the next three batters [with] no problem. That was it. That was the game right there."

In the bottom of the fifth, Vialpando began things by hitting a soft liner that was caught by a first baseman. Salvucci then single to left, but was caught stealing by Holbrook catcher Richie Ring. A great tag by second baseman John Micicche sent Salvucci back to the dugout.

Orlando then grounded out to short to end the inning.

After a scoreless top of the sixth, Connelly got up in the bottom half and reached on an error by Doherty at short.

That is where the umpires called a timeout. Haze had been building up rapidly in the outfield throughout the entire game and they were concerned that the players would be unable to see the ball both in the outfield and at the plate. So, they decided to try to wait it out. After several minutes, the field umpire took Cattaneo and Holbrook's head coach into left field and had Morrisette head coach Steve Maze hit a handful of balls towards them with a fungo bat. After deducing that players could not locate the ball, the umpire called the game.

There was a little controversy over whether the game would be called off as official since it was past the mandatory five innings for such a ruling to happen, or if it would be suspended and both teams would have to finish the rest some other time.

The controversy was the haze.

If a game is unplayable after at least five innings due to rain, it is ended early on account of the weather. But the umpires were uncertain if haze fell under such a category. After consulting the chairman of District 6 Baseball, the umpires ruled the game official and Morrisette wrapped up the hazy win.

"That was a big game. We needed that. We've got to win these games. These are the teams we got to beat to get into the playoffs," Cattaneo said. "We got Cohasset, we got Stoughton, we can beat Canton. If we can beat those three games, we'll make the playoffs—that's the way it looks now."

Red Cross Golf Classic At Wollaston Club July 16

There is fun and excitement in store for all golfers, serious or not, who are planning to attend the 21st annual Red Cross Golf Classic on Monday, July 16 at the Wollaston Golf Club, Milton.

The event's primary sponsor this summer is the Daniel J. Flynn Company, represented on the golf committee by James Chicino.

This year's committee, in addition to Chicino, includes members of the South Bay Chapter's Advisory Board and includes: Donna Buccheri Feenan, Mae Harris, John Pasciucco, Jr. DDS, Lynn Houghton, Maralin Manning and Jackie Gardner, South Bay Chapter, executive director.

The money that will be raised with the support of sponsors, golfers and dinner guests will ensure that the American Red Cross will be able to continue their work in the community. The American Red Cross' giving programs include, but are not exclusive to, providing assistance to disaster victims. Each year the agency helps hundreds of local residents during their unexpected time of need.

At the moment the participation golf roster is full, but if you would like to be placed on the waiting list please contact Jackie Gardner at (617) 770-2600.

Hoop League Packs Fenno Street Courts

Summer basketball in Quincy has a new look as the Quincy Neighborhood Basketball League (QNBL) officially began its first season June 25.

Sponsored by the Quincy Police Patrol Officers Association, the QNBL was founded to create a summer basketball league for the residents of the city and to allow high school athletes the chance to compete against stronger, older and more experienced competition every week.

A total of ten teams in two divisions were invited to play in this highly competitive league. Games are played every Monday night at 6, 7, 8 and 9 p.m. at the Fenno Street courts between June 25 and Aug. 6. An estimated 100 people packed the outdoor courts the past two Mondays to watch the action.

Teams are represented by some of the best high school and college athletes from all across Quincy, as well as former hoop stars of the past. After two weeks of play, the standings and leading scorers are as follows:

Cerebral Palsy Of Massachusetts Golf Tourney Raises $40,000

Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts, based in Quincy, recently hosted its eighth annual Golf Classic at the Pinehills Golf Club in Plymouth.

Nearly 100 people turned out to raise more than $40,000 to enhance programming and vital resources that help thousands of individuals with developmental disabilities throughout the state.

"For the eighth year in a row, the community has come out to support our organization by taking part in our golf tournament," said Tom Zukauskas, CEO of Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts.

"We have a lot of great projects in the works. The generosity of our supporters will enable us to make great strides this year on behalf of our clients and the community," Zukauskas added.

Wollaston Sr. Babe Ruth Teams In Playoff Hunt

The two Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth teams, Wollaston Blue and Wollaston Red, were undefeated last week, enhancing both teams chances to qualify for the playoffs.

Wollaston Blue (8-3 overall) went 3-0, outscoring their opponents 28-3, while Wollaston Red beat second place Milton 5-4.

Wollaston Blue 11 Marshfield 1

On July 3, Eric Moreschi pitched masterfully as he limited Marshfield to four hits while striking out 13 batters in six innings in an 11-1 victory. Joe Edgerly was the hitting star with four hits and four RBI. Dave Regan (three hits, three runs), Dan Myers (four hits, two RBI) and Matt Edgerly (three hits, two runs) also contributed at the plate.

Wollaston Blue 11 Braintree 1

On July 5, Matt Edgerly shut Braintree down as he allowed just three hits while striking out nine batters in six innings. Brendan Carnell played a stellar second base and also contributed at the plate with two hits and a run scored.

Dan Myers, Joe Edgerly and Dave Griffin all knocked in two runs apiece.

Wollaston Blue 6 Tri-Town 1

On July 8, Dan Myers improved his record to 3-0 with a three-hit victory over Tri-Town. Eric Moreschi earned the save.

Dave Regan knocked in the go-ahead run, plating Greg Ouellette who had doubled to lead off the fifth inning. Myers helped his own cause by driving in three runs. He is batting .555 for the season.

Wollaston Red 5 Milton 4

Paul Doolan pitched one-hit ball in four innings of relief against Milton to earn his second victory of the season.

Joe Griffin (two hits, two RBI) and Rick Bjorek (RBI) helped drive the Wollaston Red offensive attack. Jonathan Glennon played an excellent defensive game at second base.

The Fours Score A Pair Of Early Wins

The Fours, a U-12 Quincy Youth Softball team, notched their first two victories of the season, on the road, against teams from Weymouth and Westwood.

The team defeated Weymouth by a 21-5 score. Starting pitcher Nicole Parry earned the victory on the mound, and Emma Ainsley and Liz Kelly each had home runs in the win.

Three pitchers, Erin Chiochio, Rachel Selbert and Liz Kelly, allowed just two runs as The Fours knocked off Westwood by a 25-2 score.

The Fours received solid defense from the entire team, highlighted with a nifty double play from Jaclyn Scuzzarella in the first inning that helped set the tone for the rest of the game.

Erin Chiochio's triple and a double from Devin McMahon put the game out of each.

38 Residents Participate In Hershey's Track and Field State Championship

Ten youngsters from the Quincy Recreation Department Hershey's Track and Field Games were crowned state champions on June 30 at Nashoba Regional High School.

Quincy was represented by 38 participants at the state championship. The ten who finished in first place will have their time and distance compared to the other New England states and one province of Canada, with the top times and distances going to the national meet which is held in Hershey Park, Pennsylvania.

The big winners of the day were Meaghan Murphy in the 9-10 year old 100-meter dash, Rachel Roach, Lexi Edwards, Caitrin Loneragan and Meaghan Murphy in the girls age 9-10 4 x 100 relay, Laura Nee in the girls age 11-12 400-meter run, Danielle Mullaney in the girls age 13-14 800-meter run, and Olivia Pantano, Xi Chen, Julia Nee and Cassie Swanson in the girls age 13-14 4 x 100-meter relay.

Recreation Director Barry J. Welch congratulated all the Quincy participants who advanced to the state finals.

For more than 25 years, the Hershey Chocolate Company has brought together boys and girls from all over North America for three days of sports and enjoyment.

"The Hershey's Program has been in existence for over twenty-five years and is a grassroots program that has over 1 million youngsters competing in the U.S. and Canada. Learning, participation, enjoyment and physical exercise are the elements of this fine program," Welch said. "With our participation we hope that we may positively shape the direction and future of our youth. We are indebted to the support of the Hershey Chocolate Company."

Welch also thanked members of the recreation staff for assisting with the two city meets and Geoff Hennessy of the Quincy Track Club who served as the meet director.

The Quincy qualifiers and their finish at the State Championship were:

- Caitrin Loneragan, 2nd in girls 9-10 50-meter dash with a time of 8.29 seconds, 1st in girls 9-10 4 x 100-meter relay with a time of 1:08.03

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You clever Ewes and Rams love nothing more than to rise to a challenge. So, by all means, if you feel sure about your facts, step right up and defend your side of the issue.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) You've done some great work recently. Now it's time to reward yourself with something wonderful, perhaps a day at a spa or a night out with someone very special.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You love to talk, but don't forget to make time to do a little more listening, otherwise you could miss out on an important message someone might be trying to send you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your aspect indicates some uncertainty about one of your goals. Use this period of shifting attitudes to reassess what you really want and what you're ready to do to get it.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your social life is picking up, and you'll soon be mingling with old friends and making new ones. But 'twixt the fun times, stay on top of changing workplace conditions.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A trusted friend offers understanding as you vent some long-pent-up feelings. Now, move on from there and start making the changes you've put off all this time.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might well feel uneasy as you face a difficult situation involving someone close to you. But you know you're doing the right thing, so stick with your decision.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You're a good friend to others. Now's the time to allow them to be good friends to you. Rely on their trusted advice to help you get through an uncertain period.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Family and friends are always important, but especially so at this time. Despite your hectic workplace schedule, make a real effort to include them in your life.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) That project you've been working on is almost ready for presentation. But you still need some information from a colleague before you can consider it done.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't let those negative attitudes that have sprung up around you drain your energies. Shrug them off, and move ahead with the confidence that you can get the job done.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Aspects favor some dedicated fun time for the hardworking Piscean. A nice, refreshing plunge into the social swim can recharge your physical and emotional batteries.

BORN THIS WEEK: You love to travel and be with people. You probably would be happy as a social director on a cruise ship.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We are asked over and over again, "What are the advantages of pre-arranging for one's own funeral?" "Is it wise?" "How does it help the family?" ... The answer to these questions is simply this - "Yes, it is wise." Yes, it does help the family. ... First of all, any death in a family is an emotional and difficult time for the average person. Many, many decisions have to be made in a relatively short time. ... Sometimes decisions have to be made in a relatively short time. ... Sometimes decisions are made that are not in accordance with other members of the family. ... Feelings and wishes sometimes overshadow the reality as to expense and type of ritual.

More than anything else, one makes pre-arrangements because of those they love. It removes the family the burden of making important decisions at one of the most difficult times in their lives. ... It eases the concern as to ... "Is this what he or she would want?" ... "Is what we are doing the right thing?" ... "Are we spending too much or not enough?" ...

Yes, it is wise to make pre-arrangements. We encourage you to "Think upon this." ...

Sacred Heart Music Ministry To Host Children's Choir Camp Aug. 6-10

The music ministry of Sacred Heart Parish will hold its first Children's Choir Camp Monday, Aug. 6 through Friday, Aug. 10.

This innovative program, for children entering grades 3-5 as of September, 2007, will be held on the parish grounds, 386 Hancock St., Quincy, from 9 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. daily.

This year's camp theme is Noah's Ark. The goal of the camp is to foster a better understanding of the church's liturgy and music.

Camp will include times for fun, games and crafts as well as signing and prayer. A hot lunch and two snacks will be provided daily.

The week culminates Friday, Aug. 10 with a short musical presentation based on Noah and the Ark, titled "100 Percent Chance of Rain."

A "make your own sundae" party for all in attendance will follow the performance.

An extended day on Thursday, Aug. 9 is planned with final music rehearsals, a short Evening Prayer liturgy, and a family movie night in conjunction with the parish's "Popcorn, Movie & Discussion" night. The movie for the evening will be "The Chronicles of Narnia: The Lion, The Witch and the Wardrobe."

Camp openings are available. Registration deadline is Monday, July 28. Cost is $75 per child and includes all workbooks, music, crafts, lunches, snacks and dinner and popcorn on Thursday.

For reservations, or more information, contact Sacred Heart Rectory at 617-328-8666 or visit the website www.sacredheartquincy.org.

Squantum Christian Fellowship Participating In Worldwide Missions Project

Squantum Christian Fellowship will be involved in a worldwide missions project called Operation Kid-to-Kid.

For this project, children attending Avalanche Ranch vacation Bible school will provide soft Prayer Bears and copies of The Survivor's Bible for orphans in Africa.

Operation Kid-to-Kid will show kids that with Jesus' help, they can impact their world. The Prayer Bears will be shipped to International Bible Society, who will distribute them to orphans in Central and South Africa.

Because of children's generosity, Operation Kid-to-Kid has grown to become one of the world's largest global outreaches of children serving children.

For more information about Operation Kid-to-Kid, visit www.ok2k.org.

Operation Kid-to-Kid is one part of Avalanche Ranch which runs daily from July 16-20 at Squantum Christian Fellowship. Children age 3-11 are invited to attend. The week includes crafts, games, snacks and fun music.

For more information, call Helen at 617-328-8771 or visit www.squantumcf.org.

Community Bible School At Union Congregational Church

An evening program for all ages will be running on Wednesday through Friday evenings, July 18-20, from 6 to 9 p.m. at Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd., Wollaston.

New Owner For Marina Bay Night Spot

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board granted a request from Flagship Marina Bay LLC doing business as Oyster Bar/Summer House, 333 Victory Rd. Marina Bay for the transfer of the common victualer and all alcoholic restaurant, entertainment license held by Ed Kane, owner of Eating Up The Coast, LLC doing business as The Tavern/Ocean Terrace.

The new owner is David Jensen.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said he was representing his constituents saying that the new owners should close at 11 p.m. citing noise adding, this is an "open an operation."

Atty. Brian Connolly, counsel for Flagship said that the music that is played is projected toward the water causing less noise.

He said the new owners are "committed to be responsible".

Police Chief Robert Crowley said closing time should be at 11 p.m. unless there is a function and then the owners would have to appear before the board.

The vote is subject to a review in December.

Ritz Motel Demolished, Site Use To Be Studied

the Ritz' existence," Ward 3 City Councillor Kevin Coughlin said this week. Coughlin worked with city officials, particularly Building Inspector Jay Duce and Health Inspector Drew Scheele, toward a quick demolition.

Coughlin said they employed the city's new anti-blight ordinance in urging speedy action.

"It was really becoming a public safety hazard," Coughlin said, adding that squatters had recently begun nesting in the former motel quarters.

Former City Councillor Joanne Condon-Walsh who began efforts to have the structure demolished back in the 1970's when she served as councillor especially welcomed the demolition news this week. She called the structure an "eyesore."

"It's a wonderful opportunity for the city to have a gateway they can be proud of," said Condon-Walsh, noting that the motel's location is right at the entrance of North Quincy.

Berne's owner, Michael Van Tassel, stands to receive a $10,000 commission and Sabina's owner, Ronnie Kaur, a $2,500 bonus.

Contacted this week, Van Tassel said that he doesn't know who his million dollar winning customer is, but he's happy to have the commission to pay up some bills. He was busy serving his lunch patrons when he was contacted by The Sun.

Van Tassel said he seems to have a lot of winners for a small store where they sold 300 Star Spangled tickets.

As for Ronnie Kaur, owner of Sabina's Market, her bonus will help pay for her vacation in Pakistan. The trip was already planned, she said, and now it will be easier.

"This is extra," Kaur said. Some 560 Star Spangled tickets were sold at Sabina's Market.

By Tuesday of this week, 34 of the game's 51 winners had registered for their winnings at Lottery headquarters in Braintree.

According to a Lottery spokesman, the odds of winning the $20 million grand prize was one in 4,000,000, the odds of winning a $1 million was one in 400,000 and the odds of winning a $250,000 prize was one in 100,000.

This year's Star Spangled Sweepstakes was a new angle for the Massachusetts State Lottery and the agency lost $12 million on the project.

Silent Movies At Crane Library

Pianist Richard Hughes will provide the "mood music" to take the audience back to the silent movie era at a special showing of three classic old-time movies on Thursday, July 19 at 7 p.m. at Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington Street, Quincy.

Features for this "Silent Movie Show" will include three short films starring Charlie Chaplin and Laurel and Hardy, plus the 1903 classic "The Great Train Robbery." These films are all black and white with no sound tracks but the film action is enhanced by piano back-up.

Hughes will describe the silent movie era of over a century ago and, also, provide examples of the era's back-up music through his piano expertise during the event.

For the past ten years, Hughes has compiled many silent music scores taken from the "mood music" of that period. He recently released a DVD of three of Chaplin's films with the original musical scores synchronized to the films.

Hughes began playing the piano at the age of seven, started with the classics and later mastered boogie-woogie, ragtime and pop. He currently takes his shows and music to schools, community centers, libraries, historical societies and senior centers.

At each stop, he finds that audiences of all ages enjoy the fast-paced slapstick style of the old Vaudeville days.

The Silent Movie Show is free and sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library. For more information call 617-376-1301 or visit thomascrane.org.

Hailed On 240th Birthday

John Quincy Adams' Legacy Model Today

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Nearly 150 persons joined Adams family members on July 11 to mark the 240th anniversary of the birth of John Quincy Adams, the nation's sixth president.

At the ceremony held in United First Parish Church, Quincy Square, speakers celebrated Adams' life and works, remarking repeatedly on his quest for justice for all.

Speakers noted that Adams' legacy is particularly relevant as the country struggles today, while at war with terrorists, to maintain its commitment to equal justice.

Following the ceremony, a naval honor guard led dignitaries and family members to Adams' tomb, which lies in the family crypt below the church. Adams and his family and his forefathers were all lifelong members of United First Parish Church.

ADAMS LOOK-A-LIKE Jim Cook wore 18th century garb, including the top hat to United First Parish Church on July 11 in honor of President John Quincy Adams.

Several speakers drew parallels, sometimes unfavorably, between Adams and America's current president George W. Bush. Both were the only sons of presidents to serve as president of the United States.

Each has handled the task differently.

Adams was 58-years-old when he became president and had already had a full career in foreign diplomacy, having successfully completed overseas missions and stints as the country's ambassador.

He served one term as president, and, then, 16 years in the House of Representatives where he was known as "Old Man Hoquett," according to Arthur Ducharme, director of the church's Historic Interpretive Program.

"Never before or since has there been an individual who so truly devoted his entire life, from cradle to the grave, to the service of his country," said Ducharme.

Several speakers, including Rev. Sheldon Bennett, noted Adams' successful defense of the kidnapped Africans who

Proposes Quincy-Boston Management Commission

Ayers Bill Would Give Quincy Say In Harbor Islands

By TOM HENSHAW

Quincy has fired another, albeit gentle, salvo at Boston in the long-running skirmish over Moon and Long Islands, two potential gems in the Boston Harbor archipelago.

While Boston Mayor Tom Menino is considering City Councillor Leo Kelly's request to open the islands to Quincy residents, Rep. Bruce Ayers is taking more direct action.

Ayers has filed a bill (H719) that would establish a special commission made up of residents and officials of Quincy and Boston for long-term management of the islands.

The islands are owned by the city of Boston but accessible on land only by causeway to Moon Island and bridge to Long Island through the Squantum section of North Quincy.

BRUCE AYERS

The city of Boston currently uses the islands for, among other things, a homeless shelter, a treatment facility for drug addicts, a firefighting academy and a police target range.

"There has been a long history of contentious issues over the years," Ayers told a hearing before the Committee on Environment, Natural Resources and Agriculture Monday.

These contentious issues have included placement of service programs for vulnerable populations, the Tall Ships, bomb detonation and many others.

"Most recently, discussions have been around the hazardous condition of the Long Island bridge. Some of these discussions have addressed destroying the bridge."

"Unfortunately, we do not have the final say over that because the city of Boston owns and operates that property."

Shea Hesitant

License Board To Consider Change In Meeting Time

Mayor William Phelan's suggestion that the License Board change its Tuesday meeting time from mid-morning to late afternoon will be on the Board's agenda for the July 24 meeting.

But Joe Shea, the chairman by virtue of his office as city clerk, is not wild about the idea.

"I'd be hesitant to meet in the afternoon," he said. "There are so many other Tuesday meetings, I don't know if we would be able to squeeze them all in."

JOSEPH SHEA

"There's a good chance if we ran long we would run into other meetings like the Board of Appeals or the City Council, which meets Tuesday when 10,000s of folks are on Monday."

"I'd work around the availability of the City Council Chamber."

The mayor suggested in a letter to Shea that the present 10 a.m. meeting time be shifted to 4 p.m. to give residents and business interests an equal opportunity to attend.

He called the morning meetings "favorable to businesses and an impediment to public participation."

Proud But Sad To Leave Quincy Public Schools

Mariano Starts Aug. 6 As Abp. Williams President

Assistant Supt. Dr. Carmen Mariano, 60, is leaving the Quincy Public School system Aug. 3 to become the first president of Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree.

In the newly created position, he will coordinate the work of the independent Catholic prep school's principal, chief financial officer, development director and board of trustees to guide its growth, direction and vision.

He will take over his new job Aug. 6.

"Quincy and the Quincy Public Schools have been my home for a long time," he said.

"I didn't know a person could feel proud and sad at the same time. I am very proud to be AWH's first president but very sad to be leaving the Quincy Public Schools."

Archbishop Williams High School, which was founded in 1949, was detached from the Boston Catholic Archdiocese in 2004 during a time of financial troubles when donations declined and legal expenses soared.

Mariano, a Braintree resident and a 1964 graduate of Williams, has been assistant superintendent of schools and personnel in Quincy since 2001, overseeing a staff of 950 and the educational needs of students from

K-12.

Previously, he taught mathematics, coached wrestling and served as assistant principal, director of personnel and as assistant and deputy superintendent for Personnel, Business and Plant from 1987 to 1991.

He spent 1992 to 2000 as campus director/associate dean for Quincy College's Plymouth campus, where he oversaw the educational needs of 600 students.

Mariano has a BA from Catholic University in Washington, a master's in education from Harvard and a doctorate in educational leadership from Boston College.

He has authored articles and lectured on such varied topics as leadership, motivation, courage, goal-setting, communication and public speaking.

He is a Quincy native, whose grandfather once owned the land on which Point Middle School is situated. He attended elementary and junior high schools in Quincy before entering Williams.

"Archbishop Williams gave me a sense of self and a strength of spirit — a true faith in God and myself," said Mariano.

"It is an honor to be entrusted with the responsibility of being the first president of my alma mater, which has asked me to come and help to make it an even better school."

"I look forward to helping the school strengthen and enhance its position as a leading educational institution."

As Incentive To Spend Money Here

Davis Proposes Discount 'Quincy Card' For Tourists

Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis proposes that a discount "Quincy Card" be created and issued to attract tourists to Quincy businesses.

Local hotels would present the card, accompanied by a list of restaurants and other businesses agreeing to participate in the discount program.

The card would be given to guests upon arrival at the hotels, urging them to take advantage of the special discounts being offered to visitors.

"Tourism is a very competitive business, and we should be doing everything we can to make sure people staying in Quincy hotels spend their time and money in the city," Davis said.

"If we offer visitors such simple incentives as a free appetizer with their meal or a discount on a harbor cruise, they will stay locally and support local businesses. I've spoken with Mark Carey, the City's Tourism Director, about the 'Quincy Card' and he thinks it's an exciting idea and intends to look into the matter."

Davis came up with the idea for the "Quincy Card" during a recent vacation with his family to the Pacific Northwest.

"I actually spoke with two people who stayed at the Quincy Marriott. One was from California, and he told me that he stayed at the Marriott for six days, but he spent his time traveling to other tourist destinations in the area, including Concord/Lexington and Plymouth. Quincy is the 'City of Presidents' and enjoys a long and proud history. We don't want such tourists to miss our Adams House and other local tourist destinations."

Davis added: "When tourists come to a hotel, they are looking for things to do that are cost-effective and convenient.... Tourism in Quincy has made great strides under the leadership of Jennifer Logue, the City's former Tourism Director, and current Director, Mark Carey. I hope that the 'Quincy Card' can be one more piece of the puzzle."

Major Sidewalk Repairs Started

Mayor William Phelan and DPW Commissioner Steve O'Donnell announce that major repairs to sidewalks are underway throughout the city.

Phelan appropriated $2.2 million to repair sidewalks as part of his "Neighborhoods First" initiative.

"The primary focus of our efforts will be in the repairs to our streets," said Phelan. "It was overwhelmingly clear that our residents consider this effort a top priority and we have listened to them by appropriating more than $2 million to upgrade our sidewalks."

In addition to the outside contract, DPW crews will continue their repairs of city sidewalks. The residents who need a sidewalk repaired are asked to call the DPW at 617-376-1959.

"We ask your patience as we make our way through the largest sidewalk repair contract in the city's history," said O'Donnell.

"We recognize the great need out there and we are

Koch Calls For Reforms To Correct Chronic Traffic Problems

Mayoral candidate Tom Koch Tuesday called for reforms aimed at fixing chronic traffic problems across the city that he said continue to worsen after nearly two years without a traffic engineer.

"After two years, the administration appears ready to listen to the public about the need to fix Quincy's traffic mess by finally hiring a traffic engineer," Koch said. "That's a first step, but we also need a full plan on how to make driving our streets safer and less frustrating for our residents. We need leadership on this issue, and we need a plan."

Koch expressed optimism that at least some of the city's worst traffic problems can be solved by using technology that already exists. He said many of the city's intersections are equipped with Advanced Traffic Control Systems programmed by computer to reduce idling at intersections and improve flow throughout the city.

"Without leadership and proper oversight, these systems languish. The results could not be clearer. That's the incredible part—we have the technology to fix some of these problems today," Koch said. "With the right planning, oversight, and desire to improve traffic conditions, we can get these systems working the way they were intended and start fixing our traffic situation right away."

Koch said that the traffic control systems affects more than 100 intersections in the city, as the systems are programmed to connect and synchronize with each other to keep traffic moving. The computerized systems are also programmed to detect and fix problems immediately, but Koch said that the "city must have the will" to monitor the systems.

One intersection not working properly can cause a chain reaction and essentially a breakdown of the entire system, Koch said. But when systems work correctly, a similar chain reaction brings cars back to main roads because there is less need for people to cut through neighborhoods.

"This is what we have been talking about a lot, and listening about from our residents: The need for leadership that takes an active role in their day-to-day lives," Koch said. "The open, responsive and respectful leadership we plan to bring to city hall will address issues like traffic that so clearly affect the quality of life of our residents."

In addition to fully utilizing the existing control systems, Koch called for a renewed emphasis on making sure traffic markings on streets and intersections are clearly visible.

"It's July, and the perfect time of year to repaint crosswalks, lane markings, and designated turning lanes," Koch said. "When our streets are not properly marked, traffic only gets worse. We need to give our departments the ability to run more efficiently so they can accomplish these tasks. We are falling behind on keeping up with road markings, and that needs to change immediately."

Koch also highlighted the environmental effects of a traffic-clogged city, noting that idling cars and especially trucks lead to increased emissions into the air.

"On top of that, it is gas money that our residents should not have to spend," Koch said.

Koch said traffic conditions around the city remain one of the biggest issues for residents he meets at coffee hours and knocking doors. The former Park Commissioner urged Mayor William Phelan to hire a traffic engineer in February and later called for a full plan to address dangerous intersections surrounding North Quincy High School.

Amelia Earhart's 110th Birthday Celebration At Beechwood Center

Two birthday parties celebrating the life and accomplishments of pioneer aviator Amelia Earhart will be held next week for seniors at the Beechwood Community Center, 440 East Squantum Street.

First on the schedule is a luncheon party Wednesday, July 25, and then, a brunch celebration beginning at 10 a.m. Friday, July 27.

All seniors are invited to both events. Reservations are required for both days and may be made by calling 617-471-5712. The luncheon costs $2.; the brunch, $1.

Earhart had special ties to Quincy as the pioneer pilot, many times, flew out of and landed at the airport in Squantum, then known as Dennison Airport. At the time, she was part owner of Dennison Airport, which later housed the Squantum Naval Base and, now, the Marina Bay complex.

Beechwood on the Bay is actually located on a portion

Lady Bird's Quincy Visits

Lady Bird Johnson loved what she saw at the Adams Mansion during an official visit here 40 years ago. And came back 28 years later on a private visit for a second look.

Mrs. Johnson, who died July 11 at age 94 at her Austin, Texas home, was the First Lady in that first visit, June 9, 1967 and in the midst of her campaign to "Keep America Beautiful."

Accompanying her was Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall.

Little did she realize the hectic-and somewhat humorous scrambling she had caused here earlier that arrival day.

She and Udall flew up from Washington and landed at the South Weymouth Naval Air Station to motorcade to Quincy.

Mayor James McIntyre, his wife, Sheila, and Mrs. John Volpe, wife of the governor, were there to greet her. With them was five-year-old Elizabeth McIntyre, who presented Mrs. Johnson with a bouquet of roses.

McINTYRE

There was no hint of the hectic hour McIntyre had spent before the plane arrived.

He has asked Jack Schmock, who was Civil Defense Director at the time to help him check out Lady Bird's route in Quincy. "I want to be sure everything looks nice for her," he told Schmock.

The motorcade, coming from Weymouth, along the Southeast Expressway, would turn onto Furnace Brook Parkway and proceed to Adams Street to the Adams Mansion. Home to four generations of the Adams family and the summer White House for two presidents.

McIntyre and Schmock found people standing along Furnace Brook Parkway waiting to see the First Lady.

And, to McIntyre's horror, lining the sidewalk in front of homes were filled trash bags and barrels. It was trash pick-up day in the area, a small detail overlooked in the planning for Mrs. Johnson's welcome.

McIntyre gasped at the thought of the First Lady-campaigning to keep America beautiful-looking out from the motorcade at piled up rubbish as she rode by.

His Honor sprang into action. He radioed a SOS to Public Works Commissioner Jack Browne. The latter quickly pulled trucks from other routes and had them move in to pick up trash in the Furnace Brook Parkway area.

A short while later, McIntyre and Schmock, joined by Executive Secretary James (Pete) Ricciuti decided to make a second inspection of the route. Just to be sure everything was all set.

The trash was gone. But no hooray! Scattered along the sidewalk in front of the homes were the empty trash barrels.

And, then a sight to behold: the mayor of Quincy on one side of the street and his executive secretary on the other, as Schmock recalls: "Hiding rubbish barrels behind homes, shrubs, parked automobiles and any other hiding spot they could find."

Some of the residents realized what was going on and got their own trash containers out of sight.

Board To Hear QHS Site Appeal

The Board of Appeals will hold a hearing Tuesday, July 24, at 7:15 p.m. on a last minute attempt to quash a building permit for construction of the new Quincy High School.

The petition by environmentalist Bill Aylward claims the permit was illegally issued since a Conservation Commission wetland ruling on the Faxon Field site is still under litigation.

LADY BIRD JOHNSON, wife of President Lyndon Johnson, nimbly steps over a hedge in the garden at the Adams Mansion in 1967 as Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall smiles.

McIntyre took the time to thank them before rushing to the Naval Air Station, reaching there just before the First Lady's plane landed.

Mrs. Johnson loved the roses little Elizabeth had presented her. And the flowers she found in bloom in the gardens at the Adams Mansion.

Especially the Yorkist Rose tree brought home from Europe in 1789 by another First Lady, Abigail Adams who planted it... And still blooms today.

A perfect setting for a First Lady campaigning to "Keep America Beautiful." She enjoyed herself so much she stayed for three hours.

The word trash was never mentioned.

Mrs. Johnson's second visit was a surprise quick one in 1995.

She just popped in unannounced with her granddaughter, Claudia Nugent, who was on her way to a college in New England.

The late Paul Harold met Mrs. Johnson in 1998 at a Democrat fundraiser on Cape Cod.

She fondly recalled her two visits here.

"She told me she was very impressed with the Adams Mansion," Harold said. "She liked the way it was maintained by the National Park Service."

The warm lived-in look-rather than a cool museum-like look had impressed her on both visits.

"She said she was interested in the preservation and interpretive work at the mansion and that she was planning on setting up a similar house museum at the family farm in Texas." (She did say farm-not ranch, according to Harold.)

During her husband Lyndon Johnson's presidency, she spent much of her time trying to "Keep America Beautiful." She was one of the most popular First Ladies.

The flower gardens and that lived-in look-rather than the usual cold museum-like look at the Adams Mansion had truly impressed her.

Wonder if she ever found the time to duplicate that look with a similar house-museum she was planning at the LBJ ranch.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1924 real photo postcard view of Newport Avenue looking north from Beale Street in Wollaston. At the time the William Hurlbert Drug Store was on the left. This and the other shops down the street changed hands dozens of times over the years as immigrant entrepreneurs sought their path to the American dream. And it continues today, every time you drive down this street there seems to be a new business opened. On the right are the railroad tracks first cut through here in 1845. The Wollaston Station out of view behind the trees continues to be the magnet for the shops. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Cessation Services Needed For MassHealth Subscribers

As part of the health care reform bill last year, free or low-cost tobacco cessation services were offered to Medicaid (MassHealth) subscribers for a two-year period.

As this population has a smoking rate of 40%-double that of privately insured citizens-these services are critical. On July 11, there was a State House hearing for a bill to make these services permanent.

As a health care provider at Manet Community Health Center in Quincy, I know my patients need help to quit smoking. I currently see a woman with three children and twin infants.

She tries so hard to do the right thing for her babies, but she is alone, and previously could not afford help to quit.

With the current benefit, she is receiving treatment, and it looks like she will be successful in providing her family with a healthier life.

If we deny MassHealth subscribers cessation benefits, we not only ignore the higher smoking rate among those of lower-income, but also send the message that they do not deserve the most successful quit method of medication and counseling, which the privately insured can access.

I urge lawmakers to help and send the right message by supporting permanent MassHealth coverage of tobacco cessation.

It's About Our Right To Vote

Senator Morrissey and Rep. Mariano:

It was always about the right to vote. That's all! Let's review recent history.

If gay marriage was so important why did the legislature pass the buck, postpone and in every way possible put it off? After approximately a decade the State Supreme Court got involved. You knew there would eventually be a ruling and still you did nothing. Passing laws is your job. If the court does it why are we paying you?

The court redefined the meaning of marriage. That is not their job. They do not have the authority to establish special rights. Everyone had the same options when it came to marriage. That is equal rights.

The people were sick of you avoiding the issue so a petition was started. This is not something they put together in a few days and presented to the legislature. It took a lot of money and coordination. Over 170,000 people signed, a record. All they wanted was a chance to set their own law. What was the legislatures' response? You wanted to let the session end without a vote.

The court stepped in and said you were obligated to vote. They had no power to make you vote but said it was your duty.

We know the final outcome. Nobody asked you to take back anyone's rights. You were never asked to take a stand. All the people wanted was the right to define marriage just like they have done in most other states. You said no. The rights you trampled on were the rights of every person over 18 in Quincy.

Why do people feel left out? Why do 40-50% vote in elections? Because they feel their vote means nothing. You people will do as you please anyway. We could have had a debate on the pros and cons and put this to bed.

In any other state, you would have competition in the next election. I hope it happens. But then again even if you lose, the governor will find you something.

Most people should be outraged. We'll see how it all plays out. But I know this, it was always about the right to vote, not gay marriage.

You took away my vote, so don't come looking for that vote in the next election or any future election.

Seawall Projects Seen Doomed By Legal Ruling

By FRANK McCAULEY

More than half of Quincy's projected seawall and shore protection programs of almost $300,000 are apparently doomed by the ruling of Attorney General Edward J. McCormack, Jr., banning such protection for private property. Public Works Commissioner Charles R. Herbert disclosed.

Chelsea Powell In Miss Teen Pageant

Chelsea Powell of Quincy was recently chosen to participate in the Nationals' 2007 Miss Teen Boston pageant competition July 29.

A junior at Quincy High School, Chelsea is the daughter of Patricia Powell and the granddaughter of Arlene Burns. Her mother is a 911 dispatcher for the Quincy Police Department.

Chelsea will be competing for her share of over $20,000 in prizes and specialty gifts that will be distributed to contestants locally. There are three divisions in the competitions for candidates between the ages of 10 and 19 years of age.

Local businesses and private individuals are invited to sponsor Chelsea.

Each candidate will model casual wear and formal wear, according to Patty Niedert, this year's Boston Pageant Coordinator, who said that personality and interviewing skills rank high with the judging panel. Personality is the number one aspect during all phases of competition.

If Chelsea wins the title of Miss Teen Boston, she will represent Boston and the surrounding communities at the Cities of America National Competition that will take place in Orlando, Florida.

Niedert said there is no cost to Chelsea for participating in the pageant competition as businesses, organizations and private individuals participate by becoming official sponsors.

Any group or individual interested in sponsoring Chelsea should contact her pageant coordinator Niedert at 1-800-569-2487.

Boston Boy Choir Tours Washington, D.C. And Baltimore

The students of the Boston Archdiocesan Choir School, known as the "Boston Boy Choir", recently traveled to Baltimore and Washington D.C. for a week of performing and sightseeing.

While there, they participated in the Baltimore Boychoir Festival which featured boy choirs from across the United States. They also sang at Sunday liturgy at the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

One of the highlights of their trip was the opportunity to sing the National Anthem at RFK stadium for a baseball game between the Washington Nationals and the Baltimore Orioles. In addition to their performances, they visited the museums of the Smithsonian Institution, the Holocaust Museum, and various memorials.

The Boston Archdiocesan Choir School, sponsored by St. Paul Church in Cambridge, is a musically intensive, academically rigorous, Catholic day school for boys in grades five through eight. The students come from many cities and towns in the Boston area to attend the school.

Students from Quincy are:

Justin Au, Sean Patrick Hannon, Steven Huynh, Peter Jensen, Timothy Keenan, Rory Lavin, Brendan Murray and recent graduates Brian Tam and Nicholas Yotts.

For more information about the school, visit www.bostonboychoir.org.

'Mark Twain' To Visit River Bay Club Aug. 6

Mark Twain will be coming to the River Bay Club, 99 Brackett St. on Monday, Aug. 6 at 1 p.m., thanks to the Council on Aging headed by Director Thomas F. Clasby, Jr.

For the show, actor Richard W. Clark will take the part of Twain, America's best-loved writer and humorist. He will re-enact Twain's classics and invite the audience to laugh along with him at the foibles, follies and fantasies of his era.

To make a reservation, call the Quincy council on Aging at 617-376-1506.

Beechwood Summer Harbor Cruise Aug. 9

Tickets are still available for Beechwood's 10th Annual Harbor Cruise, according to Sharron Beals, executive director of Beechwood on the Bay.

The event is scheduled Thursday, Aug. 9. Participants will board at 6:45 p.m. and the ship will leave Marina Bay at 7 p.m. for the three-hour moonlight cruise. Tickets cost $30.

"The special Quincy cruise, aboard a 3-decker Boston Harbor cruise liner can accommodate 300," Beals said. "This cruise is the only time a liner this size departs from the Marina Bay dock each summer."

"Our August cruise has become a very popular and fun-filled summer event. Last year, tickets sold out and we expect the same community response this summer," said Judy Paul, Beechwood

SHARRON BEALS

Center president. "This is an important fundraiser for our Center and we are grateful for the widespread community support."

This year's three hour cruise will be aboard The Frederick Nolan, Boston Harbor's largest cruise ship, which will depart at 7 p.m. and return at 10 p.m. to the Marina Bay (DCR) dock. Events on board feature complimentary food, a DJ, and two cash bars.

Tickets can be purchased at the Beechwood Center or from members of Beechwood's Development Committee. Tickets are $30 per person.

Special group rates are available for corporate, business and family friends. Small business groups, family celebrations and neighborhood parties are especially welcome this year.

Members of the Cruise committee are:

For more information, call 617-471-5712.

'Java Jive' Featured Performer For Arts In The Park Concerts

The Arts in the Parks concert series will feature the group "Java Jive" Tuesday, July 24 at O'Rourke Field, Quarry St., West Quincy.

This is the concert series' 12th season.

"The Arts in the Parks series is a great way for the neighborhood to come together, enjoy great music and a fun night in the neighborhood park," said Mayor William Phelan.

"It's one of a series of free, fun, family events we have planned for the summer."

Arts in the Parks is sponsored by the Park and Recreation Departments that travels to a park in each of the city's six wards with the same performer. Earlier performances this summer included shows at Avalon Beach in Quincy Point and Safford Park in Wollaston.

All shows starting time are 6:30 p.m.

This year's featured performer is the popular Java Jive, known as "the Smallest little Big Band."

The trio plays hits in the style of the past 60 or 70 years. Bring a lawn chair or a blanket and sit back and relax.

The remaining schedule: Thursday, July 26 - Beechwood Knoll School, Fenno Street, Wollaston.

Tuesday, July 31 - Wendell Moses Field, Hucks Avenue, behind Squantum School.

Thursday, Aug. 2 - LaBrecque Field, Sea Street, Houghs Neck.

Admission is free and free ice cream and cold drinks will be provided.

For more information, call the Park Department at (617) 376-1251.

'Summerfest' Concerts At Amphitheater Wednesdays

"Summerfest," the city's annual concert series, continued Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater in Merrymount Park with a performance by the group Moby Dick & the Waiters.

A performer from the original series, Quincy native John DeMasi leads his group back atop the stage of Summerfest. Specializing in Dixie/Swing to Chicago Jazz, Moby Dick and the Waiters' medley of trombone, clarinet, tuba & bass, banjo and drums is sure to please the crowd.

The remaing schedule of concerts:

Wednesday, July 25 - Roberto Cassan Trio. The Roberto Cassan Italian trio will bring to you the traditional music of Southern Italy, performing a wide variety of styles such as Tarentella-Pizzica, Tammurriata, Villanella and the Neapolitan Canzone.

The music traverses a period of time spanning from the Middle Ages to the 20th century. Cassan is an accordionist, arranger and composer from Fan, Italy. He graduated from the University of Musicology in Cremona, Italy.

Wednesday, Aug. 8 - Riverside Theater Works. Riverside has been such a fixture in the musical life of Quincy over the past 10 or more years that we should proclaim them the official Musical Theater Group of the city. Join this charming troupe of exceptional talented young folks as they sign and dance their way through the Great American Songbook.

All the performances start at 7 p.m.

For more information, contact the Park Department at 617-376-1251.

Fugitive Nabbed In Bed

A 35-year-old Quincy man, sought for nearly a year on a federal fugitive warrant, was arrested Monday morning while hiding in bed in his mother's Beacon Street, Quincy Point, home.

Thomas A. Shay was ordered held without bail by Magistrate Judge Marianne B. Bowler for a hearing July 24 before Federal Judge Rya

W. Zobel on whether he should be returned to prison.

Shay was jailed for 10 years in 1992 for his part in planting a bomb that killed Boston Police Officer Jeremiah J. Hurley Jr., and injured his partner, Officer Francis X. Foley, who lost an eye in the blast.

He was released from incarceration in August, 2002, but was sent back to prison after repeatedly violating the terms of his release. The fugitive warrant was issued

Aug. 1, 2006, when he disappeared.

He was sought in New Hampshire, Maine and Chicago and was about to be profiled on Fox TV's "America's Most Wanted" before he was finally located at his mother's house.

He was arrested without incident while sacked out in a second floor bedroom by deputy US marshals, assisted by Boston and Quincy police.

Logue Reports Opposition To Concourse Growing

Opposition to the Quincy Center Concourse is growing, with hundreds of Quincy residents, workers, business owners and customers signing a petition to stop the project, according to Jennifer McCauley Logue.

Logue, a candidate for councillor at-large and the author of the petition, urges Quincy residents who oppose the four-lane roadway that will bisect Quincy Center to sign the petition, which is posted online at <http://www.PetitionOnline.com/quincyma/petition.html>.

Those who wish to sign the petition but do not have Internet access may sign the printed copy available at the Little Q Hot Pot restaurant, 1585 Hancock St., Quincy Center. The restaurant also will offer public access to the online petition for those who wish to sign the electronic version of the petition.

The Little Q, a Mongolian restaurant that draws patrons from throughout the Greater Boston area, is one of the many businesses scheduled to be demolished to make way for the Concourse.

"It simply makes no sense for a city that wishes to revitalize its downtown to demolish thriving businesses like Little Q while leaving vacant lots and eyesores untouched," Logue said. "I urge all concerned Quincy residents, workers, business owners and patrons to take a few moments to sign the petition before the city begins demolishing other popular businesses for this unnecessary project."

The Stop the Quincy Center Concourse! petition reads:

"On June 19, 2007, the City of Quincy, Massachusetts began demolishing downtown businesses to make way for the Quincy Center Concourse. This multi-million dollar, four-lane roadway straight through Quincy Center will eliminate parking, destroy or displace dozens of businesses and make the downtown area less pedestrian friendly.

"We, the undersigned residents, taxpayers, business owners and Quincy business patrons strongly oppose this expensive and unnecessary roadway. We urge Mayor Phelan and the Quincy City Council to immediately halt any further land takings or demolitions, and to abandon this ill-conceived plan before irreparable harm is done to downtown Quincy."

In pushing the Concourse plan, Logue said, city officials have given citizens the impression that the 35-year old urban renewal plan is the only way to revitalize downtown Quincy.

"Nothing could be further from the truth," Logue said. "No one disputes that economic revitalization is needed in downtown Quincy. The question is whether this specific plan is the best way to achieve that revitalization. And a simple cost-benefit analysis shows that the Concourse plan—which will eliminate parking, destroy tax-paying businesses and make Hancock Street less pedestrian-friendly—is the wrong way to go about it."

If elected, Logue said, she would support exploring participation in the National Trust for Historic Preservation's Main Streets program.

"The Main Streets program has helped communities across America revitalize their downtowns without bulldozing entire city blocks or constructing unnecessary, multi-million dollar roads," Logue said.

"In developing a true revitalization plan, an historic city like Quincy should look to successful models with proven track records like the Main Streets program—not simply pull a 35-year old plan off the shelf, dust off the cobwebs and call it 'progress'."

Denis Tardo Named Lion Of The Year

Denis Tardo has been named Lion of the Year for Massachusetts Lions District 33K.

Tardo, first vice president of the Quincy Lions Club, has served in a number of posts at the district level, including Membership Chairman and Orientation Chairman. He also served as chair of the Lions' Blue Badge program, a special initiative that seeks to engage new Lions Club members through active involvement in the club's local and district projects and events. In 2006, he played a key role in helping to organize the Lions Club International Convention, which drew thousands of Lions from around the world to Boston.

A Quincy resident, Tardo joined the Quincy Lions Club in 2002. He is also a longtime Registrar of Voters in the city.

The Quincy Lions Club has been serving the local community for more than 65 years. Through such fundraising events as the pancake breakfast and its spring Run/Walk for Sight, the Quincy Lions Club raises thousands of dollars each year for eye research, donations to help blind or visually impaired residents, scholarships for local high school seniors and other worthwhile community projects.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

A Summer Review

There's plenty of summer left, while here's a quick review on keeping safe throughout the remaining summer days and nights.

When I begin cutting our lawn, I make certain that there's enough fuel within the tank to get the job done. I want to avoid fueling the lawnmower once it's hot from use.

I recommend you do so as well where gasoline vapors are highly volatile and flammable. We've grown so accustomed to its use; let's remember it still must be used with caution and respect.

Can I say anything more than I have in the past about grills? When in use, don't leave them unattended. If using propane, check to make certain that the hoses and connections are tight and secure.

It is at the connections and this hose where fires can typically start outside the containment of the grill itself. Outdoor storage can raise havoc with both, so check them periodically.

Any grill should be used at ground level, at least ten feet away from buildings and other combustibles. If using charcoal, adding lighter fluid to an existing fire can invite disaster.

Flames may travel up the stream of lighter fluid, resulting in serious burns. Lastly, be mindful of children getting too close to a hot grill. Having fun in the yard, they can be oblivious to the danger a hot grill poses.

Of course open outside burning is not allowed within Quincy. Considering the close proximity of houses to each other, the nuisance factor of smoke and the perceived threat of fire to abutters, it is in my opinion, a sound policy. The heat and the fire potential of dried vegetation during the summer months alone are arguments for its prohibition.

If traveling, consider fire safety when checking into a hotel, motel or guesthouse. Take the time to familiarize yourself with the layout of the building, exit locations and alternate means of escaping the building should there be an emergency.

I cringe when I go to a vacation setting and see some of these old guesthouses still in use. Remember that windows can be used as emergency exits, while access to roofs can make their use more inviting if the need arises. Of course, never use elevators in case of fire.

Respect the water, I love it, but if I go kayaking on the most serene pond or lake, I'll stop at the beginning and remind myself that as beautiful as it is, it can be very unforgiving if not respected. Relax with caution and respect the water.

Have a great summer!

Liang Decides To Run For Ward 6 Seat

Jimmy Liang, the restaurateur who took out nomination papers for a City Council at-large seat in May, has decided to run for the Ward 6 seat instead.

Liang, the first Asian-American to run for the City Council in 2001, said the theme of his Ward 6 campaign this year will be "unity and communication."

"With the ever-growing population becoming more and more diverse, communications and unity are needed," he said in his announcement.

"Even though no local politician is touching upon those two great concerns, it does not mean that we as a city do not have to deal with them."

"We need to address issues with understanding and respect for one another and deal with them before it reaches a point where we may not be able to handle them."

Liang, who lives on French Street in North Quincy and owns Quincy restaurants, proposed an eight point plan to bring about that unity.

- Using my Council salary I will establish and independent City Council office outside of City Hall to make myself more accessible and to help people of all ages and cultures to feel comfortable in dealing with the city.
- Work with the Histori-

cal Society to produce a bilingual historical documentary so that Asians can learn about the city's great history and to foster a sense of belonging. Helping them to be proud of where they live and where their children come from.

- Publish and distribute a Good Neighbor Handbook that will help people of different culture to understand and communicate with each other.

- Work with the School Committee to help promote communication among parents, students and school officials to remove cultural barriers to quality education.
- Hold frequent neighborhood meetings to update residents and to solve environmental and development problems that surround the city as a whole.

- Work with various city departments to bring updated city ordinances to the residents of the city; i.e.; how many people know that it is illegal to pave over their front lawns?

- Improve the residential parking program. We need a system that's fair and reasonable, enforcement isn't the only answer.

- Establish a buddy program between children and senior citizens so that they can communicate and help each other out. Education process to promote respect for the people that gave us a great city to live in.

Jimmy Liang is the prototype American success story, the immigrant family that came to the United States in search of a better life and the opportunity to succeed.

Building on strong family values and a Quincy Public Schools education, he opened a Japanese restaurant in Wollaston and has since expanded to two restaurants in Quincy Center and North Quincy. A third will open later this year.

Liang is a successful businessperson who puts his livelihood on the line day in and day out, meets a payroll every week and knows that success comes from hard work and the ability to deliver value to his customers.

He also knows that a city must deliver valuable services to its people in both good and bad times.

"I have a vision for the city of Quincy," he said.

"I hope that all the people of the city will work together for a more peaceful and safe place where it is ideal to raise families."

"I want to go back to the days where I can walk down a street and see neighbors greet one another."

"There will always be room for improvement, always room to make a city better and more economically viable, thriving, clean and safe."

July 24, 1897, Earhart not only paved the way for other aviators, but, by her example, she broke new ground for women.

Earhart was presumed dead after her plane vanished during in 1937 during her attempted flight around the world. She was 40 years old when she died but she had already broken many barriers for women early in the 20th century.

She had a multi-dimensional career well before the Suffrage Movement allowed women the right to vote. She was a social worker in Boston, a teacher, a truck driver, journalist, photographer, file clerk and nurse's aide.

"Courage is the price that life exacts for granting peace," Earhart said once, adding, "The soul that knows it not, knows no release."

In aviation, she was the first in many areas. In 1928, she was the first woman to cross the Atlantic by air as a passenger; in 1932, the first woman to fly a plane solo across the Atlantic; In 1935, she became the first person to fly non-stop across the Pacific Ocean.

As a woman at that time, she had to win over some critics, such as those who found her aviator's khakis and high boots "...not appropriate attire for a lady...."

Additional information about Earhart is available through the Aviation History Information Center at Beechwood.

The center collects all types of history on early aviators, such as the recollections of Freda Hadayia.

Hadayia remembered Earhart as a warm caring social worker at Boston Dennison House. Earhart was known to bring some of the students to dinner at her sister's house in Medford.

All Aviation History meetings are open to the public.

mutinied on the slave ship Armistad. Rev. Bennett is Minister at United First Parish Church.

In the Armistad case, the Africans sought and won justice and freedom only after Adams fought and won the legal case in the United States Supreme Court.

Through that historic case, Adams established forever the principle of habeas corpus, which protects all persons, regardless of their standing, nationality, or history, from unlawful restraint or imprisonment.

Senator Michael

Morrissey noted that Adams was not afraid to take on unpopular causes while Mayor William Phelan observed that Adams was against slavery, "ahead of his time. May his leadership be an (example) for all who choose public service."

Navy Lt. Commander Raymond Hurd led the Pledge of Allegiance and Rev. Bennett, provided the opening and closing prayers. Kirtland Switzer, church president, introduced the speakers.

Speakers included Morrissey, Phelan, Caroline Keinath, Deputy

Superintendent. Adams National Historical Park; Peter Boylston Adams, Treasurer, Adams Memorial Foundation; Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, Quincy Historical Society, and Hurd

Adams' descendant Dorothy Adams was the soloist with a hymn written by John Quincy Adams' wife, Louisa. Kathleen Adams accompanied the singer at the organ.

Both the Salt Marsh Opera Chorus of Stonington, CT and the Quincy Choral Society provided the choruses.

Quincy Access TV Receives National Award

Quincy's own television station, Quincy Access Television (QATV) won its second national excellence award from the Alliance for Community Media.

The 2007 Hometown Video Award honored the station for the activities and services that it provides to the citizens of Quincy. Cited were the station's public education programs, its legislative and regulatory agenda and coalition building.

QATV's Executive Director Elizabeth F. Campbell accepted the 2007 award for "overall Excellence in Public, Education & Government Access" on behalf of the station.

As part of the contest entry, QATV produced a video that highlighted an exceptionally broad range of programming. Included were such major local events as Flag Day and the city's parades, high school sports coverage and school and city concerts.

The video also spotlighted QATV's weekly press conference, "Press Availability," with the mayor, as well as coverage of the City Council, city departments and the schools.

QATV staff also included copies of such independent productions as Tarot by Lea Marie and Freddy K's Christian Action Fellowship.

All of the elements depicted in the video, from public service presentations to independent shows, combined to convince the judges that QATV offers solid and diversified programming that serves it Quincy base and ranks with the best in the country.

The station first went on the air in 1997 with a mission to help individuals and organization to produce television programs for broadcast on cable access channels. Local residents learn to produce their own programs with ATV's help.

Any Quincy resident interested in producing a television program should call 617-376-1440 or visit www.qatv.org.

Recent Scam In Quincy

Officer Kristen Bowes recently investigated an incident involving a scam of a Quincy resident.

The victim said she received a letter stating she was the winner of $150,000 and she needed to call the enclosed telephone number to access her winnings. She made the call and spoke to a woman, who instructed her to send a money order of $2,000 to an address in Hope, British Columbia.

The victim purchased a money order at Wal-Mart and sent it. A few days later, the victim received a call from the same female, who said the taxes were underestimated and she would have to send an additional $1,000.

The victim returned to Wal-Mart and sent off another check to the same address. A few days later, the victim received a check in the mail from a company for $4,990.15 with a letter indicating she would receive a second check with the remainder of her winnings.

The victim deposited the check into her account, but soon learned the check was bogus. This is way banks tell you that they are putting a hold on your account for five days. Sadly, the victim is out $3,000.

The most surprising aspect of this incident - usually the victims are senior citizens, but in this case, she was 18 years old. Simple questions have to be asked to avoid being victimized.

Did I enter the "multi-state" lottery? Did I buy a ticket? In this case, did I put my name on a lottery ticket? Have you ever played your name on a lottery ticket and submitted it anywhere? If you didn't enter, how can you win?

A simple check of the telephone number listed would have been an easy way to determine that this was a scam. The customer service number posted on the letter has "toll free" next to it, but the "778" exchange comes from British Company, Canada, were many of these scams seem to be coming from.

For many, the internet is a great way to detect scams and verify any company involved. Remember, as the old saying goes, if it is too good to be true, it probably isn't.

Jo-Ann Bragg Announces Candidacy For School Committee

Jo-Ann Bragg, former vice chairman and a member of the School Committee from 1994 to 2005, has formally announced that she will make an election bid to return to that board.

"The overwhelming support and encouragement I have received from teachers, parents and business leaders have helped me make the decision to run again," she said.

"I bring experience, financial knowledge and a proven record as a leader.

"As a parent of children who graduated from the Quincy Public Schools, a home owner and a business owner in our city, combined with my many years in community service, I believe I have a unique understanding of the needs of Quincy.

"We need someone who can work with the teachers and the School Committee to repair the once excellent relationship and move forward to address today's significant issues, such as the building of a new Quincy High School and what to do about Central and Sterling Middle Schools.

"I feel I could be that person. I am asking the voters to once again give me the opportunity to serve them."

JO-ANN BRAGG

During her three terms on the School Committee, Bragg has chaired the Budget and Finance, the Building Needs and the Rules, Post Audit and Oversight Subcommittees and earned the reputation of being a hard worker who gets the job done.

She was a member of the School Policy Subcommittee which shaped many of today's policies. She was appointed to the Board of Governors of Quincy College and the Board of Directors of Quincy Teen Mothers. She has been a director of Quincy After School Child Care for 15 years.

"I feel the School Committee needs elected officials who have a proven record of fiscal leadership, people who will carefully watch the bottom line, ask the tough questions and be creative in finding the right solutions," she said.

"I have experience with million dollar budgets as a School Committee member and as a member of the Board of Governors at Quincy College.

"I want to continue to work to better our community. I will run a grassroots campaign just as I have done in the past. I will knock on doors and talk to residents in each ward across the city to listen to the people's concerns."

Bragg received the 2006 Ward 5 Citizen of the Year Award and the Quincy City Council Outstanding Service to the Community Award and the Lifetime Achievement Award from the Massachusetts Association of School Committees.

She and Richard, her husband of 31 years, have three children and three grandchildren. A Certified Tax Professional and accountant, she has been the sole proprietor of Up & Running, an income tax and accounting firm, for 29 years. She is a member of the Democratic City Committee.

Koch On New Quincy TV Talk Show

Former Park Commissioner Tom Koch, candidate for mayor, will answer questions from residents on a new talk show that debuts tonight (Thursday) at 9 p.m. on Quincy Access Television Channel 8.

Host Brian Buckley interviews Koch in the first episode, but Koch said he wants to answer questions from residents during future episodes of the show, entitled "City View."

Anyone interested in asking Koch a question should call 617-773-KOCH or email staff@kochforquincy.com.

"This is just one of many ways we are working to repair the disconnect between City Hall and the people of our city," Koch said. "We need to answer questions and be responsive. Answering questions on television is one way to do that."

Koch added that anyone who wants to talk with him or ask questions can simply call his office or email any time.

Davis Files Nomination Papers For Re-Election

Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis has filed nomination papers with the City Clerk's office seeking re-election to that seat.

Davis submitted 150 signatures, in excess of the 50-signature requirement. Davis is seeking his third term.

Davis lives at 33 Shawmut St. with his wife, Honor, and their two daughters, Madison and Meghan.

This past Saturday, Davis joined more than 10 volunteers canvassing the neighborhoods of Ward 4 gathering signatures.

"I always enjoy going door to door to meet voters.

It provides me with an excellent opportunity to hear directly from the residents," Davis said.

"I plan on campaigning, as I have done in the past, by knocking on doors and attending neighborhood meetings." Meanwhile, if any voter has questions about his candidacy, he or she is asked to call Davis at 617-472-8722.

Davis' Campaign Kickoff will be held Thursday, July 26 from 7-10 p.m. at Fireflies Restaurant on Adams Street. Suggested donation is $25. Tickets are available at the door.

Eileen Mullen Campaign Kick-Off Tonight

Eileen Mullen will kick off her campaign for the School Committee tonight (Thursday).

The event will be held from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center, 120 Quarry St.

Suggested donation is $50.

Bachelor Can't Keep His Bathroom Clean

Q. When my mom came to visit my apartment last week, she said she was appalled at the state of the bathroom. I admit it's a little grungy, but I don't have the time to scrub it from top to bottom every week. Is there a fast way to clean it so it passes muster the next time my mom visits unannounced?

— Kyle B., Atlanta

A. Yes, there is a fast way, but it's going to take an initial investment of time and then a minor devotion to consistency. If you can meet this challenge, however, you'll never have a grungy bathroom again — and the rest of the apartment may improve, too. Plus, being able to clean up after yourself is extremely attractive to the ladies. Believe me.

Here's what you have to do:

— Declutter: Remove old magazines, empty the trash can, move the laundry hamper out (temporarily, at least), throw out old or unused lotions, creams, gels and other accessories, and clean out the medicine cabinet.

— Prep for the first cleaning: Put all the towels into the laundry. Place all countertop items into a box or basket and take out of the room for now. Same with shower items. Take down the shower curtain; if the liner is very dirty or moldy, throw it out and purchase a new one.

— Do a "big" cleaning: Starting from the top down, clean cobwebs from the ceiling with a broom. Wipe down painted wall surfaces with a cloth and mild soap and water (pay attention to the baseboards). Clean bath tile with a mold-fighting tile cleaner and rinse. Scrub the toilet. Wipe down the outside of the toilet with a disinfecting cleaner and hot water. Clean the sink, countertops, towel racks and bathtub, and rinse clean. Lastly, sweep the floor, then wet-mop with disinfecting cleaner and hot water, rinse and let dry.

— Maintain: Set aside just 15 minutes every week to clean the bathroom. Declutter by placing all counter items into a box. Then just wipe down the counters, sink and tub; scrub the toilet, and clean the medicine cabinet mirror. Spread out the shower curtain liner and spray with a disinfecting cleaner or a mold-fighting cleaner, let sit while you sweep the floor, and then rinse off. Empty the trash, and you're done.

July 'Hurricane Preparedness Month

Gov. Deval Patrick has proclaimed July 'Hurricane Preparedness Month' in Massachusetts and the state's emergency management agency (MEMA) has prepared tips for residents' readiness.

"Every home and business should have a basic supply kit that could be used for any emergency," warns MEMA Acting Director Ken McBride.

McBride outlined some of the necessities, which include a portable radio, flashlight, extra batteries and a full supply of non-perishable food and water.

In addition, McBride said, "Every family should develop a 'Family communication Plan' to help ensure that everyone is safe. You should call your local authorities and learn about potential evacuation routes and the location of emergency shelters in your community.

"It is important to familiarize yourself with your Community's Emergency Plans before an emergency occurs," said McBride.

MEMA recommends dozens of items be placed in the Hurricane Disaster

Supply Kit. There are 22 categories ranging from canned goods, a manual can opener, pet food, water, purification tablets, infant care items, and a battery operated timepiece to personal health items, medicines and tools.

For the 'Family Emergency Communication Plan,' residents are encouraged to designate an out-of-state relative or friend to serve as the family contact. After a disaster, it is often easier to call long distance than locally.

It is important that every family member knows the name, address and telephone number of the contact person.

The communications plan is needed as family members may be separated from one another during an emergency. For example, adults may be working or traveling while children are at school, camp or a friend's home.

Once communication is setup, the family can develop a plan for getting safely back together.

For additional information about MEMA and Hurricane Preparedness Month, visit the website www.mass.gov/mema.

Neighborhood Housing Homebuyer Workshop

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in conjunction with Rockland Trust, will host a first-time homebuyer workshop Tuesday, Aug. 7 from 5 to 9 p.m. and Thursday, Aug. 9 from 5 to 9 p.m.

The workshop is open to all Massachusetts residents, regardless of income. It will be held at the Abington Town Hall, 500 Gliniewicz Way, Abington.

Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive a homebuyer certificate.

All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend the educational workshop. Participants will have the opportunity to speak with a lender at the workshop.

Topics include mortgage options, legal aspects of the home buying process, how a home inspection works, and other presentations from related professionals.

Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs.

There is a $15 fee per person.

Consider Materials, Maintenance When Building A Deck

(NAPS) — As deck season kicks in, many Americans are thinking about building a new deck or sprucing up old one.

If you are building, consider the type of deck and materials that will best suit your needs before heading off to the local home-improvement center. Everyone knows about wood decks, but more and more consumers these days are choosing composite materials for their aesthetic value, low maintenance and eco-friendly reputation.

The Value of Composites
It's fun to think about color and other aesthetic issues, but don't forget about maintenance.

Proper maintenance of a wood deck means waterproofing every six months and staining the deck once a year to maintain the color and prevent fading. And even before you get to the staining phase, you must clean the deck with chemicals and a pressure washer. Sanding may also be necessary to achieve a smooth finish. In contrast, composite decks are resistant to cracking, warping and splintering. They do not need to be stained or waterproofed. Composite decks are made from a variety of materials. For example, LP Weather-Best, which is available in six different nature-inspired colors, is made from wood flour mixed with high-density polyethylene plastic and then finished with a wood-textured grain to provide the look and feel of wood.

Cost

In addition to maintenance, cost is another important consideration. Wood decking materials range from inexpensive cuts of lumber to long-lasting woods such as redwood or cedar. Redwood and untreated cedar have the advantage of being resistant to insects and rot, but they aren't impervious and still require the regular maintenance associated with all wood decking products.

Wood prices are generally lower than composite materials, but you need to factor in the extra expense and time associated with maintaining and repairing wood decks for an accurate cost comparison. While the initial price is higher with composite materials, you can actually save money over time through reduced maintenance.

Maintenance Tips

Once you've installed your new composite wood deck, keeping it looking clean and beautiful is easy:

- Wash down the deck with a garden hose on a regular basis. Pollutants you may not see — pollen, dust, dirt and other airborne particles — will be washed away with regular spraying.
- Scrub off built-up dust and dirt with a common deck cleaner.
- Deal with stains quickly. Don't allow them to penetrate the deck's surface or bake under the sun.
- Clean grease or oil stains with any common household degreaser. Keep a splatter guard under your barbecue grill. Visit www.lpcorp.com/weatherbest for more information.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Finding Time to Exercise

Q. I have a very busy schedule between work and family, and so have very limited time for workouts. I've heard that if you do not spend one hour per day on exercise, you are wasting your time. Is that true?

A. Exercise should never be considered a waste of time. I would much rather see you exercise for a shorter amount of time than not to exercise at all. There are ways to use the time you have to get the results you want. Here are some suggestions.

- Schedule exercise in your daily planner. When planning your day, leave a block of time available just for you. You may not think you have any time available, but look hard. There is probably 15 or 20 minutes between appointments that you can use to complete a few exercises.

- Plan your workout. Knowing exactly what you are going to do with the time you have is crucial. If you have to think about what exercises you are going to do during the 20 minutes you have allotted, you won't accomplish much. Use index cards to write down specific workouts.

Let's say you have 20 minutes while waiting for your child to finish soccer practice. Write down a series of leg exercises that require no equipment and that can be done right where you are. Squats, lunges, plié squats (feet turned out) and heel raises can be completed for three sets of 10-15 repetitions of each exercise. If the other parents look at you oddly, ask them to join you. You can still watch your child as you get your leg workout completed.

- Don't go it alone. Many other people face the same challenges. Join together and help each other reach your fitness goals. Coworkers or neighbors may be interested in exercising together at lunch or after dinner.

- Make it a family affair. Get your entire family involved. Exercise is great for everyone. Not only will you be encouraging a healthy lifestyle, you'll also spend quality time with the people who are most important to you.

Keeping fit on a tight schedule is a challenge, but it is also what makes it possible for you to handle — and enjoy — a full life for the long haul.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. Beside Medication Verification

Milton Hospital Using Technology To Enhance Patient Safety

DR. JOSEPH RADUAZZO

Milton Hospital, a clinical affiliate of Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center providing community-based health care, is proud to announce the implementation of its Beside Medication Verification (BMV) technology.

By applying common barcode scanning to the field of medicine, BMV is used to identify patients and crosscheck medical records against medications prescribed during a patient's hospital stay. One of the first community hospitals in the area to adopt this technology, Milton Hospital is utilizing software from Meditech, headquartered in Westwood, for the implementation.

"At Milton Hospital, our top priority is to provide the safest patient care possible," stated Joseph Raduazzo, M.D., chief medical officer at Milton Hospital. "By providing tools to assist our physicians and nurses that streamline processes, we've created a more efficient system for administering medication. BMV will help us to avoid common medication errors by ensuring that we adhere to the 'Five Rights' — the right medication and right dosage provided to the right patient via the right route at the right time."

Upon check-in to Milton

Hospital, all patients are given an ID bracelet with a unique bar code. When medication is administered, BMV is used to confirm a patient's identity by scanning a bar code on a patient's wristband. Then, caregivers verify the correct medication and dosage for that patient by scanning bar codes placed on the medication package by the hospital's pharmacy. The information is processed and crosschecked against patient medication charts, which are filed electronically at Milton Hospital. The process allows immediate access to a patient's current test results, and checks for any allergies, potential drug interactions and important lab test results.

The Beside Medication Verification program is one step in an effort to develop an entirely electronic medical record and ordering system at Milton Hospital. As the hospital has transitioned from paper to electronic patient data, it has implemented computer-based systems for its nurses and pharmacy. In 2008, Milton Hospital plans to launch similar electronic systems in the emergency department for medical records and order entry, and plans to implement Computerized Physician Order Entry throughout the facility later that year.

Milton Hospital provides community-based health care to people of all ages in Milton, Quincy, Braintree, Randolph, Canton, Hyde Park, Dorchester and other local communities. Services include general medical and surgical inpatient care, a complete complement of outpatient health services and 24-hour emergency services.

Health Screenings At St. John's Church July 25

Residents living in and around Quincy may sign up for four screenings designed to identify persons at risk for stroke and other major illnesses, such as osteoporosis, according to Maria Pagan of Life Line Screening.

The screenings provided by Pagan's firm will be held at St. John the Baptist Parish at 44 School St. on Wednesday, July 25 beginning at 9 a.m. Appointments are necessary and the cost is $129 for all four screenings and an osteoporosis screening.

The tests will screen for blocked carotid arteries, aortic aneurysms, hardening of the arteries in the legs, and bone density. The full Wellness Package usually takes less than an hour.

Pre-registration is required and additional information is available at 1-877-754-9631.

Sports Injuries Affecting More Children's Feet

(NAPS) — Many children dream of growing up and becoming a professional athlete. But some might not make it past junior high at the rate's today's kids are competing.

Foot and ankle surgeons say they're seeing more injuries in children who play high-level sports such as gymnastics, tennis, soccer and volleyball.

"I'm treating chronic heel injuries in preteen athletes, where a few years ago we saw these cases only among 16- and 17-year olds," says Robert J. Duggan, DPM, FACFAS, a foot and ankle surgeon in Orlando, Fla.

Duggan says injuries in these preteens include high-level sprains, anklebone bruises fractures to bones in the ball of the foot, painful and irritated nerves and heel injuries.

The American College of Foot and Ankle Surgeons (ACFAS) recommends players; parents and coaches follow two steps:

First, seek prompt treatment. Delaying care and "playing through the pain" could make the injury worse.

Second, allow the injury time to heal. Follow through will full rehabilitation. Children who rush back into competition risk repeated injuries and instability in their feet and ankles well into their teen and adult years. Long-term problems can include osteoarthritis and chronic ankle instability.

According to the ACFAS consumer Web site www.FootPhysicians.com, people with untreated chronic ankle instability may suffer activity limitations, arthritis and tendon problems.

Luckily, treatments for many of the foot and ankle injuries young athletes suffer don't always require surgery.

"With the diagnostic tools available to foot and ankle surgeons and knowledge of the demands of the child's sport, we can make a decision on whether surgery's necessary and, in many cases, avoid it altogether," Duggan says.

Instead, the surgeon will often immobilize the child's foot for a period of time, followed by aggressive physical therapy.

Prompt treatment and rehabilitation can keep today's competitive young athletes in the game and keep pro sports dreams alive.

Can Yoga Prevent Alzheimer's Disease?

A study out of the University of Pennsylvania shows some astonishing possibilities in the prevention and treatment of Alzheimer's Disease — and it only takes 12 minutes a day.

The study involved yoga, of all things, and meditation. Backed up by photographic evidence (scans of the brain to measure blood flow before and after), it appears that a certain type of yoga and meditation allows the brain to heal.

Granted, the study only involved 11 people. Their medical histories included diagnoses of mild cognitive impairment (or early Alzheimer's) or complaints of memory loss. But all 11 people had improved short-term memory, visual motor coordination, concentration, verbal fluency and focus. And the brain imaging scans showed increased blood flow (which means more oxygen) to the very part of the brain where Alzheimer's starts — the cingulate gyrus.

One thing that is key: All 11 participants wanted to continue the daily meditation. Clearly they were getting something out of it. As one of the researchers said, "This is a form of exercise for the brain which enables the brain to strengthen itself."

The kind of yoga practiced was Kirtan Kriya, one of the basic Kundalini yogas, which involves simple finger movements and repetition of sounds.

If you'd like to give it a try, go to www.alzheimersprevention.org, click on Research and scroll to the bottom of the page. You'll find instructions including the finger movements, and even a scale showing the four musical notes. I even found how-to videos when I searched for Kirtan Kriya online.

Can this yoga meditation really prevent Alzheimer's Disease or improve early cognitive loss? I'm willing to spend the 12 minutes a day doing the meditation, just in case. It's free, there are no side effects and I can do it at home.

GUMMING UP THE WORKS!

Poor oral hygiene can lead to problems that extend far beyond the teeth, gums, and mouth. In fact, bacteria in the mouth can lead to problems that reach throughout the body, including heart disease, diabetes, blood infection, and even low birth-weight babies. The usual culprit is gum disease. People with gum disease (periodontal disease) are suffering from a chronic low-grade infection. This problem, which affects four of every five Americans, can exacerbate a wide range of health problems. In fact, gum disease is thought to introduce bacteria into the bloodstream. As these bacteria flow from the mouth to other parts of the body, they spread inflammation. To avoid this potential problem, brush and floss regularly and get frequent dental exams.

A growing body of research suggests that good oral health, including brushing and flossing daily, not only cuts down on gum disease and tooth decay, but may prevent serious health problems. We utilize all available resources and procedures to provide the dental health care our patients deserve and expect. When was the last time you had a comprehensive dental examination? We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we're currently accepting new patients. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're here to help. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Gum infections from gum disease can cause joint replacements to fail by aiding the body's efforts to reject the artificial implant.

Opens Best Of Three Series On Road

Quincy Faces Foxboro In First Round Friday

By SEAN BRENNAN

Quincy Legion Post 95 suffered through a very difficult 2006 season, finishing the year with a 2-18 record, but changes made in the off-season have helped turn the tide for the better for one of Quincy's two legion baseball teams.

Post 95 concluded its 2007 regular season on Monday night against Braintree Legion at Adams Field. The team dropped what had become a meaningless game 4-1. Post 95 had already secured the fourth seed in the upcoming legion playoffs and used this game to get some work in for all 18 of the players on the roster.

With the loss (the team's second in a row), Quincy Post 95 finished the 20-game regular season with a 12-8 record. Their first round opponent in the playoffs will be Foxboro Legion. The best of three series gets underway this Friday on the road.

"The biggest change and the best move that was made by me and Quincy Legion Post was the hiring of first-year manager Dan Sweeney," said Lenny Seitz, athletic officer for Post 95. "Dan comes from a great background. Both of his parents are educators in the Randolph school system, he is young (23 years old), he knows baseball, he plays baseball (at Nichols College) and he has brought excitement to the field and he has really developed a great team chemistry with this group of kids."

Legion Baseball

Quincy Legion Post 95, which returned twelve of its thirteen eligible players from last year's 2-18 team, has used its past experiences to move forward and to start to become a major powerhouse, not just in Quincy, but on the local American Legion scene.

"We returned twelve of our eligible kids this year," Seitz added, "and we knew that things just went bad last year. Some people may have written us off, but we stayed the course even when we had our backs against the wall. Our goal is to win-which we have done this year, but the long range outlook is to get Quincy Post 95 to that position where people want to play for us. And with the addition of Dan and his staff we are headed in the right direction."

The ten-game swing in the win column this year has put Post 95 back into playing the games that really matter-the playoffs-for the first time since 2005. And with the entire roster returning in 2008, the team's future looks bright.

"[These] guys on the roster this year have never played in the legion playoffs," noted Seitz, "but maybe that is a good thing come Friday. It will give the team and for that matter the coaching staff the opportunity to see what can be accomplished. The experience will only help us next year when we return our entire roster."

As for what can be expected when the post-season finally gets underway, Seitz sees a team that can hit for power and average, plays solid defense and can run, but also acknowledges that good or bad pitching is what will be the difference maker this weekend against Foxboro.

"In a best-of-three series you need to be able to pitch and pitch effectively. I am certain that we can hit, field and run with any team in these playoffs, but the key is going to be the pitching staff. If we can get innings out of our starters and help from our relief we have as good a shot as any of the ten teams to advance."

The first round is a best-of-three, winner moves on series with the higher seeded team, in this case Foxboro, having the option of deciding which two games will be played in Foxboro. Quincy Post 95 could be faced with having to win one of the first two games on the road in order to get a Game Three back at Adams Field.

The winner of the Quincy-Foxboro series moves on to play in a best-of-three second round game, with just a little twist. Once the playoffs switch to a second round, the games move from a seven inning affair to

Morrisette Ends Regular Season At 8-11-1, Misses Playoffs

Morrisette Legion played Canton Legion Monday night with the winner advancing to the American Legion playoffs, and the loser heading home for the summer.

Morrisette lost a heart breaker 2-1, effectively ending their 2007 season at 8-11-1, missing the playoffs by only one point. Starting pitcher Glen Misho allowed two runs in the first on a triple, single, single, stolen base and a suicide squeeze. Misho settled down after the first and held Canton scoreless the remainder of the game, but the Morrisette offense could muster only one run against Canton in the top of the fifth inning.

Morrisette Legion found itself in the position of needing to win-to-get-in Monday night because of a 7-3 loss at home on Sunday afternoon against Weymouth Legion.

As disappointing as the season turned out, Morrisette Legion returns most of its 2007 roster next spring. The team will say goodbye to shortstop John Orlando, designated hitter/pitcher Jonathon Pelletier and catcher Joe Ferris, but returns starters Kenny Carberry (OF), Joe Vialpando (OF), Ricky Salvucci (3B), Steve Connolly (1B/SP), Matt Rodriguez (C), Alex Tragellis (2B) and Glen Misho (SP).

Also returning to the team next year will be John Ainsley, Joe Lousarjian, Kevin Magoon, Mike Joyce and Steve Sullivan.

The Quincy Recreation Department will be hosting their Arts & Crafts #1 clinic and their Girls' Softball clinic next week, July 23-27. Limited spaces are still available.

The Arts & Crafts #1 will be held at the Dawes Memorial Estate, at the corner of Channing Street and Quincy Shore Drive from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The workshop is for boys and girls 8-12-years old. The cost of the workshop is $70, with an additional material fee of $3 per day that is paid directly to the instructor.

Ann Howie, who is a professional instructor for area agencies, will lead this workshop.

The Girls' Softball clinic will be held at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The clinic is for girls entering grades 6-10. The cost of the program is $70.

Rachel Powers, an assistant coach at Framingham State College, will lead this clinic.

Registrations are being accepted at the Quincy Recreation Office, One Merrymount Parkway, Monday through Friday between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Registration can also be done online at QuincyRec.com.

Wollaston Blue In, Wollaston Red Out Of Playoff Picture

Wollaston Blue, behind a strong pitching performance from Eric Moreschi and Matt Edgerly, secured a spot in the Senior Babe Ruth playoffs while Wollaston Red, despite strong pitching performances from Matt Jaehnig and Paul Doolan, fell just short.

Wollaston Blue 4 Marshfield 3

On July 13, Wollaston Blue clinched their playoff berth with an exciting 4-3 victory over Marshfield. Eric Moreschi struck out 13 batters while allowing only five hits. Moreschi also knocked in the Blue's last run in the bottom of the fifth.

Brendan Carnell, Dave Regan, Chris Doyle, Chris Timmins and Greg Ouellette

all played well for the Blue.

Earlier last week, Matt Edgerly hurled a one-hit shutout against the All Dorchester Sports League (ADSL). There were many who contributed to the Blue's 15-run attack including: Brendan Carnell (three hits, three runs, 2 RBI), Edwin Nunez (two hits, 3 RBI), Dave Griffin (two hits, two runs), Dan Myers (two runs, 2 RBI), Joe Edgerly (3 RBI), Dan Munkley (two runs), Dave Regan (two runs) and Chris Doyle (two runs).

The team's overall record with one game remaining in the regular season is 10-5.

Wollaston Red

On July 14, Matt Jaehnig threw a four-hitter while striking out eight in the Red's win over second place Marshfield.

Steve Matos led the offensive attack with three hits and two RBI. Joe Griffin and Jonathan Glennon each contributed a hit and a RBI.

Earlier in the week, Paul Doolan earned his third victory of the season in the Red's 9-7 victory over Weymouth. Ricky Bjork belted a grand slam in the win. Matos, Griffin and Sean Naughton each had three hits.

Wollaston Red has two games left in their regular season. The team's overall record stands at 5-9.

Quincy Faces Foxboro

a nine inning affair, which is something the Quincy coaching staff will have to deal with if they get that far.

"We need to get past Foxboro and that will be a big test for us," said Seitz, "and if we do the games get longer and pitching becomes that much more vital to any team's success. But getting ready to play in the post-season beats finishing the year at 2-18."

On Monday, Post 95 ended its 2007 season with a 4-1 loss to Braintree. Starting pitcher Jared Kenney allowed the first three Braintree batters of the game to reach base. Two of those three scored and Post 95 quickly found itself down 2-0 after one inning.

Following a relatively easier bottom of the first-inning, Quincy's Tom Power opened the game with a single, but was left stranded at second. Braintree would come back to score twice more in the top of the second inning. Kenney got the first batter to pop out to shortstop Mike LeBel, and followed that by inducing a lazy fly ball to left field. Left fielder Kyle Tobin lost the ball in the fading light, allowing the batter to reach second.

As is the case almost always in baseball, the extra out came back to bite Post 95 and Kenney. Braintree knocked a run-scoring single up the middle immediately following the error, and after a walk put runners on first and second, Braintree scored its fourth and final run on a RBI single under the glove of third baseman John Alexander.

Kenney shut down Braintree after the second, but Post 95 could manage to plate just one run in the bottom of the fourth. Mike LeBel singled, and after two strikeouts, Alexander reached on an error. Catcher Kevin Bossart scored LeBel with an RBI single. That would be all the scoring the rest of the night.

Post 95 could have finished as high as number two in the playoff seeding, but the team's 4-3 loss to Weymouth Legion on Sunday at Adams Field all put regulated them to the fourth seed position. There were a couple of different scenarios that would have given Quincy Post the second seed (such as Quincy beating Braintree and Weymouth losing to West Roxbury), but the team's loss to Braintree ended any hope of improving their standing.

Nonetheless, Quincy Legion Post 95 is back from the brink and they are gearing up to be a team to be reckoned with for a long time coming, and that is music to the ears and hearts of all its fans, loyal supporters, parents, players and coaching staff.

"This year has been great so far," said Seitz. "We continue to play in the present and we are committed to planning for the future."

Gerald Grindlay Memorial Fund's 5th Annual Trip To McCoy Aug. 4

The Gerald Grindlay Memorial Fund is running its 5th annual trip to see the Pawtucket Red Sox at McCoy Stadium in Pawtucket, RI. This year's trip will be on Aug. 4 to see the PawSox take on the Rochester Red Wings.

Tickets for the trip are $33 and include game admission and all you can eat BBQ. The BBQ runs from 4-6 p.m. with the game scheduled to start at 6:05 p.m. In addition, at this game, the PawSox are giving away Kevin Youkilis Bobbleheads to kids 14 and under.

All proceeds benefit the Gerald Grindlay Memorial Fund. Over the past few years the proceeds have been used to donate tickets to the Big Brothers Association for their members to attend the game and to fund book awards for local students entering private high schools.

This year's book award winners were Dominic Venuti and John Morton of St. Ann's School in Wollaston.

If you would like to join us in Pawtucket on Aug. 4 or have any questions about the memorial fund, call Michael Grindlay at (617) 823-3047 or Catherine Grindlay at (617) 293-8417.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You clever Ewes and Rams love nothing more than to rise to a challenge. So, by all means, if you feel sure about your facts, step right up and defend your side of the issue.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You've done some great work recently. Now it's time to reward yourself with something wonderful, perhaps a day at a spa or a night out with someone very special.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 22) You love to talk, but don't forget to make time to do a little more listening, otherwise you could miss out on an important message someone might be trying to send you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your aspect indicates some uncertainty about one of your goals. Use this period of shifting attitudes to reassess what you really want and what you're ready to do to get it.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your social life is picking up, and you'll soon be mingling with old friends and making new ones. But 'twixt the fun times, stay on top of changing workplace conditions.

VIRGO (August 23 September 22) A trusted friend offers understanding as you vent some long-pent-up feelings. Now, move on from there and start making the changes you've put off all this time.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might well feel uneasy as you face a difficult situation involving someone close to you. But you know you're doing the right thing, so stick with your decision.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You're a good friend to others. Now's the time to allow them to be good friends to you. Rely on their trusted advice to help you get through an uncertain period.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Family and friends are always important, but especially so at this time. Despite your hectic workplace schedule, make a real effort to include them in your life.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) That project you've been working on is almost ready for presentation. But you still need some information from a colleague before you can consider it done.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't let those negative attitudes that have sprung up around you drain your energies. Shrug them off, and move ahead with the confidence that you can get the job done.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Aspects favor some dedicated fun time for the hardworking Piscean. A nice, refreshing plunge into the social swim can recharge your physical and emotional batteries.

BORN THIS WEEK: You love to travel and be with people. You probably would be happy as a social director on a cruise ship.

Rev. Alfred Keane, 75 Former Pastor Of St. Ann's Church

A Mass of remembrance for the Rev. Alfred V. Keane, 75, former pastor of St. Ann's Church, was celebrated July 13 at St. Ann's Church, 757 Hancock St., Wollaston.

The Rev. Keane died July 7 at Maryknoll Nursing Home in New York.

Born in Dorchester, the Rev. Keane attended Maryknoll Convent School and was ordained in 1958. He was sent to Korea and served in various ministries in the Diocese of Chong Ju and Incheon for more than 20 years.

He was a high school teacher and principal at Sacred Heart School for the Deaf in Korea.

The Rev. Keane helped establish the Maryknoll Language School and brought modern education for the deaf to Korea.

He was the first pastor of Holy Family Parish, Pou Pyeong, Incheon. He continued his support for the well being of his people through the foundation of a credit union, assistance for workers in the factories and aid to a large group of lepers in the area.

During this time, he also served the Society as OTP Coordinator, Research and Planning coordinator and worked to establish the Maryknoll Language School.

It was while in the capacity of pastor that Fr. Keane became aware of the problems facing the Amerasian children in Korea and other parts of Asia. He devoted his efforts to the passage of a law by the U.S. Congress allowing these rejected children to come home to America. Of this, President Ronald Regan wrote to him: "I personally want to thank you for your tireless efforts... in bringing the plight of these children to the attention of the American public and government."

Cardinal O'Connor also wrote: "I have deeply admired your selfless dedication to the cause of Amerasian children."

His favorite scripture was from St. Paul to the Corinthians: "By the grace of God, I am who I am." Fr. Keane said, "Grace is a gift, a gift that makes me first a gift to self and then to and for others."

In declining health, Fr. Keane spent the last several years in the loving care of the staff at St. Theresa's Residence in Maryknoll, N.Y.

He was buried with his Maryknoll family on July 11.

He is survived by a brother, the Rev. Thomas Keane, a retired priest of the Boston Archdiocese and former pastor of St. Ann's parish in Quincy; a sister, Judith Keane of Quincy; three nephews, a niece and three grandnephews and five grandnieces.

He was the son of the late Thomas and Mary (Lydon) Keane.

Memorial donations may be made to Maryknoll Fathers and Brothers, Maryknoll, NY 10545.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Emily Dickinson, the 19th-century American poet, always knew that she meant and always found the words to convey her meaning. She wrote: "I don't know of anything so mighty as words. There are those to which I lift my hat when I see them sitting princelike on the page."

Words can sway multitudes. They can convey hate or love, contempt or tenderness. They can drive the hearers to mass-suicide (the tragedy at Jonestown), or they can give life meaning (the Sermon on the Mount).

Whether it is long or short, just a card with a bit of news or an invitation - a visit from the mailman is a meaningful experience. But how many of us use our talents in writing letters? We all can write a cheerful word, but are we taking the time to do it?

Let's think about letters in a different way. Let's think about us - you and I - as letters. Through our deeds, our gifts, our very being, each of us is writing a living letter... Our enthusiasm can be a letter of contagion; our carelessness a letter of dismay; our thoughtfulness a letter of kindness; our happiness a letter of joy.

Yes, you and I are letters and we can be letters on the pages of the human heart!...

Sacred Heart Music Ministry To Host Children's Choir Camp Aug. 6-10

The music ministry of Sacred Heart Parish will hold its first Children's Choir Camp Monday, Aug. 6 through Friday, Aug. 10.

This innovative program, for children entering grades 3-7 as of September, 2007, will be held on the parish grounds, 386 Hancock St., Quincy, from 9 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. daily.

This year's camp theme is Noah's Ark. The goal of the camp is to foster a better understanding of the church's liturgy and music.

Camp will include times for fun, games and crafts as well as signing and prayer. A hot lunch and two snacks will be provided daily.

The week culminates Friday, Aug. 10 with a short musical presentation based on Noah and the Ark, titled "100 Percent Chance of Rain."

A "make your own sundae" party for all in attendance will follow the performance.

An extended day on Thursday, Aug. 9 is planned with final music rehearsals, a short Evening Prayer Liturgy, and a family movie night in conjunction with the parish's "Popcorn, Movie & Discussion" night. The movie for the evening will be "The Chronicles of Narnia: The Lion, The Witch and the Wardrobe."

Camp openings are available. Registration deadline is Monday, July 28. Cost is $75 per child and includes all workbooks, music, crafts, lunches, snacks and dinner and popcorn on Thursday.

For reservations, or more information, contact Sacred Heart Rectory at 617-328-8666 or visit the website www.sacredheartquincy.org.

Bible School At Union Congregational Church

An evening program for all ages will be running on Wednesday through Friday evenings, July 18-20, from 6 to 9 p.m. at Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd., Wollaston.

Each evening will begin with a light supper followed by three programs, one for each age group: children, youth and adult.

The children's program, for children from pre-school through the third grade, will feature "Hooked on Bible," and excellent Bible teaching tool which includes movies and activities. This program will end at 7:30 p.m.

The youth program, for youth from 4th to 12th grade, will use the sports of soccer, softball and basketball as an enjoyable format to teach Biblical truths. Each youth will have an opportunity to build their own miniature soccer field, softball field or basketball court.

The adult program, for college age and above, will feature, on Wednesday, the 1988 Richard Gere movie David, followed by discussion; on Thursday, a messianic Bible study, in which the ancient prophecies of Jesus in the Bible will be explored; and, on Friday, a lecture on the ancient United Kingdom of Israel under Saul, David and Solomon.

A special Saturday morning trip to Plimoth Plantation is planned as well. For more information, call the church office at 617-479-6661.

Bethany Congregational Church

Bethany Congregational Church, 18 Spear St., Quincy Center, will have a Sunday Worship and One Room Sunday School at 10 a.m.

Rev. William G. Harding will conduct the service and preach a sermon entitled "Reach Out and Embrace."

Childcare will be available for infants and toddlers.

Following the worship service there will be fellowship time in the Allen Parlor where light refreshments will be served.

Quincy Recognized As Top Supporter Of Project Bread's Walk For Hunger

The League of American Communication Professionals L.A.C., an organization dedicated to supporting, recognizing and advancing excellence in the practice of professional communications, announces Project Bread "The Walk for Hunger" as a first-place platinum award winner in this year's annual report competition, the 2006 Vision Awards.

Project Bread ranked first within its category, which comprised nonprofit organizations with annual revenue sales of up to $10 million and an employee base of up to 100 employees.

Project Bread's reported garnered a perfect score for creativity, message clarity, narrative, and information accessibility.

Through the Walk for Hunger, Project Bread provides millions of dollars each year in privately donated funds. Quincy is one of the top 10 cities where donations are collected and distributed to 400 emergency food programs in 135 communities statewide.

Quincy Community United Methodist

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will have Sunday worship at 10:30 a.m.

The Adult Bible class beings at 9 a.m.

The Rev. Dr. Susan J. Jarek-Glidden will conduct the service. Lector will be John O'Connor. Ushers will be Dottie Hahn and Joan Honig. Coffee hour hosts are Liz Buccella, Nancy Ahonen and Anne Pierce.

All are welcome. The church is handicap accessible.

'Son Harvest County Fair' At Covenant

"Son Harvest County Fair" will be held Monday, through Friday, Aug. 13-17 at Covenant Congregational Church, 315 Whitwell St.

The fair will feature singing, skits, crafts and games as participants learn how to grow "good fruit" in their lives.

Fair hours are 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. daily.

The event is free, but limited to children ages 5 through the fifth grade.

For more information or to register a child, call Covenant Congregational Church at 617-479-5728,

"But the commission that would be established in House Bill 719 would work together on issues such as the maintenance of the bridge prior to them becoming crises.

"If the bridge were to be taken down, so be it.

"Addressing such issues through the commission would allow greater input thus protecting the interests of the neighboring areas of Squantum and Quincy."

Meanwhile, the last that was heard from Menino's spokeswoman, Dot Joyce, was that the Boston mayor was "looking to enhance public access to all of the harbor islands."

"We want to make the harbor islands a wonderful place on visit for everyone," she said.

The request for open access to Moon and Long Islands came from Councillor Kelly after a tour of 25 Quincy residents were refused entry at the gate to the Moon Island causeway.

"Some of us," Kelly wrote to Menino, "remember when Long Island and Moon Island were open to the public for fishing, hiking, bird watching or simply admiring the pristine beauty.

"We considered ourselves fortunate to live so close to the island that we could actually drive out to Long Island after work for a picnic. We would like to be able to do that once again."

Shea said he researched the License Board meetings and found that members had been meeting at 10 a.m. since at least the 1940s.

"Sometimes tradition is important, too," he said. "But it's up to the Board what they want to do."

Other members of the Board include Police Chief Robert Crowley, Fire Chief Phil Pettinelli, Health Commissioner Drew Scheele and Building Inspector Jay Duca.

All were appointed to their jobs by the mayor.

"I don't know many residents that are home at 10 a.m.," said Phelan in his letter to Chairman Shea.

"I think the current time schedule is a detriment to many people and I hope the board considers the change in the interest of public participation."

 Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

OSTEOMYELITIS OF THE FOOT (BONE INFECTION)

Any time you get a sore, ulcer, or cut on your foot, bacteria and other organisms can get in. Sometimes, the body can fight off the germs, and sometimes it can't. If the germs cause an infection, it can spread to the bones in the foot, which is very dangerous and requires prompt medical attention. Symptoms of a bone infection include redness, swelling, or a feeling of heat. Fever or any sort of drainage coming from the wound can also indicate osteomyelitis. Your podiatrist will probably culture the wound and prescribe antibiotics. Sometimes, you may not even know you have a cut, so if you notice these symptoms with an oozing from the toenail, call your doctor.

Whenever our patients are dealing with a medically related problem, we will work with all their healthcare providers to ensure maximum treatment and comfort. We don't treat the entire body, but our experience shows that foot problems can affect, and be affected by, the rest of the body's health. We do treat all manner of foot diseases, conditions, disorders, injuries, and bone deformities. For a compassionate, conservative approach to footcare, coupled with advanced podiatric technology, call us at 781-986-3668, QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER, for an appointment. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

P.S.: Osteomyelitis is more common in men than in women.

Summer Crews At Work

City's 2,400 Hydrants Being Painted, Coded

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Summer work crews have begun painting the city's 2,400 fire hydrants in an effort to spruce up the city and alert firefighters to the different size water lines beneath the surfaces.

"It's really an initiative to buff up our image," Public Works Commissioner Steve O'Donnell said this week, noting there was money set aside in his budget for the project. He said that painting the hydrants fits in with the current neighborhood beautification plans.

In addition, each hydrant cap is being color-coded, according to national standards, to indicate the size of the water pipe serving that line.

Fire Department Inspector John Keegan said the different colored caps will identify "what size of main is beneath (the hydrant).... and how much water to expect out of it...."

Under certain circumstance, Keegan said that firefighters will know by looking at the hydrant cap that they should hook up to a different hydrant served by a larger water main.

O'Donnell said that the 2,400 hydrants are in good working order. However, most of them need a coat of paint and the temporary workers should paint the last one by summer's end.

According to O'Donnell, roughly 40 hydrants out of 2,400 hydrants could be out of order at any one time but that is in line with or lower than other cities or towns.

"You're always going to have some out for repair," O'Donnell said, adding that most hydrant problems occur after traffic accidents or, in cold weather, "winter damage due to snow plows."

After every accident, police notify his department and the fire department when a hydrant is damaged, according to O'Donnell.

City officials just went out to bid for replacement hydrants with a $24,000 budget set aside that O'Donnell said is the normal amount for annual hydrant replacement.

"It will be a little bit less this year," said O'Donnell, noting that last winter's snowfall was lower than normal.

In late March, the City Council reviewed statistics on broken fire hydrants after several councillors charged that there were too many non-working fire hydrants and no system established for communication on the issue between city departments.

At the time, Mayor William Phelan and Fire Chief Timothy Pettinelli called the issue of non-working fire hydrants "a non-issue" and suggested that the numbers were exaggerated.

Several councillors suggested painting non-working hydrants but Mayor William Phelan and O'Donnell rejected that solution.

"I'd rather put the labor and effort into repairing them," O'Donnell said this week, noting that very few hydrants are out of service today.

In March and early April, the fire department statistics list identified 33 defective hydrants and 50 low-flow hydrants with 80 no-drain hydrants. No-drain hydrants are flushed out and do not need repair.

Including Strategic Signs

City Launches Pedestrian Safe Summer Campaign

Mayor William Phelan has launched a pedestrian safety campaign for the summer months.

Phelan highlighted a number of new initiatives to be undertaken including:

Installation of 22 new "Pedestrian Safety" signs at crosswalks throughout Quincy, highlighting the fine for failure to yield to pedestrians.

Follow-up Quincy Police enforcement of pedestrian yield laws at highlighted intersections.

Placing "Pedestrian Safe Summer" signs along high-visibility roadways to encourage motorists to think about pedestrian safety.

Adding a pedestrian walk cycle at the intersection of Southern Artery and Quincy Avenue to allow pedestrians from 1000 Southern Artery to safely access stores.

Adding additional turning arrows at the intersection of East Squantum/West Squantum and Hancock Streets to improve traffic flow in an effort to improve pedestrian and motorist safety.

"More pedestrians use our streets and sidewalks during the warm summer months when school is not in session," said Phelan. "It makes sense that we take steps to ensure the safety of our pedestrians. These steps will help improve public safety and I encourage everyone to obey these important safety laws."

The fine notification crosswalks will be placed at high-use intersections in business districts, near playgrounds, and along Sea Street. The 4' by 8' banners will be placed along main thoroughfares around Quincy.

DPW Commissioner Steve O'Donnell added: "We are working hard to make sure that motorists are aware of pedestrian crossing areas. We can significantly improve public safety simply by education and enforcement."

At Quincy College Coddington Hall High School Construction To Move English Classes

By TOM HENSHAW

The educational routines of English and English as a Second Language students at the present Quincy High School may be slightly disrupted while the new Quincy High School is being built.

Principal Frank Santoro said 22 rooms at the abutting old Coddington School will be used to house the students, department heads and Vice Principal Maureen McNeil.

Which means the young scholars will be studying in a 98-year-old building that is on the National Register of Historic Places, designed by a well-known architect, Charles A. Brigham.

The moving date is Aug. 15 when the current occupant, Quincy College, is due to move out of the old building into more appropriate quarters. It has been known as Coddington Hall.

The high school classes were previously held in the business wing of the high school along with the superintendent's office. That wing is among the first sections to be torn down.

The English students could be back in a high school building as early as December, 2008, when an academy in the rear of the project is finished, said Santoro, but Coddington may be needed until December, 2010.

Mary Morris, spokeswoman for Quincy College, said the college has not yet found a spot to replace its Coddington Hall classrooms but it is negotiating with two places.

The college does not want to identify them while they are under negotiations, she

Appointed By President Bush Quincy Tolerance Imam's Model On Religious Freedom Commission

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

Long-time Quincy resident and religious leader Imam Talal Eid was appointed by President Bush in May, 2007 to serve on the U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom, the first Muslim cleric to ever hold the post.

Eid says he looks forward to working with international leaders towards the same level of religious tolerance he has enjoyed here in Quincy since his arrival in 1982.

"There is no doubt that in the last 25 years there has been great change in the city of Quincy. I think Quincy is a unique city — when I first came here, we were the only religious institute that was not Christian or Jewish."

"I would say the city of Quincy is a good model of tolerance. And today, look at the big Asian community...they are welcome in Quincy and they are enjoying their lives here. That's the uniqueness of Quincy."

Established in 1998, the nine-member commission upon which he is serving is an independent, bipartisan federal agency created to monitor the status of religious freedom abroad. Three commissioners are selected by the President, two are chosen by the leaders of the President's party in Congress, and four by the congressional leaders of the other party.

"I never had any idea that I would be nominated," says Eid. "In 2005, I had received an invitation from the President to attend a dinner at the White House during the month of Ramadan. I was to say prayers after his welcoming address."

Each year President Bush hosts a dinner during the holy month of fasting for Muslim ambassadors and leaders from the U.S. Aware that Muslim guests would need to perform one of their five-daily prayers before the dinner hour, the staff arranged White House space for this.

A speaker system was set up so that the Imam could have the honor of conducting the Azan, (the Islamic call to prayer) which rang out throughout the White House, and then he led the sunset prayers of attendees.

Eid was highly impressed with the efforts to accommodate the Muslim worshippers. "There was a big room we used for prayers; each hall had huge pictures of previous presidents, and these pictures were covered so we could use the space for prayer. It was a positive way of respecting Islam and Muslims, that they were willing to cover a picture so that when we prayed the sunset prayers, we would not feel like we were in a strange atmosphere."

Eid was honored to be placed at the President's table for dinner.

"I was sitting at the table with George Bush; there was one person sitting between us, and since dinner took at least one hour, President Bush entertained the people who were sitting at his table."

"And I was invited back in 2006 for the same dinner. This time Muslims who had performed September 11 search and rescue missions were also invited to attend."

The 56-year-old counselor and religious leader will serve a two year term on the commission, making an estimated four overseas trips per year and attending monthly meetings in Washington.

Each year the commission issues a report which examines countries' commitment to advancing religious freedom and makes independent policy recommendations to the President, the Secretary of State, and the Congress.

The Ramadan dinners at the White House were not the only occasions upon which Eid captured Bush's attention, however. In 2006 the State Department asked him to join a Muslim delegation traveling to several European countries.

"We were to meet with people, exchange ideas about the situation with Muslims. The American embassy in each country prepared meetings for us with Muslim officials and activists, and as part of our visit we had exchanges with the press."

Apparently Eid received a good report card, managing to effectively deal with the media and their challenging questions.

"After this trip the State Department asked me to travel to Egypt to give lectures about Muslims in America and to meet with the press. I traveled to Al-Azhar University in Cairo and to Alexandria. Again, I heard that the reports of my work and my relationship with the press were positive."

Then, in January 2007 he received a call from a White House spokesperson informing him of his nomination to the commission by the President.

"I thought about it for two weeks, then they called me again, and then we confirmed, provided I passed security clearance. I filled out the necessary papers to be investigated by the FBI, and then I waited. And in May, I received word that the position was mine."

With an annual budget of about 3 million dollars, the commission and its employees are based in Washington and monitor religious freedom in countries who are members of the U.N. and who recognize the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Eid said, "Anyone in this category is subject to our observances; in particular, countries who receive assistance from the U.S. Those are the countries that we monitor, and if we see violations of religious freedom, we raise our concern and we communicate with these countries—with the public and with the government officials."

Eid has already made his first official trip for the commission, to Saudi Arabia. Officials of the visited countries are informed that the commission would like to meet with various religious sects and religious minorities for a dialogue.

"Six years ago they found Saudi Arabia to be CPC; that means a country of particular concern. The overall reaction was that maybe 10% of the people do not welcome us, but the government allowed us to come here to discuss these issues and reach an understanding that the government is taking these concerns seriously and is responding to them."

"All minorities who are not enjoying their rights as citizens are invited to talk to us...our job is international religious freedom and human rights. And we have the

Bigger Beach Guide Out Foot, Body Showers Coming To Wollaston Beach

By TOM HENSHAW

The two-year, $7 million improvement project to Wollaston Beach will include body and foot showers on "bumps" adjoining the sidewalks.

"Beach access will be improved and new amenities including benches, foot and body showers, water bubblers, bike racks and landscaping will be added," writes Ward 5 City Councilor Doug Gutro on the new Quincy Beach Guide.

"Finally, a new pavilion in East Elm Park and tot lot equipment will be located adjacent in the Brett Bath House."

The seventh annual edition of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission's Beach Guide is out, bigger and better than ever — but not as big as the publishers would like.

"We had to cut it down," said Commission Chairman Leo Kelly. "It was so big, we couldn't use the stapling machine. We had to staple it by hand. If we can't staple it, we've got a problem."

Whatever, the 2007 edition of the Beach Guide wound up with a hefty 64 pages compared to 56 in the 2006 edition, including a full page instructing kids on how to make a sand castle.

Did you know that you should be careful in choosing a site for your castle because "the tide comes in (and) picking a site too close to the water might wash away your hard work?"

Two pages are devoted to the "wrack line," the beach area between high and low tide where debris and some goodies from the sea are deposited as the tide moves out.

It takes a whole page to describe beach sand as "a mixture of fragments worn down from rocks and shells," which gives the kids something to think about as the build their castles.

Back from the 2006 edition is the ever-popular page that matches the shape of your sunglasses to the shape of your face — a must for those who claim to accessorize well.

One of the many "Fun Things to Do at the Beach" is a crossword puzzle in which all the answers are derived from a knowledge of whales. It's provided by Cetacean Society International.

Chairman Kelly himself lists the Top 10 things you should keep in your beach bag from "medicated lip balm with SPF" to a "healthy snack food like fruit or a power bar" to an MP3 player.

Missing from the 2007 edition is the Forecast for Fishing in Quincy Bay by Jack Lydon, the "Fisherman Extraordinaire," which failed to make the cut on the stapling bench.

But the heart of the Beach Guide is still the abundance of tidal charts on the Fore River (through September), safety tips, for swimmers, boaters and sun bathers and phone numbers for emergencies.

Doug Gutro, vice chairman of the Commission, adds an update on the project to improve Wollaston Beach.

Two Members Indicate Approval 4 p.m. License Board Meetings Taken Under Advisement

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

At least two members of the License Board appear to be in favor of changing the Tuesday morning meeting from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. as suggested by a letter from Mayor William Phelan to give residents and business interests an equal opportunity to attend.

Police Chief Robert Crowley said he agreed with the mayor and said he would support a change in the hours to 4 p.m.

Jay Duca, director of inspection services said he thought it was a "good idea" and said it would allow more residents and also make it easier for ward councillors to attend.

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele said after 65 years of holding morning meetings, he suggested a meeting with others who utilize the building on that day.

Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Business Association opposed the change and said persons who are at work, would have to leave by 3 p.m. to attend at 4 p.m. meeting. She said persons would "lose sometime during the day if one chooses to do it."

Maureen Glynn, a resident of Marina Bay said there are still problems at the bay, and suggested a meeting at 2 p.m. when more residents could participate.

Chairman Joseph Shea read a letter of approval from three members of the Marina Bay Civic Association citing greater public participation.

Shea said on one given Tuesday when the license board meeting was lengthy, he also had to attend a zoning board hearing the same night. The board plans to speak to others who use the City Hall chambers on Tuesdays.

On a motion by Fire Chief Timothy Pettinelli, the board voted to take the issue under advisement and continued the meeting until Aug. 14

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On July 25, 1832, the first recorded railroad accident in U.S. history occurs on the Granite Railway near Quincy, Mass., when a cable snaps, throwing four people from a vacant car and over a 44-foot cliff.

• On July 27, 1901, singer and actor Rudy Vallee is born in Island Point, Vt. One of the first heartthrobs in early entertainment history, Vallee was known as "The Vagabond Lover," after one of his songs.

• On July 24, 1915, the steamer Eastland overturns in the Chicago River, drowning between 800 and 850 of its passengers. Most of the corpses were taken to the Second Regiment Armory, which is now home to "The Oprah Winfrey Show." Some of the show's employees have claimed that the studio is haunted by ghosts of the Eastland disaster.

• On July 28, 1929, President John Kennedy's beautiful and popular wife, Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy, is born into a prominent New York family. On a trip to France in 1961, President Kennedy quipped, "I'm the man who accompanied Jacqueline Kennedy to Paris."

• On July 26, 1947, President Harry Truman signs the National Security Act, which becomes one of the most important pieces of Cold War legislation. The act created the Department of Defense, the National Security Council and the Central Intelligence Agency.

• On July 29, 1958, the United States Congress passes legislation formally inaugurating the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA). Billions of dollars later, Neil Armstrong stepped out of the lunar module Eagle and onto the moon's surface on July 20, 1969.

• On July 23, 1976, members of the American Legion arrive in Philadelphia to celebrate the bicentennial of U.S. independence. By Aug. 2, 22 people were dead and hundreds connected to the gathering were experiencing pneumonia-like symptoms. Their ailment would come to be known as Legionnaires' disease.

Remembering Remick's

Remember Remick's?

Of course, you do.

It was THE store to go to for quality clothing and accessories, personal service and the right price.

A class act.

It was Quincy's premier retail landmark on downtown Hancock Street. Now, sadly, gone for 20 years next week.

Frank Remick made it Quincy's most prestigious store. So prestigious, it drew faithful customers from Boston and throughout the South Shore.

FRANK REMICK

Remember those beautiful decorated windows at Christmas with as many as 60 animated figures delighting children and adults alike. There was a different theme annually.

One year, I remember, it was the "Nutcracker Suite" with moving ballet figures.

As an attraction, those windows were right up there with the Adams Birthplaces and the Adams Mansion. They were almost as much of a Christmas "must" — as going to church.

Then there were the annual art shows with the second floor turned into an art gallery featuring the paintings and sculptures of top artists and drawing as many as 5,000 viewers. There was even a boat show.

And, of course, there was Archie, a 15-pound Humboldt Wolley monkey—a blue blood in the monkey family. Smartly attired in his monogrammed turtle-neck sweaters, Archie presided over the Monkeyshines Shoe Shop for children. He greeted youngsters for several years, cavorting in his pink and gold cage.

But Archie lost his job in 1960 when the kiddie shoe department was eliminated to make room for an expanded customer service department.

Bernice Meldon, director of sales promotion, launched a search for a new home for Archie.

"We are going to be sure Archie gets a home that is full of love," she said.

I was with the Boston Traveler then and wrote a column about Archie and the hunt for his new home.

A Chelmsford couple were happy to give Archie that new home.

"A monkey's paradise," Bernice described it. "With acres of monkey-edible red clover blossoms, indoor and outdoor apartments and the company of a female Capuchin monkey."

Archie must have thought he had died and gone to heaven.

Who could forget the men's clothing department's Ellie Hughes, Ray Josephine, Russ Johnson, Al Monroe? They knew what you liked. And if a suit or jacket came in they thought you would want, they would call you and set it aside.

Frank Remick was proud of his store but more so of his daughter, actress Lee Remick who was born in Quincy.

THE PRESTIGIOUS REMICK'S store was located at 1517 Hancock St. in downtown Quincy. But no one needed the address to get there. Everyone knew where it was.

Miss Remick won many accolades as an actress including an Academy Award nomination for her portrayal of an alcoholic wife in "Days of Wine and Roses" with Jack Lemmon. She had her own star on the Hollywood Walk and was a Life magazine cover girl.

But perhaps her finest tribute as an actress was short, sweet and somewhat private.

It came from her father.

She had played a trappy sexy role in one of her early movies and I asked him for his reaction when he saw it.

Remick smiled and said: "I thought she was so good I could have spanked her."

She became a favorite story at the store.

A young high school girl working part-time one day saw a woman walking around putting items into a shopping bag.

She telephoned upstairs to Bill Draicchio, a Quincy police officer, working security on his own time.

"Just keep an eye on her but don't do anything until I get there," Draicchio told her.

He rushed down the stairs. The girl pointed out the woman. Draicchio looked and stopped.

"That's Lee Remick," he told the girl. "She can have anything in the store."

Miss Remick's son, Matthew Colleran, worked at the store summers and she stopped by to visit him and her father. And, while there, to pick out a few things.

The girl hadn't recognized her because she had not seen her in a movie. But she became a fan that day.

When Miss Remick heard that she had raised the young girl's suspicion by slipping articles into a shopping bag, she smiled and said to her: "You're doing your job."

Frank Remick laughed when he heard about the incident.

Regular employees got accustomed to seeing Miss Remick strolling through the store on a number of occasions.

Local residents were among the first to spot her talent when she was still a virtual unknown.

That was back in the early 1950s when she played a supporting role in "Brigadoon" at the South Shore Music Theater.

In those days, she was known as "Frank Remick's daughter." But later, after roles in "A Face In The Crowd," "Anatomy Of A Murder" and "The Long Hot Summer," he became to be known as "Lee Remick's father." And proud of it.

Remick's was sold in 1979. Frank Remick died at 73 in 1983. Lee Remick died in 1991 at 55.

Remick's closed its doors July 31, 1987. Sad dates for Quincy.

Candidates Night For Special Education Aug. 14

The Quincy Parent Advisory Council for Special Education will hold a candidates night for School Committee candidates Tuesday, Aug. 14, at 7 p.m. in the cafeteria of the Lincoln-Hancock School, 300 Granville St.

The candidates, Jo-Ann Bragg, Elaine Dwyer, David

McCarthy, Eileen Mullen and Nick Puleo, have been invited to discuss their backgrounds, platforms, viewpoints and the issues facing the schools.

The candidates will be asked to respond to series of prepared questions. An audience question and answer period will be included.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN early 1920s real photo postcard view of Wollaston Beach showing the yacht clubs in the distance. This picture was taken from the privately owned bath-houses that were on the site of today's Beachcomber. It was a destination for motorcycles even then. Before the first seawall was built, just after this photo, high tides such as the one seen here left little beach to use, and on stormy days the water easily came across the road. Note the on-street parking arrangement. The bathhouses and other buildings in this area were built on pilings to keep them above the water. The road was built in the early 1900s by the Metropolitan Commission as part of a network of scenic roads around Boston, but also to cap a sewer pipe under it that runs from Squantum to Nut Island at the end of Houghs Neck. One hundred years later, there are still some remnants of the post and rail fence shown along here. In the 1800s, the marshes that were in this area of the shoreline were the site of Josiah Quincy's salt-works. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Revitalization Plan And Planning

It would be a nice gesture if The Quincy Sun could dedicate a page to the citizens of Quincy's opposition to the so-called Revitalization of it's downtown center, also including the park idea in front of City Hall.

This is a very big issue to our citizens, and would give them a chance to air their views. People, here, are talking about this issue, and that it's not in the public interest to suppress their opinions.

How else are we going to know if the majority of citizens living in Quincy feel the same way?

Another past and present issue we still face is parking, as Quincy never knew the car was the coming thing, and still doesn't.

I'm not saying what the little lady on the TV ad, "Where's the beef?" I'm saying, "Where's the parking?"

Does anyone remember, as I do, when the original plan for downtown Quincy was to bring back retail businesses. If our city officials had really wanted to bring back businesses, in the first place, they would have made more parking places available and free.

Next time you whiz by on the concourse cut-off through downtown Quincy to Southern Artery, don't forget to look quickly, at the whistle stop you passed by,

and say, "Oh, was that Quincy Center?"

Praise For Tom Koch

Reference to the letter regarding Mark Jaehnig and Park Department, The Quincy Sun issue dated July 12.

In all fairness to Tom Koch who held the position of park director for a long time, whereas Mark Jaehnig just took over the job recently [and is doing a great job], it is unfair to give him credit for the great work that Tom did over many years.

We are sure there are thousands of Quincy residents who recognized and are aware of what Tom did.

Quincy never looked so good when he stepped down

Many thanks Tom, and good luck

Agrees With Sunbeams Column On George Bush

Dear Mr. Bosworth: Congratulations on your Sunbeams column of July 12! You made so many good points in it.

First, you were so right to note that John Quincy Adams "would have known enough to stay out of a hellhole like Iraq." You were also so right in noting that Adams would have taken a diplomatic approach to the Iraq situation rather than Bush's cowboy diplomacy. You're right about how gung-ho Bush was to get us into war, how quick he was to declare "Mission Accomplished," and the horrible death toll and equally horrible number of wounded and Iraqi civilian deaths.

I'm glad you regret your vote for Bush and your question is the ultimate correct one, "what did we really accomplish?"

Pleased About Track At Pageant Field

I am so pleased that we will finally be getting a track at Pageant Field.

As a dog lover, I can understand the concern of the dog walkers who use the park. As much as I love dogs, however, I love children even more, and it is about time the kids participating in the sport have a regulation size track on which to compete children involved, and the city has already wasted enough time on this issue. A well built and maintained track will not be an eyesore, and Quincy Track Club members and high school students will have use of Pageant Field, just as the children involved in other sports now have.

Let's build it!

A Thank-You To Tom Koch

The other day I received a form letter stating, "I'm sorry I missed you." I thought "sure another politician sitting in office dictating this."

I was about to throw it away when I noticed some handwriting on the bottom. It said, "I noticed the Marine flag flying with Old Glory, you must be a proud veteran—thank you for your service."

The older we get the more we cherish someone remembering World War II and thanking us. This letter is in my scrapbook of memories.

Thank you Tom Koch.

The connector is designed to hook up with the Burgin Parkway (Upland Rd.) Extension which in turn is designed to bring traffic from the South Shore into downtown Quincy.

CABLE TV IN QUINCY STILL 1 1/2 YEARS AWAY
Cable television in some 50 percent of the homes in Quincy is still at least a year and a half away.

George Riley, chairman of the Mayor's Advisory Committee on Cable Television, told a hearing Monday that his group probably would make its recommendation to Mayor Arthur Tobin around Labor Day.

After that, he said, the bidding process, including public hearings, will take more time and then it will be 15 to 18 months for the winning company to construct facilities in the city.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

THE ARTS AFFAIR on the Boardwalk at Marina Bay will be held Saturday, Aug. 4 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Sunday, Aug. 5 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The free, two-day event will feature works by members of 13 area Art Associations, including the Quincy Art Association.

12th Annual Arts Affair Aug. 4-5 At Marina Bay

The 12th annual Arts Affair on the Boardwalk at Marina Bay will be held Saturday, Aug. 4 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Sunday, Aug. 5 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

There is free parking, free admission and prize drawings. Art demonstrations will be featured throughout both days.

In the event of inclement weather, the exhibit will be moved indoors to the lobby of the Corporate Park Building located across from the Boardwalk at 500 Victory Rd.

The event will feature works by members of the 13-area Art Associations. Entries will include oil and acrylic, watercolor, mixed media, drawing, sculpture and photography, color, black & white, and digital. An estimated 7,000 people are expected to attend the two-day event.

Works exhibited represent:

sent:

Braintree Art Association, Brockton Artists' Circle, Canton Art Association, Quincy Art Association, Hull Artists' Studio Connection, Hyde Park Art Association, Milton Art Museum Art Association, Norwood Art Association, Scituate Art Association, South Boston Art Association, South Shore Art Center, West Roxbury Art Association and Weymouth Art Association.

The event will also feature a raffle table at the hospitality tent on the boardwalk with art work donated by several Arts Affair exhibitors.

In addition, completion of the new exhibition displays is almost finished. The open design of the new boardwalk displays allows the beauty of Boston Harbor to be a backdrop for one of the country's largest outdoor art exhibitions.

As planning for the event began in January, the committee was faced with an unexpected financial challenge. Upon inspection, the exhibition displays had all but deteriorated, and were rendered unsafe for use on the boardwalk, and too feeble to hold artwork.

Originally, these displays were built at a cost of about $20,000, and had help up well over the past 11 years, until now. This year, all of the displays needed to be replaced in time for the August event.

The Arts Affair is offering a unique naming opportunity. Orders are being taken for custom engraved brass nameplates that will be installed on each new boardwalk display. There are a limited number available. For more information or to order, contact William E. Beyer at 508-586-4906.

Harry Potter Book Discussions At Library

Harry Potter fans of all ages can join one or both discussions of the famous series at local libraries. This is just one part of the library's "Catch the Beat" summer program.

The Harry Potter book discussions are scheduled at 7 p.m. Thursday, June 26 at the Thomas Crane Library, Children's Room, 40 Washington St., Quincy or at 2 p.m. Friday, Aug. 17, at the North Quincy Branch, 391 Hancock St.

Planners expect a lively discussion of the seven book series from the beginning page to the end and of everything in between.

Discussions will likely focus on the final book of the series so those who haven't completed the series should beware of spoilers spilling all the details.

All are welcome, especially children, ten years old and older.

The Harry Potter discussions are just one of the library's "Catch the Beat" programs scheduled this summer. Registration for the library's second Talent Night begins Monday, July 30. The show will be held on at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 8, in the Children's Room of the Main Library, 391 Hancock St.

Also on the library schedule is the weekly Readers' Raffle. Readers can win gift cards for new books.

In order to qualify, patrons just pick up book review slips at the Main Library or any branch library. They then read a book or listen to a book, identify it on a slip and return the slip to any library branch.

Each slip is entered into the weekly drawings for bookstore gift cards. The drawings are scheduled each Friday afternoon.

Residents should also watch for the library's "Art-to-Go" series. The project for the week of July 31 will be "Megaphones."

Participants range in age from toddlers to school age children who may drop in from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. at different library locations to participate in the program or pick up supplies.

The arts projects travel citywide and materials are available. On Mondays, supplies are available at the Main Library Children's Room, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center. Supplies are available at Adams Shore Branch, 519 Sea St. on Tuesdays; at the Wollaston Branch, 41 Beale St. on Wednesdays; and at the North Quincy Branch, 391 Hancock St., on Thursdays.

In addition, the Summer Storyteller's Series will feature Brazilian storyteller Antonio Rocha who will present a solo theater performance of Crossroads tales on Tuesday, July 31 at 7 p.m.

Rocha will perform for children ages five and older in the large meeting room at the Main Library, Quincy Square. The Quincy Arts Council sponsors the program.

Also on the calendar are three "Pajama Storytime" dates sponsored by the Quincy Arts Council and the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

Storyteller Joan Goodman presents "Jumping Jammies," a pajama storytime designed especially for children, ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult.

Mound Street Beach Movies Under Stars

"Summer Rental," starring the late John Candy, will be on the playbill Thursday, Aug. 2, and "Happy Feet," starring a bevy of cute little penguins, will follow Thursday, Aug. 23, in the Movies Under the Stars at Mound Street Beach, Quincy Point.

The flicks, both rated PG, will commence at 7 p.m. on both nights, sponsored by the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission and Mayor William Phelan.

Refreshment and snacks will be available but moviegoers are urged to bring their own, along with blanket, chair and flashlight.

For more information, call Leo Kelly, chair of the Beaches and Coastal Commission, at 617-773-1534.

Fr. Bill's 13th Annual Food Fest, Auction July 31

Father Bill's Place will host its 13th annual Food Fest & Auction, the largest fund-raising event on the South Shore, Tuesday, July 31, from 6 to 10 p.m. at the Water Works in Marina Bay.

Tickets to the event are $100 and may be purchased at www.fatherbillsplace.org or by calling the agency's development office at 617-770-3314.

The Food Fest will feature the Epicurean efforts of more than 40 of the finest local restaurants, bakeries and wine distributors in the area.

The Auction will include a guitar autographed by Jimmy Buffet, trips for two to Sonoma, Calif., and Beaver Creek, Colo., Red Sox and Patriots tickets and rare sports memorabilia.

The annual event is sponsored by Hill, Holliday, Connors, Cosmopolis, Inc.; William Gallagher Associates, Jay Cashman, Inc.; Keith Construction and New England Realty Group.

Proceeds from the Food Fest & Auction will directly benefit individuals and families like Karen, a cancer survivor and her 18-year-old son, Andy.

When she was diagnosed with cancer, Karen voluntarily left her job of 15 years with an investment company and found another job with a trucking company.

The trucking company was taken over by another and Karen not only lost that job but she lost her home when her landlord sold the building where she had an apartment.

Suddenly homeless and out of work, Karen and Andy were referred to the city of Quincy's Commission on the Family's two-year transitional housing program for homeless families.

With only a few months remaining in their transitional housing unit, Karen and her son were referred to Father Bill's Place, where an opening was found in one of its 120 supportive housing units.

Next week, Karen and Andy will move into an apartment in Quincy where she can devote time to recovering from her upcoming surgeries rather than worrying about a home of her own.

It was the funds raised at the Food Fest & Auction that helped make that possible.

Quincy High 1942 Class Reunion Sept. 20

The Quincy High School class of 1942 will hold its 65th anniversary reunion Thursday, Sept. 20.

The event will be from noon to 4 p.m. at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

Reservation deadline is Aug. 21.

Classmates seeking more information are asked to contact committee member Norma (Crocker) Demaggio at 617-773-2868.

Other members of the committee are: Ruth (Hedman) Brown, Ruth (Wermer) Craig, John Ortiz, Carol (Furlong) Whittaker, Florence (Libertine) Peterson and Doris (Thompson) Allen.

NQHS 1965 Class Reunion Aug. 25

The North Quincy High School class of 1965 will hold a class reunion on Saturday, Aug. 25 from 4 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the Best Western Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St.,

North Quincy.

The dress code is casual and there is no cover charge. There will be a DJ and a cash bar. Food may be ordered from the menu.

For additional information, contact Rick Goldstein at rickgoldstein1@verizon.net or 781-233-0785 or Bill 'Oakie' O'Connell at billoconnell81@comcast.net or 617-406-7557.

Quincy HS '57 Seeks Missing Classmates

The Quincy High School Class of 1957 will hold its 50th reunion celebration Saturday, Sept. 15, at 6 p.m. at the Sheraton-Braintree Hotel on Forbes Road in Braintree.

Tickets are $75 per person.

The Reunion Committee is seeking the whereabouts of 19 missing classmates, including:

Susan Allen, William C. Anderson, Marion L. Burns, Agnes L. Ferguson, Kenneth Graham, Quintin Gomez, Daniel L. Lennon, Jo-Ann Marchitelli, Alma Myers.

For more details, call Don Green at 617-755-5745.

Three Quincy Residents Receive Awards At Thayer Graduation

Three Quincy residents who recently graduated from Thayer Academy in Braintree also received special awards at the commencement.

They are:

Christopher Joseph Iredale, Kevin Doo and Alicia M. Hemenway.

Iredale received two awards: Headmaster's Award and the Helen Alden Breen Dramatics Award.

Awarded by the headmaster with the approval of the faculty, the award is presented to a member of the senior class whose character, scholarship, and sportsmanship best exemplify the spirit that is Thayer.

The Helen Alden Breen Dramatics Award is given to a student who has contributed a great deal of time, interest and ability either on stage or backstage, or both, in school productions.

Doo received the Charles R. Mangat-Rai Prize for Computer Programming. It is awarded to students at Thayer who, during the time they took computer, and after, through qualities of patience, sound logic and skill in the use of algorithms, did outstanding work in computer science.

Hemenway received the Nathaniel Augustine Thayer Scholarship. The award is given by Florence Hamilton Thayer in memory of her son, a distinguished engineer. The scholarship is offered annually to a senior who has passed the entrance examinations to an institution of high standing to pursue studies in science or related fields.

Koch Calls For Community Effort To Fight Drug Problem

Mayoral candidate Tom Koch says that, in addition to his proposed plan to fight the city's drug problems, "a true community effort" is also needed.

"Where there is a will, there is a way," Koch said, adding that his plan, announced two weeks ago, for beefed-up enforcement and a new leadership role by City Hall has been well received to date.

"But we need all the best that our city has to offer to tackle this issue. We need to provide the tools to the police, non-profit groups, and parents struggling with this problem every day. And we need the Mayor's office to play a leading role."

Koch said that recent studies showing a troubling drug abuse rate in Quincy and feedback from residents across the city prompted him to propose a series of initiatives aimed at fighting the drug problem. But those plans will only be effective through a full and concerted effort by City Hall and the community, Koch said.

"City Hall needs to lead on this issue, and that's exactly what we intend to do," Koch said. "When we are elected, we will have a team together and there will be no doubt that City Hall leads that team. We are going to take a stand the entire city is going to be a part of it."

As part of his plan, Koch proposed:

- Immediately double the size of the five-person Drug Unit by using existing resources and by giving the police the flexibility to focus resources to critical areas

- Increase cooperation with the State Police, the MBTA police, and federal agencies, to tap resources not currently used in Quincy

- Expand the role of the Community Police Unit to include drug unit operations. In addition to their regular assignment, community police officers will regularly work together with detectives on investigations, provide information and help neighborhoods and families deal with the aftermath of drug cases.

- Use the mayor's office as the central point for a new partnership with schools, police, non-profit agencies and hospitals to increase treatment, support and prevention programs.

- Apply for grant money, hold regular community forums, and work with existing groups, such as the self-formed "Parents Helping Parents" to expand outreach into neighborhoods.

For more information, contact Koch headquarters at 617-773-KOCH or the website www.kochforquincy.com.

Puleo Files Nomination Papers For School Committee

School Committee candidate Nick Puleo filed his nomination papers with over 400 signatures in support of his candidacy last Friday.

Only 50 signatures are required but he said he plans to collect more before the July 31 deadline.

"The nomination process is a great chance to go out and listen to the concerns of parents, teachers, and neighbors," Puleo said. "The outpouring of support allowed us to collect many more signatures than what was required. It sets a great tone for our campaign. I really believe that someone interested in public office should always go above and beyond what's expected of them."

"At this point, I have been campaigning for a long time and what a wonderful time it has been," said Puleo. "While the field of candidates has changed, the original goal has remained the same. This run has never been about an 'open seat,' but rather about bringing positive change to our school system."

"As the only public budget professional running for school committee, I know I can bring a new, much-needed perspective to our school funding."

Puleo is a Senior Budget Analyst for the Senate Committee on Ways and Means, and is charged with the development and oversight over more than $3.2 billion in state spending. During his time at the Committee, he has identified millions of dollars in cost savings and has found new ways to bring federal funding into the state.

"At their core, many of the issues facing our school district revolve around money. With the experience and knowledge from my professional background, I know we can bring tremendous new resources to our schools at little-or-no cost to the taxpayer. I also feel that there are many ways to improve our current funding structure."

In the coming weeks, Puleo plans to put forward a number of ways in which the schools can maximize revenue, streamline services, and improve the quality of education for Quincy's children.

"This campaign is about improving the quality of our schools, and broadening the dialogue," Puleo said. "People should know that their voices are important, and will be heard. I encourage everyone to be involved, and to contact me with their ideas, comments, and concerns."

Those wishing to share their ideas for Quincy's schools with Puleo should email him at puleo2007@gmail.com or write to: Nick Puleo, 31 Acton Street, Quincy, MA 02170.

LICENSE BOARD BRIEFS

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

- Granted a Keno License to Robert Boules, owner of Kwincy's Bar & Grille, 39 Cottage Ave. Police Chief Robert Crowley asked Boules why the restaurant hadn't opened since the license board granted the license last December. Boules said there was a water problem that the landlord and he were trying to solve before any other work is done.

- Granted a one day permit to John Brothers, executive director of the Quincy Asian Resources, to hold the 20th annual August Moon Festival, Sunday, Aug. 19 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. (rain date is Aug. 26) on 1400-1600 Hancock St. at the same location as the Sidewalk Sale. About 100 tents will be used for the event, Brothers said.

- Granted a one day permit to John Yazwinski, executive director of Father Bill's Place for the 13th annual Food Fest & Auction, Tuesday, July 31 at Waterworks, Marina Bay.
- Continued a hearing regarding a request from Tedeschi's on Adams Street for a change of opening hours from 7 a.m. to 5 a.m. Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis wrote a letter of support, but for a 6 a.m. opening instead. However, the board could not take a vote because Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said he wants to meet with the neighbors. Ward 3 is across the street from Montilio's Bakery, while Ward 4 is Tedeschi's.

- Granted a change of managers at Captain Fishbones, 332 Victory Rd. from Sheldon Cohen to Eric Buckley.

- Granted a request of JBA Mini Mart & Gas Inc., doing business as Furnace Brook Gas & Convenience, 507 Furnace Brook Pkwy for a Gas Station & common victualer license to Ho-Hac Nguyen.

- Granted a common victualer license to Wayne Cann, doing business as Supreme Pizza, 271 Quincy Ave.

- Granted a request of Greater Boston Hospitality, Inc. doing business as Yesterday's 536 Washington St. Eric Ricupero, manager for transfer and pledge of the common victualer, all alcoholic, cabaret & pinball/video licenses presently held by George Pepdionovic, doing business as Mystic Lounge, Atty. John Aieta, counsel.

- Granted to Noel Bola, owner of the Irish Pub, Billings Rd., an extension of premises for Aug. 17 from 12 noon to 8 p.m. for a fundraiser in memory of Dennis Thompson.

- Continued until Aug. 14 a request of VSP Convenience Inc., doing business as Joe's Market Place, 260 Centre St. Bharatiben A. Patel, manager for the transfer of the retail beer and wine license held by SSR Convenience, Inc. Atty. Arthur Pearlman, counsel.

- Granted a request of Triple X, LLC, doing business as Blue 22, Garvin Chan, manager and the transfer and pledge of the common victualer, all alcoholic restaurant and cabaret license held by Fajita & Rita's, Inc. 1237 Hancock St.

- Granted a request to Austin O'Malley, permission to alter the premises to provide patio service of Gindante, Inc., doing business as Hancock Tavern, 668 Hancock St. The extra seating will be for 20 persons outside not to exceed the 94 capacity, no music allowed and closing time of 11 p.m.

Phenom-Pineapple Freeze

Can't tell you how many family members arrive at our home each summer, not only to swim in the pool, but enjoy refreshments.

In addition to trying to find different foods to serve, I am also looking for a cool dessert, an alternative to ice cream.

I found a recipe for an incredible pineapple freeze, so easy to make and if you love pineapple, you will love this recipe. And above all, there is no cooking whatsoever. You just mix and freeze.

Phenom-Pineapple Freeze
1 cup dairy sour cream

1-15 ounce can sweetened condensed milk
2 cups milk (2% is fine)
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1-8 ounce can or 1 cup crushed pineapple (drained)

Blend together the sour cream and the condensed milk. Stir in the milk and lemon juice. Freeze in a one quart refrigerator ice tray until it is partially frozen.

Stir in the drained pineapple, and freeze until firm. Then enjoy!

'Remants' In Final Concert On The Lawn

The roots music quartet The Remnants will perform Sunday, July 29, at 3 p.m. in the final concert on the lawn at the Thomas Crane Public Library lawn, 40 Washington St.

The Remnants combine vocal harmonies with instrumentals in a performance of folk, country, bluegrass and gospel, many of them their own original songs.

The Remnants are Joe Pereira on vocals, guitar, fiddle and harmonica, Ellen Breen on vocals and guitar, Steve Emma on vocals, guitar and mandolin, and Jason Costa on vocals and bass.

The concert will last one hour and will be held in the main library's atrium if the weather turns inclement. It's sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

For more information, call 617-376-1301 or visit thomascranepubliclibrary.org.

Wheelock Family Troupers To Perform At Beechwood

The Wheelock Family Theatre Story Troupers, an ensemble of teen aged actors, will appear today (Thursday) at 10:15 a.m. at Beechwood on the Bay.

The show, "Troupers Perfect Guide for Perfect Manners," is an original one based on children's short stories and poems with a lot of action, music and movement.

Stories and characters include such favorites as Dinah at Albert's, Martha Walks the Dog, Monster Manners, Tissue, Please, Toestomper & the Caterpillars, What Do You Do, Dear, and Where the Wild Things Are.

The show is designed for pre-schoolers ages 3, 4 and 5.

The ensemble is made up of actors ages 13 to 17 who are studying at the Wheelock Family Theatre and perform for young audiences through the Greater Boston area.

Traffic Study Wanted Java Java Drive Thru Gets Temporary Red Light

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board Tuesday voted to continue a hearing on the status of Java Java Drive Thru, 60 Quincy Shore Drive after listening to a progress report from Atty. Carl Johnson.

Steve Hebert first came before the board more than two years ago proposing a drive thru offering coffee, donuts and muffins.

Two weeks ago, the board said instead of a common victualer license Hebert should apply for a fast food license, since no one would be eating on the premises.

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele said there was a bank at the site where Hebert wants to have a drive-thru. And at that time, the bank did not open until 9 a.m.

Scheele said residents who live in condos around the site would not appreciate loud voices coming at 6 a.m. in the morning yelling "I want eight coffees to go."

Johnson, who said he did not represent Hebert at the onset told the board that he didn't feel as though fast food was within the jurisdiction of the license board.

However, Chairman Joseph Shea disputed that fact stating that the original proposposal was for a common victualer license.

Jay Duca, director of inspectional services said the whole issue is traffic, and suggested that an independent traffic survey should be held.

Although Johnson's report was lengthy, Police Chief Robert Crowley's motion was not.

Crowley made the motion to continue until Aug. 14 with "no more meetings after that" pertaining to Java Java, and asked the solicitor's office to procure an independent person for a traffic study.

Mayor To Reconvene Recycling Committee

Mayor William Phelan has asked residents interested in serving on the City's Recycling Commission to submit a letter of interest to the DPW.

The Recycling Committee is part of Phelan's "Act Locally" campaign announced earlier this year.

"Act Locally" included the State's largest Energy Conservation program under the new Energy Savings Law, the reconvening of the Recycling Committee, a new procurement policy on environmentally-friendly products, achieving "green" status for the new Quincy High School, and exploring renewable energy options for Quincy.

"I encourage Quincy residents that have the time and interest to participate on this important committee to submit a letter to the DPW," said Phelan. "We have made significant strides in the area of recycling, but we can always do more. The committee will help explore ideas on how to better promote recycling in our city and encourage more residents to participate."

Phelan highlighted that Quincy recycled 3% more material last year than the prior year. A pilot program and curriculum in the Quincy Public Schools was also very successful.

"Recycling is good for our environment and good for our taxpayers," Phelan said. "It reduces our waste disposal costs and removes products from landfills. I encourage people to participate as much as possible."

Residents interested in serving can send a letter to: Fred Happell, Program Manager, DPW, c/o 55 Sea Street, Quincy, MA 02169.

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, July 17, at approximately 3 a.m., Officer Scott Doherty, on the walking beat in Wollaston Center, approached the 7-11 Store and observed two teenage males sitting on the curb area at the store.

Sgt. J.P. Kelly had assigned Officer Doherty and Officer Christopher McDermott to patrol the area on foot, in plain clothes, due to the recent rash of breaks into automobiles. Officer McDermott entered the store and radioed Officer Doherty that he was going to confront the two males, who he also believed were runaways from a group home the night before.

Officer McDermott approached the two males and confirmed that they were yesterday's runaways. He took out his badge and identified himself as a Police Officer. Sgt. Kelly, Officer Mike Powers and Officer Patrick Folan arrived on scene.

The males stated that they were both 15 years old. Officer McDermott saw a cup holder from a vehicle between the males (suspects) full of change and asked them where it came from. One of the suspects said that he was in a car with a friend who was speeding, so he told his friend to slow down just as a police officer drove by. He said his friend gave him the cup holder full of change because "he owed me" for keeping him out of trouble.

The officers all recognized this story as "ridiculous" and had the suspects stand up to be pat-frisked. Both suspects put their hands in their pockets immediately and removed them as directed.

As Officer McDermott frisked the first suspect, he detected a large amount of coins, a cell phone charger and a cell phone in his pants pocket. The suspect was asked why he would have a cell phone charger if he was not old enough to drive and again, the suspect said that a "friend" gave it to him.

On the second suspect, Officers found a pack of cigarettes, a radio faceplate and some wires. This suspect also relied on the "friend" story when asked where he obtained these items. Communications called the group home, who confirmed that the suspects were runaways again. Both suspects were taken into custody for being runaways and for "Receiving Stolen Property."

During a thorough search prior to transport to the station, another faceplate to a stereo, music CD's, a pack of Kool cigarettes and a car charger were found on the second suspect. The first suspect also had a bank debit card and three other cell phones. After being given Miranda Rights, the suspect with the debit card was asked where he got it and he responded, "At the beach."

Using the debit card name, Officer Powers located the victim's address on Waterston Avenue. He scanned the car and saw that the interior was in disarray and there were CD holders strewn about the street.

The victim was contacted and came out to speak with the Officer. She confirmed that the cup holder was hers and that the debit card was also her property. Another car was discovered in similar condition and that owner was able to identify CD's that were missing that were found on the suspects. A few hours later, a victim on Sachem Street called the station to report that his car had been entered and his cell phone was missing. Officer McDermott advised the victim that he had recovered his cell phone and charger, which were found on the first suspect. Nice Work!

In this case, as well as the majority of car breaks, cars are left unlocked and the victims leave valuables inside. There is very little noise made opening an unlocked car door and quickly searching through it for unprotected valuables.

Phelan Campaign Volunteers Clean Up Squaw Rock Park

Mayor William Phelan led 40 volunteers in a community clean-up of Squaw Rock Park in Squantum last Tuesday.

"I am glad that so many community-minded folks have joined my campaign and we are using this resource for a greater benefit," said Phelan. "We are having fun and making our city a better place to live in the process. I want to thank all of the volunteers that made our first community service project of the year such a great success."

Volunteers cleaned debris and widened walking paths throughout the 17-acre park.

More than 20 bags of litter and trimmings were removed as part of the project. Volunteer Donna McGaughey notes, "I never knew this beautiful park was here and I was glad to help clean it up. I hope more people get to enjoy it because of our work."

The Phelan campaign decided to trade-in two sign-holdings each month for community service projects in the city. Squaw Rock park is a 17-acre waterfront park at the end of Dorchester Street, just prior to the entrance to Moon and Long Islands.

"We will continue to conduct community service projects throughout the campaign," said Phelan. "It may cost us some visibility, but we can use our energies to help people and make Quincy better. That's what we plan on doing and that's what this campaign is all about."

For more information on community service events or for the campaign to re-elect Phelan, visit www.votemayorphelan.org or call (617) 328-3111.

including the drainage system to reduce pollution.

New amenities at the state-owned beach will include benches, water bubblers and foot and body showers on sidewalk "bumps" scattered through the parking areas.

There are brief descriptions of the city-owned beaches, how to get there and where to park when you do, as well as the telephone number to call (617-376-1288) for a water quality report.

For more fun in the sun.

use sunscreen SPF30+, wear a wide-brim hat and encourage indoor or shaded activities between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

If the kids resist or squirm when you try to put sunscreen on their bodies, make a game of it, like give them a sticker every time they put it on or sing a nursery rhyme while applying it.

On hot days, particularly if you are very young or very old, drink plenty of water, stay in the shade and use common sense, the Beach Guide recommends.

There is even a pre-departure check list for boaters, including the minimum Federal required equipment and the recommended equipment and safety check and tests.

The Guide is dedicated to the memory of the late Paul Zambruno, the Park Department worker who helped the Commission with the nuts and bolts of their beach activities for so long.

It was put together by the Data Processing Department's Ron Donovan, Kathy Curran and Jack Lydon.

High School Construction To Move English Classes

said.

Whatever happens eventually to the Coddington School, built in 1909, is anybody's guess but chances are good it will not be replaced by condos as long as it is on the National Register of Historic Places.

"They'd be hard-pressed to tear it down," said Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, curator of the Quincy Historical Society.

Santorio said the new high school is designed in the form of academic academies that will foster interdisciplinary partnerships among subjects.

"What that means is that we will learn by way of connections to each other," he said.

"In the real world we do not leave our homes in the morning and do 50 minutes of Math followed by 50 minutes of English and so on.

"Real world experiences are connected and we will ask our teachers to partner in instruction and become interdisciplinary.

For example, he added, "our Arts and Humanities Academy will house our English, Social Studies, Foreign Language, Visual Arts and Performing Arts Departments. This will allow teachers and programs to integrate."

This means that the educational complex on Coddington Street will no longer be known as Quincy High School and Center for Technical Training.

It will be Quincy High School with an East and West Campus, and, temporarily, a Coddington Campus.

"For those not familiar with our high school," said Santorio, "there is a perception that we are two schools and students only cross the bridge for technical programs or that we are two separate populations.

We are a comprehensive high school enhanced by our connections in our program of studies. We are one."

LifeLine Screening Aug. 17

Residents living in and around Quincy may register for a Friday, Aug. 17 stroke-screening clinic at the Quincy Park and Recreation Department, 1 Merrymount Parkway by calling 1-877-237-1287.

Appointments begin at 9 a.m. and the complete screening program takes less than an hour. Cost of the entire package, which is provided by LifeLine Screening of Cleveland OH, is $125. The company has 85 ultrasound teams on staff traveling to communities all over the country.

Technicians use ultrasound technology and scan for blocked arteries, aortic aneurysms and hardening of the arteries in the legs as well as the risk of osteoporosis. Problems in such areas can lead to strokes, a ruptured aorta and heart disease.

In order to avoid such medical problems, the entire wellness package offers screening of the Carotid Artery and Abdominal Aortic Artery, as well as bone density factors. The fourth screening determines the Ankle Brachial Index which gauges the possibility of hardening of the arteries.

Siciliano Trial Opens In Norfolk Court

The trial of Quincy's former deputy director of emergency management Tony Siciliano on child rape charges got underway slowly in Norfolk Superior Court Monday.

The court spent the first day picking a jury and Prosecutor Courtney Linnehan and Defense Attorney Francis X. Collins devoted their time to arguing final pretrial motions.

Opening remarks took up most of the time during the Tuesday session. The trial was expected to last the remainder of the week.

Siciliano, 65, who was fired from his emergency management post by Mayor William Phelan in 2002, is charged with two counts of statutory rape and a single count of indecent assault and battery, both of a child under 14.

He is accused of using his position in emergency management to further sexual relationships with two teenage boys who had been recruited to join his Community Emergency Response Team to work civic events and disasters.

The rapes are alleged to have occurred between 1995 and 1998 when the two boys were 13 and 16 years old. They are now 21 and 25.

What To Do Before You Put Your Home Up For Sale

(NAPS) - When selling your house, you may first think about how your house looks from the outside, but inner beauty is also important. Fortunately, there's a lot you can do for relatively little money that can make your home stand out to prospective buyers.

So, what can you do to improve the appeal of your home? Before rushing to purchase expensive new flooring and countertops, the experts at Budget Blinds, the nation's leading custom window coverings franchise, offer these cost-effective suggestions:

- Clean up - A tidy home is more appealing than a messy one. Take a good look at your window treatments. Are the draperies dingy, the blinds banged up, the shutters shabby? Perhaps replacing your treatments with new ones will do the trick.

- Depersonalize rooms -

There's a reason white and off-white are the leading colors for window treatments-they're safe. Replacing the pink and orange floral draperies in your little girl's room with a simple roller shade will allow the couple to decide for themselves whose room it will be.

- Update your look - If your window treatments are still stuck in the 90s, refreshing them with a new cellular shade or faux wood horizontal blinds may be helpful in moving your property faster.

- Create a focal point - If you have a great view, call attention to it by bundling your window treatments. Bundling is the practice of combining two classic window treatments on one window. For example, layer a sheer drapery panel over a roller shade or window shading to add drama.

Further, use draperies to visually lengthen a short window or camouflage a harsh angle.

- Use window treatments - To tone down harsh sunlight during photo shoots.

- Add blackout

Give Oil Stains the Brush Off

Q. In a recent column, a reader wrote in about an oil leak on the floor of his shed. My experience was with a rather large stain from a 1984 Ford Ranger on my garage floor. I used the old-fashioned floor dry found at the auto store. Sprinkle it on liberally, and let it set for a week or two; it will suck the oil right out of the cement. I have no trouble with stains on my garage floor since finding that solution.

The floor dry is the blue clay, chunky style. I don't know if the newfangled "fine-cut" stuff works or not. Hope this works! - Kevin N., via e-mail

A. Thanks, Kevin! Floor-Dry, as Kevin said above, can be found at auto parts stores and equipment suppliers. It's a clay-based absorbent sold in bags that can be sprinkled over oil stains and swept away.

Q. The way I clean oil drips and stains on concrete is to saturate the stain with brake cleaner, then cover it with kitty litter or a product called Oil-Dry. I let it sit overnight, then sweep it up. Generally, the stain is all gone with the first application. For a persistent stain, I repeat the process with a vigorous brooming of the absorbent material. — Bob C., Colorado Springs, Colo.

A. Good stuff! Thanks to my readers for looking out for each other. Oil-Dry (or Oil-Dri) is a spill absorption product, mostly sold as absorbent pads, found at auto stores and equipment suppliers.

Koch To Host Community Cookout At Pageant Field

Mayoral candidate Tom Koch will host a community cookout Thursday, Aug. 9, at 5 p.m. at Pageant Field.

"Everybody is invited: Our great group of volunteers, our supporters, and especially people who have not yet been involved but want to know more about the campaign," Koch said.

"We're out on the street every day meeting as many people as we can, and we see this as another great way to bring people together, relax and talk about our grassroots effort for positive change."

Volunteers will cook hamburgers and hot dogs at the picnic pavilion at Pageant Field. "No other events are booked for the park that evening, so cookout guests will have full use of the bocce courts, softball diamonds and the scenic open field with stunning views of Quincy Bay," Koch said.

"I had the honor of being caretaker of this wonderful park for 12 years, and I can say without a doubt there is no better place to hold a community event than Pageant Field," Koch said. "I am looking forward to meeting a lot of new people and their families, and talking to them about our plans to bring more open, responsive and respectful leadership to city hall."

Koch added, "It's going to be a great night and a great opportunity for people not only to find out more about the campaign, but also to meet a lot of great community leaders and families who are working hard for the campaign. I could not be more proud of the group we have assembled from every neighborhood in the city, and we are going to continue to build it."

The General And The Middle Schooler

For a writing project, the kids in the eighth grade at Atlantic Middle School had to compose letters of concern and compliment, so Robert Bennett, 13, turned to the Internet for ideas.

He found an article by Lt. General Peter W. Chiarelli, commander of Multi National Forces in Iraq, describing his concept of "rebuilding more and shooting less" in that Middle Eastern land.

He wrote a letter to General Chiarelli and, to his surprise, the general called him back on the telephone all the way from Iraq. Soon, the middle school student and the three star general, were communicating by satellite.

Their correspondence continued after General Chiarelli was transferred to a new post as senior military assistant to the Secretary of Defense in Washington.

Their long distance friendship culminated in a special trip by General Chiarelli and his aide, Major Steven Smith, to visit his young friend in Quincy.

After meeting privately with Robert and his family, the general and the major made a special presentation of reconstruction efforts by the Multi National Forces in Iraq at Atlantic Middle School.

Robert says he has learned a valuable lesson from his writing project — that the power of the written word can influence and change someone's life, thanks to a unique friendship with a three-star general.

Tips On Managing Asthma

(NAPS) – For the one in 15 Americans living with asthma, the key to living well is managing the disease, says the National Consumers League (NCL), the nation's oldest consumer advocacy organization. Results of a survey, commissioned by the NCL and conducted by Harris Interactive, show that asthma patients often are not choosing an informed and proactive approach to their disease.

According to the NCL survey, one in six adult sufferers (17 percent) does not have a treatment plan for his or her asthma. And many people with asthma feel alone or anxious about their condition, making partnering with their health care provider even more important.

Asthma sufferers should sit down with their health care provider to make a treatment plan, which should include information on what they should do when asthma symptoms begin.

It's also important for sufferers to learn about their asthma medications—what they are, what they should do and when they should be taken. According to the NCL survey, 38 percent, about four and ten adult sufferers, do not understand asthma medication categories. And some misuse their medications—taking more or less than prescribed by their doctor. Among survey respondents who reported taking more than the indicated dose of their inhaler medication, 21 percent of them reported not reading their medication's instructions.

Asthma sufferers should monitor their asthma by keeping an asthma diary of symptoms and treatments and see their health care provider at least once a year. They should work with their health care provider to find the things that trigger their asthma flare-ups. Triggers may include dust mites, head colds, tobacco smoke, dry air, exercise and certain ingredients in foods.

The next step is to make lifestyle changes to reduce the occurrence, intensity or duration of asthma triggers. The NCL survey found that most asthma patients who made at least one lifestyle change reported that their asthma improved. Yet, 42 percent of the survey respondents reported that they have received little or no information at all about lifestyle changes that could impact their asthma condition.

When asthma sufferers partner with a health care provider, follow a treatment plan and monitor their condition, their asthma will be easier to control and will likely result in fewer and less severe asthma flare-ups.

NCL's brochure, "Live Well with Asthma," and Web site, www.nclnet.org/asthma, provide more information about the NCL survey and tips for understanding asthma.

Top 10 Weight Loss Tips For Teens

(NAPS) – Although according to the American Obesity Association, 30.4 percent of children ages 12 to 19 are considered overweight, 15.5 percent are classified as obese and the prevalence of obesity within this age group has more than doubled over the past 25 years, there is hope.

"The good news is that adolescents can achieve a healthy weight by making simple lifestyle changes," says Lisa Talamini, RD—vice president, research and program innovation for Jenny Craig, Inc. "And if they maintain these positive eating and exercise behaviors as adults, they can avoid developing high blood pressure and other obesity-related medical conditions."

Here are some of Talamini's top tips for teens:

1. Plan to be active every day. Enjoy fun activities with friends such as volleyball, dancing, tennis and biking. A day of shopping at the mall can also burn calories.
2. When you eat out with friends, use the time to get filled in on each other's news, without "filling out" on food you may not need.
3. Watch your protein sizes and try to make lower-fat/lower-calorie selections. At a fast-food restaurant, pair a small burger with a veggie-packed side salad and lightly drizzle fat-free or reduced-fat dressing on top.
4. Get your groove on (and get a great workout) with "Dance Dance Revolution" on your gaming console. Walk, run and dance to your favorite iPod tunes.

5. Ask your parents to stock your refrigerator with ready-to-eat fruits, salads and raw veggies. Sliced carrots, celery and green peppers are delicious when dipped lightly in fat-free dip, salsa or low-fat hummus. Replace family-size bags of chips or crackers with 100-calorie snack bags for instant portion control.

6. Trade calorie-rich sports drinks, sugary juice drinks and sodas for zero-calorie flavored waters and diet sodas.

7. Avoid the temptation to look like a fashion model or popular actresses who may be at unrealistic body weights. Find a healthy weight range that works for you and celebrate the unique, beautiful body that you have.

8. Eat "across the rainbow" of colorful fruits and vegetables for a wide variety of health-enhancing nutrients.

9. Small changes can reap big results. If you want to eat 100 fewer calories every day, you could lose 10 pounds in a year.

10. Don't think of what you're doing as "dieting." Instead, view it as creating positive eating and exercise behaviors that can help you develop a healthier, happier lifestyle.

The bone-thinning disease known as osteoporosis is particularly common among middle-aged women. While there are effective treatments for this disease, not all women who have osteoporosis know it. Thus, it comes as a bit of unexpected good news that ordinary dental x-rays may help to identify bone loss. This is made possible by a new computer software program (not yet in widespread use) that analyzes bone pattern characteristics, including thickness and fragmentation, in dental x-rays. In a recent study conducted by European researchers, an analysis of dental x-rays using the software was able to predict the risk of osteoporosis as effectively as traditional bone mass density measurements. This gives women one more diagnostic tool in their battle against thinning bones. Osteoporosis is often called a "silent" disease because it has no discernible symptoms. This informative column has been brought to you as a public service. Extractions, sealants, fillings, root canals, cosmetic dentistry, partial or full dentures, and crowns and bridges area just some of the services we offer. Crunching Into Oblivion

Q. My gym offers 15-minute abdominal classes. I try to attend at least three of these classes a week, and definitely feel my abs burning during class; however, I have not seen much of a difference in my abdominal area flattening. Are these classes a waste of time, or could I be doing something wrong?

A. Abdominal classes have become popular in many fitness facilities. The typical class consists of an instructor taking a group through 15 to 20 minutes of varying abdominal exercises. Unfortunately, the popularity of these classes has many people crunching themselves into disappointment.

The purpose of abdominal classes should be to focus on increasing the stability and strength of the core muscles (abdominal, back, hips), not to develop a "six pack." The idea of crunching yourself into oblivion to flatten your stomach has attracted many people to abdominal classes — however, abdominal exercises alone will not slim your middle. Since we cannot actually "flatten" our abdominals, our goal is to lower our body-fat percentage, which will decrease the amount of fat covering the abdominal muscles.

Before attending your first abdominal class, I recommend understanding what to expect from the class. Your goal should be to increase core strength and stability — not to experience soreness for the next two days. Avoid gauging how well the class was taught by how "hard" the exercises were or by how much of a burn you felt in your abdominal muscles. With each class completed, you should feel like you have more control, strength and stability within your back, abdominal muscles and hips. This should be used to determine the success of each class. Focus on quality, not quantity.

To get the best results from abdominal classes be sure you know how to correctly perform each exercise. Many participants use the wrong techniques when completing abdominal exercises and repeat these poor techniques repetition after repetition, class after class. Straining the muscles of your neck and arching your lower back while completing abdominal exercises are one example of what should be avoided, as this could cause not just discomfort but injury if repeated.

Although group classes tend to encourage participants to keep up with their neighbors, go at your own pace. Modify exercises that may be too advanced, and only progress to a more difficult exercise once you have mastered the basic form. At the beginning of class, tell the instructor about any medical conditions that may need a safer version to be demonstrated. The instructor should be able to accommodate your needs.

Remember to make your abdominal class part of a balanced workout routine that includes cardiovascular and strength training, partnered with healthy nutritional habits. Consistent exercise, proper nutrition and genetics will help you reach your goal of lowering your body fat around your abdomen, giving the appearance of "flatter abs."

Quincy Advances In Playoffs, Faces Brockton

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Post 95 American Legion baseball team is in the process of rewriting their history book.

The team scored a 2-1 series win over Foxboro Post 93 in the first round of the legion playoffs after losing Game One, 5-3. Post 95 won Game 2, 7-3, and finished off Foxboro on the road in Game 3, 6-5. With their first round win, Quincy advances to the American Legion regional tournament, and will play against District 10 No. 1 seed Brockton Post 35.

Quincy hosted Brockton at Adams Field Wednesday at 5 p.m. The series shifted to Brockton Thursday. Game 3 if necessary would also be in Brockton Friday.

"What a series for our team," said athletic officer Lenny Seitz. "We really battled back after dropping the first game of series on the road. I can not say enough about our players, our coaching staff and our fans. The kids really bore down and got the job done."

With their first round series win, Post 95 entered uncharted territory. The team finished last season with a 2-18 record, but changes that were made over the off-season and the experience that was gained by its roster helped to propel the team to a place they have not been to in decades.

"We at the Post have gone back into our history books to try to find out when the last time one of our teams have advanced this far in the playoffs," added Seitz. "It has been tough to find. You need to go back 20 to 30 years to find a team from Post 95 that had made it past the first round. This year's team is rewriting Post 95 baseball history."

In the third and deciding game, Post 95 got an early jump on Foxboro. Number one and number two hitters, Mike Leone and Mike LeBel, both scored runs in the first inning to stake starting pitcher Scott Worwick to an early lead.

Worwick went the distance, allowing three earned runs while striking out two batters to earn the victory.

Quincy Post 95 trailed Foxboro 5-4 entering the top of the seventh, but Leone and LeBel, both reached base. Post 95 catcher Tom Conley (2-for-3, RBI, SB) knocked in Leone to knot the score at 5-5, and Mike Jay followed with a RBI single that scored LeBel to give Quincy and Worwick a 6-5 lead heading into the bottom of the frame.

Worwick, with the help of a line-drive double play, closed the door on Foxboro, and Post 95 held on for the 6-5 win.

"Scotty was fabulous in Game Three," said Seitz. "I don't think anybody thought he would be able to go the whole game, but he told manager Dan Sweeney that he wanted to finish what he had started. By the seventh inning he was pitching on adrenaline, but he got the job done, and in the process he saved our pitching staff for the next round."

Post 95 earned the right to play a Game Three after a 7-3 victory on Saturday afternoon at Adams Field. Jared Kenney hurled a seven-inning masterpiece, allowing three runs on just eight hits while striking out six batters.

Leone (3-for-4, SB, RBI, run), LeBel (3-for-4, RBI, run), John Alexander (2-for-3, three RBI) and Jay Lewis (2-for-3, SB) all contributed on offense.

"Kenney was the key for us in this game," said Seitz. "With the job that he did and the job that Scotty did, our pitching staff should be rested and ready to go against Brockton."

Post 95 dropped the opening game on the road against Foxboro 5-3.

The games in the regional playoffs, which began last night (Wed.), switch from seven inning affairs to nine inning games, and because of the work of its starting pitchers in the first round, the team enters the regional series with its full pitching arsenal intact.

"Brockton is a perennial Legion powerhouse, but we have shown this season that we can play with anyone," Seitz added. "Our ability to hit up and down the lineup, our skill on defense and our speed, and now our rested pitching staff gives us the confidence that this magical season is far from over."

It was not that long ago that Quincy Post 95 came to a crossroads as to which way, up or down, the team would head. The addition of Sweeney and his staff have paid dividends, as has the play of the entire roster, but Seitz said it would be remiss to not look back five years ago.

"Any success that we have enjoyed as a team, be it the players, coaches, fans, and myself as athletic officer really traces back about five years, Mark Jaehning, now the city's Park Commissioner, really saved this program. The work he did for us has helped set in motion the success we are having this season.

"We have been building from the ground up and the results are coming quickly. Brockton will be a challenge, but this team is special and in baseball anything can happen."

Marina Bay Edges Ralph Pill 1-0 In Championship Game

The Quincy Babe Ruth International League concluded its 2007 season in dramatic fashion on June 30.

Two of the league's best offensive teams, Marina Bay Skilled Nursing and Ralph Pill Electric Supply, matched up in the championship game. However, instead of the expected offensive slugfest, the game was decided by pitching with Marina Bay coming out on top 1-0.

Starting pitchers Matt Jayne of Marina Bay and Ryan Bulger of Ralph Pill each kept the opposition off balance at the plate for the first four innings. Bulger got out of trouble twice in the early goings with the help of two double plays turned by Tommy Cooper, Evan Fitzmaurice and Eric Jensen, while Jayne (15 strikeouts) used his blazing fastball to quiet the Ralph Pill bats.

Pill Electric finally got something going in the fifth inning when Drew Leahy singled and Brian Kilcullen walked, but Marina Bay first baseman Paul Carson ended the inning with a spectacular diving catch of a foul ball.

In the bottom of the fifth, Marina Bay's Cullen Brooks led off with a single, followed by a single by Brian O'Connell to put runners on the corners with no outs. Nick Milone knocked in Brooks with a single for the only run of the championship game.

Babe Ruth International

Pitching and defense dominated the sixth and seventh innings by both teams. Pill Electric's Drew Leahy and Dan Austin both made great defensive plays in the outfield to keep the game 1-0.

Winning pitcher Matt Jayne finished the game with 15 punch-outs in the complete game victory, while Ryan Bulger went the distance, striking out seven in the tough-luck loss.

For Marina Bay, Matt Laif singled and Top Tierney, Kenny Adams and Justin Keenan reached base. Pill Electric's Drew Leahy had two hits and Sean O'Callaghan and Dan Austin both singled.

The first automobiles were all open to the air. In fact, it was not until 1925 that the sale of closed cars exceeded open ones. Once drivers became accustomed to the draft-free, secure feeling of a closed cabin however, the sales of convertibles dropped precipitously. Convertibles lost market share, but they never fully lost their appeal. Not only were they perceived to be more adventurous, sporty and sexy, convertibles were, and continue to be, more valuable as collectibles. Still, convertibles hit a major stumbling block during the 1970s as moon sun roofs and the oil crisis conspired to drive convertibles from domestic production. BJ's Charity Championship At Granite Links Aug. 4-5

Granite Links Golf Club will host the third annual BJ's Charity Championship on Aug. 4-5.

The event, presented by OLAY, will feature defending champions Nancy Scranton and Christa Johnson. Scranton and Johnson, each a former LPGA Tour major champion, earned a one-stroke victory at the 2006 BJ's Charity Championship by virtue of a final-round 58 that included an eagle at the par-5 18th hole. Sherri Turner and Cindy Figg-Currier finished second following a final-round 59.

Other golfers planning to compete include New England natives Patty Sheehan and Pat Bradley, the 2005 co-champions who have amassed a combined 66 LPGA Tour titles and 12 major championships; Jan Stephenson and Cindy Rarick, the 2005 co-champions who combined for 21 LPGA Tour titles; and Sandra Haynie and Val Skinner, who won 48 LPGA Tour titles between them.

Sponsored by BJ's Wholesale Club, Inc., the BJ's Charity Championship is a 36-hole event featuring members of the Legends Tour, the official Legends Tour of the LPGA. The event consists of a pro-am on Aug. 3 followed by a two-day tournament Aug. 4-5 with 30 two-player teams competing for a $500,000 purse.

Single-day tickets are available for $10, while a three-day pass is $25. Both options can be purchased by calling the BJ's Charity Championship tournament office at (617) 721-3931 or by visiting www.thelegendstour.com.

A FLEET OF SAILBOATS heads out from Squantum Yacht Club and into Quincy Bay at the start of the 21st annual Lipton Cup Regatta. The first regatta was held back in 1930, since then the race has expanded to include nine classes of races and hundreds of participants ranging in age from 8 to 84. This year's regatta saw 600 sailors and more than 100 boats participate.

TWO YOUNG SAILORS pick up some speed during the 21st annual Lipton Cup Regatta. The long-standing Quincy boat race took place July 14-15 out of the Squantum Yacht Club on Wollaston Beach.

21st Annual Sailing Event Draws 600 Sailors And 100 Boats

Another Successful Year For Lipton Cup Regatta

By DOMENIC POLI

When Herbert Albright of the Squantum Yacht Club won the first Lipton Tea Regatta in 1930 he took the victory cup — sent from England in 1929 by Sir Thomas Lipton — home and placed it on his living room mantel.

And there it stayed — for 57 years.

Then, in 1987, Albright, who held the deed to the cup, decided to return it to the SYC for the resurrection of the multi-category tournament.

Mr. Albright passed away in 2003 at age 93.

The competition has ballooned since then, expanding to nine classes of races, though this year one class (the 210) did not participate.

Two weekends past held the 21st annual Lipton Tea Regatta, which attracts sailors young and old from the City of Presidents, to Marblehead, to Spain (and Bermuda and Canada and South America) and joy of putting on such an event has not dwindled a bit.

"I enjoy doing it and everything, [but] it's a pile of work. It's a yearlong thing," said Don McGilvray, who has been running the Regatta for all of the 21 years. "It's not like it's all done today and that's it — we'll start right up for next year. You got to start talking to other clubs, other classes, get the classes involved."

McGilvray, 76, is the Regatta chairman and first became involved in the SYC when he was a teenager. Since that time he has been named the commodore — the club's highest position — three times, in 1958, 1959 and 1990.

"We've had another successful year this year so far with the boats. We've got 100 boats this year and the weather's been excellent," he said. "This is the best bay in the country, because it's shaped like a teacup."

This is the first Regatta for SYC member Bob Lynch, but he says he is glad he has a hand in this year's competition.

"I think it's real exciting for the kids and it's certainly exciting for the Club and we all try to pitch in and help out," said Lynch, who joined the Club two years ago. "It's nice that it's sponsored, too, because, otherwise, because I'm not sure if we'd be able to have it this time around."

Originally from Dorchester, the Mansfield native has belonged to the Rhode Island Yacht Club (he owns a house in the Ocean State) for years, but felt he had to be a part of the Quincy gig.

"But I love Boston Harbor, so I decided to get membership here and I'm glad I did because they're all very friendly people, everybody helps each other," he said.

As for Elizabeth Stacy, it was her third consecutive visit to the Lipton Tea Regatta.

Her daughter, Dayren, competed in the Optimist Red Fleet.

Originally from Toronto, Canada, Elizabeth and her husband, John, are longtime sailors and moved to Rockport, Mass., with Dayren, 13, about nine years ago.

Elizabeth says there is something special about the sailing community.

"When we go to any type of a club — golf is a good example — I don't golf, but I've been to the situation. When you get onto the green, people always want to know what you do. Somehow work creeps in and then that sets the tone for the nine holes, or whatever you're going to do," she says. "The sailing community is different. They don't care what you do. They don't care if you're a neurosurgeon. All you talk about is sailing and they don't care about your financial background. It's sailing — it's totally different."

As for Dayren, she was just glad to get out on the open sea.

"I did actually pretty well. The first race I didn't know where the mark was. Then, the other races, I came in mid-fleet. And then the last race I came in fourth," she said on Saturday. "I enjoyed the Regatta and I look forward to coming here all the time."

"I also like tea we get here," she said with an adorable smile.

Inside the clubhouse there was a seemingly endless supply of free bottled Lipton Green Tea and White Tea.

The Lipton Cup was donated to what is now the Massachusetts Boating and Yachting Clubs Association by Lipton in 1929. When asked to donate a trophy, "he said he'd be delighted to," McGilvray explained.

Lipton was a brilliant sailor. He even came close to winning the Americas Cup five times with boats named Shamrock I to Shamrock V.

With no air service in those days, he shipped it to America right away and the first Regatta was held months later.

McGilvray and friends are making sure to keep Sir Lipton's endearing spirit alive and they all agree they will do their best to continue to hold the annual Regatta that has so successfully joined sailors from around the globe.

The first-place finishers of each class won the honor of having their names inscribed on the base of the Lipton Cup. This year, the lucky sailors were Tate Manning and Nate Henderson from Hull in the National 10s Blue Fleet, from Joseph Meola with Matt Delahanty as crew in the National 10s White Fleet, from Marblehead Brian Drumm in the class of Red, White, and Blue Optimists, from Chelmsford, Barry Moore with JJ Moore as crew in the Multihull, from Quincy, Ted Randall in the Hustler, from Abington, Sean Kane with Rob Taylor and Denis Bell as crew in the Thunderbird, from Wintthrop, Mike Gahan in the Rhodes 19, from Hingham, Abbott Cowen and Thomas Kivley as crew in the Club 420, from Stamford, CT, Ben Leibowitz in the Laser, and from Sioux City, IA, Chloe Palmer in the Laser Radial. Palmer was also the Women's New England Radial Champion.

Other Quincy residents who competed for the Cup included: Kennedy Hannon, Abigail Ames, and Devin O'Brien in the Optimist White Fleet, Reid Lily and Kristen Bimmer in the Optimist Red Fleet, Kieran Hannon in the Optimist Blue Fleet, Robert Thompson-Hines and Conall Finn in the Optimist Green Fleet, Kevin Taylor and Dick Berger in the Hustler and Kenneth MacLeod in the Thunderbird.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You're wise to let your Arian skepticism question a former adversary's request to let bygones be bygones. Time will tell if he or she is trying to pull the wool over the Lamb's eyes.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Congratulations. Your hard work soon pays off with some well-deserved recognition. Meanwhile, that important personal relationship needs more attention from you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) That new person in your life seems trustworthy, but don't turn him or her into a confidante just yet. Remember: The secret you don't reveal is the one you won't lose sleep over.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your kindness makes a difference in someone's life. But by week's end, a touch of Cancerian envy could create a problem with a colleague. Take care to keep it under control.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A new spurt of energy sends you roaring back into that challenging work situation. But be careful not to overdo it, or your sizzle could fizzle before your task is completed.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your practical sense helps you see the logic of being a bit more flexible with a workplace colleague. But you still have a ways to go before there's a true meeting of the minds.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A surprise situation could cause you to spend more money than you feel you can afford. But careful budget adjustments will help. Your fiscal picture soon brightens.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) That decision you made might still have its detractors, but your supporters are growing. Meanwhile, your personal life takes on some welcome new developments.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Matters of the mind intrigue the sage Sagittarian through week's end. By then, you should feel more than ready to make room for pursuits of the heart.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The canny Capricorn can offer good counsel to others. But how about taking some advice yourself from a close friend or family member who is able and ready to help?

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new workplace opportunity offers a variety of challenges that you might find intriguing. Best advice: Take things one step at a time so that you don't feel overwhelmed.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A bid to revive a relationship that ended on a bitter note needs to be carefully thought out before you can even begin to consider plunging into a new emotional commitment.

BORN THIS WEEK: You enjoy being with people, and people love being with you. You would probably do very well in politics.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

An old Spanish Proverb states ... He is always right who suspects that he makes mistakes.

Everyone "goofs" once in a while. Some people seem to "goof" more than others. They make the same mistakes over and over again and never seem to learn from them. Others learn from their errors. They grow from their mistakes. They know it doesn't do any good to brood over their mistakes. The past is past. It's time to forge ahead with what is to be done.

Fortunate, indeed, is the person who has learned to take his mistakes as well as his accomplishments. Fortunate, too, is the person who can admit his mistakes with a sense of humor and with wisdom. ...

We like this saying by Hugh White ... "When you make a mistake, don't look back at it long. Take the reason of the thing into your mind, and then look forward. Mistakes are lessons of wisdom. The past cannot be changed. The future is yet in your power."

Joseph A. Casanova, 85Ran Bowling Alley In Needham

A Mass of Christian Burial for Joseph A. Casanova, 85, a lifelong Quincy resident and a retired bowling alley owner, was celebrated Wednesday in St. Mary's Church, West Quincy.

Mr. Casanova died Sunday at home after a period of declining health.

Born in Boston, he was raised in Quincy and was a 1940 graduate of Quincy High School.

In 1943 he entered the U.S. Army, where his mastery of the Italian and English languages landed him overseas serving as a translator during World War II in Italy.

After returning from the war, Mr. Casanova attended Boston College where he graduated with a degree in business administration in 1948.

That same year, he began working at his father's bowling alley, The Bowling Green, in Needham. He ran the business for more than 37 years. He retired in 1985.

Mr. Casanova was a member of St. Mary's Church in Quincy and was a member of the Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post for more than 50 years.

He was a member for more than 70 years of the Braintree

Municipal Golf Course, where he shot his first hole in one at the age of 80, and shot his age the year prior, 79.

He was also a member of the Sons of Italy in Quincy.

He enjoyed tending to the gardens he planted around his home, and cherished the time he spent with his family.

He is survived by his wife of 56 years, Ann (Savoie) Casanova; a son, John Casanova of Yarmouth; two daughters, Jean Rooney of Buzzards Bay and Jan Fitzpatrick of San Mateo, Calif.; five grandchildren; one great-grandchild; and many nieces and nephews.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Hamel, Wickens and Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy Center.

Interment with full military honors was in Pine Hill Cemetery, West Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Old Colony Hospice, 1 Credit Union Way, Randolph, MA 02368.

Richard J. Boucher, 82Inspector For Boston Gear Works

A funeral Mass for Richard J. Boucher, 82, of Braintree, formerly of Quincy, a retired inspector, was celebrated Tuesday in Saint Joseph's Church, 550 Washington St., Quincy.

Mr. Boucher died July 19 at the John Scott House in Braintree after a long illness.

Born and raised in Quincy, he was educated in Quincy schools. He had lived in Braintree for the past several years but had previously lived in Quincy for most of his life.

Mr. Boucher served in the United States Army and was a World War II veteran. He served in the European and African Middle Eastern Theater. He participated in the Battles of Naples and Foggia.

He was an avid bowler and also enjoyed shooting pool and arts and crafts.

Son of the late Joseph and Lillian (Martin) Boucher, he is survived by one nephew; two nieces and a dear friend, Jim W. O'Neil of Braintree.

He was also the brother of the late Priscilla Duggan, the late Lillian Ross and the late Joseph Boucher, Jr.

Interment was in Knollwood Memorial Park, Canton.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Marge Crispin Social Services Center, 100 Pond St., Braintree, MA 02184.

John Patterson, 95State Department Liaison

A graveside service for John Patterson, 95, of Quincy and Brockton, a State Department liaison to the 1946 San Francisco conference, was held Monday at Edgell Grove Cemetery in Framingham.

Mr. Patterson died July 16 at New England Sinai Hospital in Stoughton from kidney failure.

He began working for the State Department in 1935 and joined the Foreign Service in 1955, serving in Japan and Australia until 1962 as United States consul.

Returning to Boston, he was director of the Japan Society in Boston and the Boston Council for International Visitors.

Mr. Patterson taught at Stonehill College in Easton and Harvard University, where he was a founding member of the Institute of Learning in Retirement.

Born in Chelsea, he graduated from Boston College and Harvard University. He previously lived in Framingham and Wellesley.

In his 70s and 80s, he enjoyed traveling and hiking to Arizona and Utah.

Husband of the late Marcelle (Sheahan) Patterson, he is survived by three sons, Geoffrey Patterson of Quincy, Joseph Patterson of New York, N.Y., and John Patterson of Arlington, Va.; and his companion, Barbara Berger of Brockton.

Funeral arrangements were by the John Everett and Sons Funeral Home, Natick.

A Mass of Christian Burial for Agnes M. (Flaherty) Barilaro, 90, of Quincy, a homemaker and avid singer, was celebrated Monday in St. Mary Church, West Quincy.

Mrs. Barilaro died July 19 at Milton Hospital.

Born in Quincy, she was a lifelong resident of the city. She attended local schools and was a 1936 graduate of Burdett College.

She was an avid singer who served as a soloist at St. Mary Church in Quincy. She was also a member of the parish choir and the Sweet Adelines.

A devout Catholic, Mrs. Barilaro was an active parishioner of St. Mary Parish. In addition to her musical involvement, she was also a member of the Ladies Sodality and the St. Mary's School Guild.

She was a member and past president of the Auxiliary of the Morrisette American Legion Post.

Wife of the late Albert R. Barilaro, a former Ward 4 city councillor, she is survived by three sons, James Barilaro of Weymouth, John Barilaro of Hanover and Michael Barilaro of Scituate; two daughters, Ellen Tait of Lexington and Sarah Armstrong of Quincy; a sister-in-law, Catherine Duca of Hingham; nine grandchildren, many great-grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

Burial was in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the St. Mary Building Fund, 115 Crescent St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Virginia L. Seaman, 74Membership Coordinator For Realtors

Funeral services for Virginia L. (Anderson) Seaman, 74, of Quincy, a membership coordinator, were held Tuesday at the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Mrs. Seaman died July 20 at the Quincy Radius Hospital after a brief illness.

Born and raised in Quincy, she attended Quincy schools and graduated from Quincy High School in 1950. She was also a graduate of Chamberlain College in Boston.

She was a lifelong Quincy resident.

Mrs. Seaman was employed as membership coordinator for the South Shore & Plymouth Association of Realtors in Penbrooke. She joined the association in 1991 and was still employed at the time of her death.

Previously she had worked for Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc.

She loved animals, especially cats. She was a fan of the Boston Red Sox.

She is survived by her husband of 53 years, Edward H. "Ned" Seaman; a son, Brandon E. Seaman of Braintree; a daughter, Kristen V. Seaman of Quincy; and two grandchildren.

Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Memorial donations may be made to the Nurse's Appreciation Fund, c/o Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy, MA 0219.

Sacred Heart Music Ministry To Host Children's Choir Camp Aug. 6-10

The music ministry of Sacred Heart Parish will hold its first Children's Choir Camp Monday, Aug. 6 through Friday, Aug. 10.

This innovative program, for children entering grades 3-7 as of September, 2007, will be held on the parish grounds, 386 Hancock St., Quincy, from 9 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. daily.

This year's camp theme is Noah's Ark. The goal of the camp is to foster a better understanding of the church's liturgy and music.

Camp will include times for fun, games and crafts as well as signing and prayer. A hot lunch and two snacks will be provided daily.

The week culminates Friday, Aug. 10 with a short musical presentation based on Noah and the Ark, titled "100 Percent Chance of Rain."

A "make your own sundae" party for all in attendance will follow the performance.

An extended day on Thursday, Aug. 9 is planned with final music rehearsals, a short Evening Prayer liturgy, and a family movie night in conjunction with the parish's "Popcorn, Movie & Discussion" night. The movie for the evening will be "The Chronicles of Narnia: The Lion, The Witch and the Wardrobe."

Camp openings are available. Registration deadline is Monday, July 28. Cost is $75 per child and includes all workbooks, music, crafts, lunches, snacks and dinner and popcorn on Thursday.

For reservations, or more information, contact Sacred Heart Rectory at 617-328-8666 or visit the website www.sacredheartquincy.org.

Councillor McNamee Cleans Up 'Kettle Pot'

WARD 6 COUNCILLOR Brian McNamee (above with paint roller) participated in the city's recent Cleaner, Greener cleanup by picking up a paint roller and painting over graffiti on the so-called "Kettle Pot" off the shore of Squantum. The structure, which formerly served as a gas vent from the Boston sewer system on Moon Island, is a notorious target for graffiti and vandalism. "Graffiti has become an issue of great concern to me in recent months," McNamee said. "This type of vandalism decreases property value, and lowers the overall look and vibrancy of our neighborhoods." In response to the rise of spray-paint vandalism, McNamee, along with the city's Statehouse delegation, have filed anti-graffiti legislation which would make it illegal for minors to purchase or possess spray paint with the intent to create graffiti. McNamee said he hopes the passage of this legislation will decrease the occurrence of such vandalism. "In the meantime," the councillor added, "I'll keep the paint rollers nearby."

Josiah Quincy Tour Aug. 24

A free tour entitled "Summer with the Josiah Quincys" will be held Saturday, Aug. 4, beginning at 10 a.m.

Sponsored by Historic New England and the Park Department's Environmental Treasures program, the tour offers participants an opportunity to learn about the Josiah Quincy family which includes two mayors of Boston and a president of Harvard College.

The tour will begin at the corner of Wendell and Sachem Streets in Wollaston. James Cameron, professor of history at Eastern Nazarene College, will present a slide show of the Josiah Quincy House which once stood on the grounds of Eastern Nazarene College.

Following the slide presentation, Cameron, Leah Walczak of Historic New England, and Sally Owen will lead a tour around Wollaston in which 19th century water colors and photographs will offer viewers a fascinating comparison of Wollaston past and present.

An optional tour of the Josiah Quincy House i, 20 Murthead St., Wollaston, is available by pre-registering at 617-227-3956, ext. 256 right to give a report to the President and to the Secretary of State."

Quincy Tolerance Imam's Model On Religious Freedom Commission

Eid says his goal as it relates to the estimated 1.6 billion Muslims worldwide is to contribute to the success of the commission, to participate in the work and be part of the decision-making.

And he is spiritually pleased that his mission supports the Koranic principle which states that there is no compulsion in religion, that "one must not force anything in the affairs of religion."

A native of Lebanon, after graduating from the prestigious Al-Azhar University, he served as an imam for seven years in Tripoli, then immigrated to America and served as Imam and Religious Director of the Islamic Center of New England in Quincy Point from 1982-2005.

Eid and his wife, Hend, also a native of Lebanon, have been married for nearly 30 years and have seven children and six grandchildren.

Ambitious and dedicated to learning, Imam Eid is the only one of eight siblings to have gone on to higher education. He recently completed his doctorate in Theology at Harvard Divinity School.

Founder and Director of Religious Affairs at the Islamic Institute of Boston, he also serves as Muslim chaplain at Massachusetts General Hospital, where he visits and counsels patients.

As chaplain at Brandeis University, he interacts with American and international students, and leads Friday prayers. "Brandeis has a great movement of interfaith activities, including bringing Palestinians and Israelis to talk to each other," he says.

"Last year we had an art exhibit; and the participants of this exhibit were families of victims who had died violent deaths as a result of the Palestinian-Israeli conflict. So they get together, and instead of promoting revenge, they promote the importance of solving the Israeli-Palestinian problem peacefully."

Eid is proud of Quincy's respect for religious freedom, commenting upon the community's acceptance of the first mosque in Quincy, built in an area then known as "Little Syria."

"In general, the people of the city of Quincy demonstrate a great understanding of the diversity of the city. From day one when I arrived, I realized that the Quincy clergy association welcomed me, and we would attend each other's places of worship."

"And my children, from the time they began school in Quincy, I don't remember one serious incident or problem that they had with a teacher or with other students...I never observed any form of prejudice against my children, even when my daughters got older and began to wear religious dress."

Imam Eid wants to see more of the estimated six million Muslims living in America involve themselves in the political atmosphere of the society and meet the challenges that face them. And the only way for Muslims to be there, he says, is to be trusted.

"If you are trusted with the affairs of the country, then you can be part of the decision-making, then try to change whatever we feel needs changing. When I heard that I was appointed to this position, to me that means that I am trusted."

"So the government will trust me with sensitive information and material, as I will be exposed to confidential matters. Muslims need to demonstrate loyalty to the country, to America, and to separate their political disagreements from their interaction with the people."

"And I would say that it is important for non-Muslims to open themselves to Muslims and learn about Islam and try to differentiate between Islam the religion, and Muslims who are not following the teachings of Islam, but who abuse the teachings by committing acts of terror."

Neighbors Praise Firefighters Electrical Fixture Cause Of $350,000 Blaze

By LAURA GRIFFIN

A faulty electrical fixture ignited the massive fire that ripped through the third floor of a vacant two-family house at 32 Spear St. Saturday, according to the State Fire Marshall's office.

The cause of the fire was "deemed accidental," according to Donna Nelson, spokesperson for the State Fire Marshall's office.

The Quincy Fire Department estimated the damage at $350,000.

"We did respond to that fire," Nelson said, adding that State Police investigative personnel "were on the scene" as Quincy firefighters aided by a Boston unit battled the blaze for more than four hours.

Quincy firefighters responded to the fire at the corner of Spear Street and Francis Avenue two minutes after the 10.08 a.m. alarm on Saturday.

By 2:50 p.m. the last unit cleared out. Seven Quincy engine companies, three ladder companies and three other units responded as did the Boston firefighters.

19 Candidates File Nomination Papers

No Preliminary Election First Time In 67 Years

For the first time in 67 years there will be no preliminary election in Quincy this fall.

Not enough candidates filed nomination papers by Tuesday's deadline to create preliminary run offs for mayor, city council or school committee.

The election, scheduled for Sept. 19 will not be held. The last time this occurred was in 1940.

A total of 19 candidates filed including two Asian Americans.

It means Mayor William Phelan and challenger Tom Koch, former City Park Commissioner and the others will battle it out in the Nov. 5 final election.

Two candidates, Charles Denehey of Willard Street and Robert Boussey of Farrington Street, took out nomination papers for mayor but were no-shows at Tuesday's filing deadline. If either had returned them with 50 valid signatures it would have forced a mayoral preliminary election.

Three council at large incumbents, Joseph Finn, John Keenan and Michael McFarland and two challengers, Jennifer McCauley Logue, former executive director of Discover Quincy and Victor Ng of Holmes Street, filed their papers. Seven candidates are needed for a preliminary election.

Only one of the six ward councillors has a challenger. Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee is opposed by Jimmy Lange, Quincy restaurant owner who has run twice for council at-large. Three candidates are required for a preliminary election.

Ward councillors unopposed are:

Leo Kelly (1), Daniel Raymond (2), Kevin Coughlin (3), Jay Davis (4) and Doug Guitto (5).

One of the three school committee seats is open with

Study Finds Quincy Tax Hikes Lowest In State

The former Research Director of the Quincy Taxpayers Association (QTA) says that a recent study of municipal tax rates in Massachusetts shows that since 2004 Quincy's average single-family tax bill increased less than any of the 50 communities in the study.

"Quincy's average single family tax bill for Fiscal Year 2007 is $3,780," said Robert C. Haley in a letter to Mayor William Phelan. "The statewide average for single family tax bills has grown to ... $3,962 in Fiscal Year 2007."

"Quincy's three-year average tax bill increase for single family homes was 1.28 per cent which is the lowest in all cities in the Commonwealth ... (Statewide it is) a yearly average of 5.40 per cent."

Haley, who is treasurer of the town of Hanover and was named to the Quincy Retirement Board by Phelan last May, said he used figures from the Massachusetts Department of Revenue's Municipal Data Bank in his study of property taxes in Quincy.

"I was discussing tax rates with the mayor last March," said Haley, who was also vice president of the QTA. "I told him the association was no longer in existence and he asked me if I would take a look at Quincy's tax picture."

"I had some vacation time this summer so I did."

The study comes as Mayor Phelan is running for a fourth two-year term in the fall election.

"This study tells us two things," he said.

"First, that we are working very hard to manage our city's finances and make good decisions on behalf of our taxpayers. The study proves we have done a good job in keeping our taxpayers in the forefront of our minds."

"Secondly, it tells us that municipal governments need help from the State and Federal governments to keep property taxes in check."

"Nobody would suggest that our work is ever com-are judged for the depth of understanding the issue, the personal response and the clarity of the writing.

Colleen wrote about her experience joining a social action club at her school. She wrote in part, "Compassion for the working child is basically tough love to all of us who attend End Child Labor meetings. For us, it's not just having compassion for the working child, it's actually doing something to help working children help themselves.

Court Colleagues To Honor Judge Welch With Portrait

His colleagues in the legal profession will honor retired Judge Joseph R. Welch by unveiling his portrait Friday, Aug. 10, at 2:30 p.m. at the Quincy District Courthouse, One Dennis Ryan Parkway.

Welch, who appeared in Quincy District Court and Dedham Superior Court many times as assistant district attorney from 1968 to 1975, was a judge in Quincy from 1990 to 2004 when he retired.

He served as president of the Bar Association of Norfolk County and, in 1980, he founded the Norfolk County Bar Advocates and was its president pro bono until 1990 when he was named to the trial court.

He was the recipient of the Libertine Award, given by the Bar Association of Norfolk County, and the Quincy Bar Association's Maloney Award.

Welch was a US Navy lieutenant serving as weapons officer aboard a destroyer from July, 1957, to September, 1960, and a member of the Naval Reserve from September, 1960 to 1977, retiring as a commander.

The unveiling of his portrait is sponsored by the Quincy District Court, the Bar Association of Norfolk County and the Quincy Bar Association.

Siciliano Appeals Rape Conviction, Prison Term

Anthony Siciliano, the former deputy emergency director of Quincy, has appealed his conviction and four-to-five year prison sentence for raping a teenage boy.

"The prosecution did not produce a single piece of physical evidence concerning any sexual assault at the trial," said Francis X. Collins, attorney for Siciliano.

"Tony expects to be vindicated after a retrial is ordered."

Siciliano, 65, was convicted by a Norfolk Superior Court jury Monday on three counts of raping the boy, a volunteer in his emergency response team.

The youngster was 13 to 16 years old at the time from 1995 to 1998. He is 25 now.

In addition to the four-to-five years in prison, Siciliano must serve five years probation, register as a sex offender and avoid contact with anyone under 18.

He was acquitted of a second charge of indecent assault and battery on a person 14 brought by a second member of the response team, now 22.

Both men testified that the offenses occurred in Siciliano's office at the DPW on Sea Street, in his truck and at his home as well as other places.

"The Quincy Police investigation lasted four years and concerned allegations of events as long as 12 years ago," said Collins.

"The prosecution did not produce a single corroborating witness at the trial."

Former Mayor James Sheets testified as a character witness on behalf of Siciliano and, said Collins, other character witnesses were prepared to testify but were prevented from doing so.

"There was strong trial testimony of the outstanding reputation of Tony Siciliano for sexual morality," said the defense attorney.

"There were literally hundreds of Emergency Management members available to testify as to their personal contacts with Tony but the Rules of Evidence prevent such a parade of witnesses.

"While the jury believed the account of one of the complainants, there are significant grounds to appeal on the basis that the trial unfairly shifted the burden on Tony to explain why the accusations were made.

"A notice of appeal has been filed."

Siciliano was unpaid deputy director of Quincy's emergency response team for 20 years until 2002 when he was fired by the new Mayor William Phelan.

Phelan said Siciliano lacked the professional qualities to serve in the post after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks in New York and Washington.

At the same time, Siciliano retired from his basic city job as a foreman in the Traffic Department.

HOT SPOTS on the third floor of the house at 32 Spear St are attacked by Firefighter Kenneth Dowd as the Quincy Fire Department fought the three-alarm blaze that damaged the abandoned former group home Saturday on Spear Street.

Houghs Neck Center Trip To George's Island

The Houghs Neck Community Center will offer a day trip to George's Island in Boston Harbor Tuesday, Aug. 14, the bus leaving 1193 Sea St. for the boat at 9 a.m. and returning at 4 p.m.

Participants are urged to bring a box lunch and make reservations by Monday, Aug. 6. Cost of the trip is $6.

The Community Center is introducing a new program, a Children's Sewing Workshop, for youngsters ages 7 to 12, to be held Aug. 7, 9, 10 and 13 from 3 to 5 p.m.

The four classes aimed at introducing beginners to the use of the sewing machine cost $30. Sewing machines and materials are provided.

Other programs at the Community Center are ongoing including:

- Older citizen hot meals are served daily, Monday through Friday, at 11:30 a.m.

at a cost of $2.

- Seniors Bingo is held Monday and Wednesday from 12:30 to 3 p.m. at a cost of 25 cents a card.

- A free blood pressure clinic is offered on the second and fourth Thursdays from 9:30 to 11 a.m.

- Movie and pizza night for kids ages 5 through 12 are every Friday at 4:30 p.m. at a cost of $3.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On Aug. 4, 1753, 21-year-old George Washington is declared a Master Mason in a Masonic ritual performed by his fellow Freemasons during a secret ceremony. Washington had been initiated into the Masons in 1752.
- On Aug. 5, 1861, the government hands down the first Income Tax as part of the Revenue Act of 1861. The tax, which was levied on incomes over $800, was designed to help fund the Civil War. However, the measure was short-lived, as the government rescinded it in 1872.
- On Aug. 1, 1903, the first cross-country automobile trip, from New York City to San Francisco, is completed. The trail was blazed by a Packard, which finished in a mere 52 days.
- On July 31, 1916, Louise Smith, NASCAR's first female act, is born. Known as racing's "Good Ol' Gal," she competed in stock-car racing during its decidedly "good ol' boy" years. A native of Greenville, S.C., Smith raced various Modified, Sportsman and Grand National series events between 1946 and 1956, winning 38 races.

• On Aug. 3, 1926, singer Tony Bennett is born Antonio Dominick Benedetto in Queens, N.Y. By 1964, he had 24 top-40 hits under his belt. Bennett continued releasing material throughout the '90s, and in February 2001 he won a lifetime achievement Grammy.

• On Aug. 2, 1955, "To Catch a Thief," directed by Alfred Hitchcock and starring Cary Grant and Grace Kelly, debuts. The movie, featuring Grant as a former cat burglar suspected of a rash of jewelry thefts and Kelly as a spoiled heiress, won an Oscar for Best Photography.

• On July 30, 1976, singing star and radio personality Kate Smith makes her last public appearance. She sang her trademark number, "God Bless America," on a TV program honoring the U.S. Bicentennial. Smith launched her first radio show in 1931. She died in 1986.

A Mayor To Remember

Quincy has had some good mayors down through the years.

Those, for instance, who try to keep the city in good fiscal shape and also save taxpayers' money.

But for going far above and beyond the call of duty for the taxpayers, one really stands out:

John Miller, the only one of the 29 men who have served as mayor to die in office.

Frank McCauley, one of those good mayors, discovered Miller's dedication while researching for his book "A Political History of Quincy" published in 2000 as part of the city's centennial celebration.

Miller was elected in 1913 and took office in 1914.

The city was under its original charter back then. McCauley notes, and mayors were elected to one-year terms.

The charter provided that a special election would be called if a mayor vacated the office before the last 90 days of his term.

Some time after taking office, Miller was diagnosed with cancer with little hope for survival.

According to the charter, if Miller died or left office before Oct. 5, a special election would have to be called to determine his successor.

McCauley says Miller had a deathbed wish.

"As he lay dying," McCauley says, "he said he wished he could live long enough to spare the city the cost of a special election."

Miller held on until Oct. 6—beating the special election requirement by just one day. He was 60.

McCauley, who during his eight years (four terms) as mayor built a reputation as a fiscally tight-fisted chief executive has deep admiration for Miller.

"Imagine," he says, "lying there dying and thinking of just living long enough to save the city money. He certainly was a true conservative."

Joseph Whiton who was the city council president filled out the remaining days of Miller's term. Chester Campbell was elected to take office in 1915.

Whiton was elected in 1916—the first Quincy mayor to serve the present two-year term.

SPEAKING OF FRANK McCAULEY, did you know that if it hadn't been for fate we may never have heard of him.

That he might never have served 32 years in public office as mayor, city councillor and school committee member—the only person to be elected to all three offices.

And today he might not be writing The Sun's popular "Quincy's Yesterdays" column.

In fact, if it hadn't been for fate there might never have been a Frank McCauley. Here, or anywhere.

It all has to do with his father, Hugh McCauley, Jr. And, the Titanic.

Hugh was the youngest of five children of Hugh McCauley, Sr. living in Armach County, Northern Ireland.

Two brothers, twins James and William, came to the U.S. in 1905 and settled in Everett. Two sisters went to England. The brothers later urged Hugh to join them in America.

In April 1912 Hugh booked steerage passage on the Titanic.

That was the ill-fated crossing when the Titanic hit an iceberg in the North Atlantic April 14 and sank with a loss of 1,503 lives.

"Immigrants in those days traveled in steerage class well below in the ship," says McCauley. "Most of those lost on the Titanic were in that steerage class."

But Hugh, Frank's father to be, wasn't aboard the Titanic.

His father (Frank's grandfather) had taken ill before the Titanic sailed and cancelled his passage to stay with him.

Hugh came over on another ship in October.

"If he had been on the Titanic it is doubtful he would have survived being down there in the steerage class," says McCauley.

Hugh settled in Everett where he met Mary McKeown who was from there. Her family moved to Houghs Neck in 1920. And Mary and Hugh were married Oct. 12, 1924. Frank, their only child, was born Dec. 27, 1929.

"The fact that my father cancelled that trip on the Titanic changed the whole course of Quincy politics," McCauley muses.

Well, he certainly had a lot to do with that course.

POLITICAL TRIVIA: Who served the longest as mayor?

Jim Sheets is considered the all-time champ with 12 years (six terms) as Plan A mayor, Quincy's present form of government.

Amelio Della Chiesa also served 12 years as mayor—eight under Plan A and four under the former Plan E.

Plan E mayors were similar to today's city council presidents, elected by their colleagues, presided over city council meetings and were the city's official greeter. The city manager was the active chief executive.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1925 real photo postcard view of Bromfield Street looking west from Billings Road in Wollaston. The Wollaston Park Land Company, which had purchased most of the old Quincy farm, laid out the streets in this area a little over 100 years ago. The old Josiah Quincy Homestead is still standing at the end of this street between Gould and Muirhead Streets. At the time of this picture there were several lots undeveloped on this street including the right corner now the site of a small brick apartment. The land company had planted hundreds of American Elm trees along the streets throughout their Wollaston Park development, but most have been lost to hurricanes and the Dutch Elm disease. Today, this street is undergoing complete rebuilding with new granite curbs and concrete sidewalks as part of the city's infrastructure upgrade project throughout this part of Wollaston. Long Island Bridge Is A Disgrace

As I read the news story on State Senator Mike Morrissey's call to tear down the decrepit Long Island Bridge, I kind of agree with Morrissey.

This old bridge, built in 1951, needs to be replaced. It would apparently cost $40 million to do so and Boston seems reluctant to spend the money.

Morrissey thinks ferry service to the island from Boston make more sense and could well cost less than the $40 million to fix it.

Boston seems cool to the idea from the senator from Quincy. The City of Boston doesn't seem to think a new dock would survive the tides.

I can remember as a child taking the ferry from Battery Wharf in Boston's North End to Long Island to visit a family member at old Long Island Hospital. My family never used the bridge connected to Quincy. We always traveled over water and the fare was right at two cents apiece.

The bridge is now a disgrace. MBTA buses taking home the homeless to their island shelter have to empty out half the passengers before crossing it for fear of getting wet in the water below.

Perhaps, if the island was used for more than social services or a day camp for inner city kids, the bridge might get repaired.

Long Island is part of Boston but the only way on it is through the City of Quincy. For years and especially quite recently, tempers have grown between Boston and Quincy.

Now is the time for political leaders from both cities as well as Morrissey and State Senator Jack Hart, from senatorial district representing Long Island, should all sit down and work out the issue of access to the island and the debate over ferries or a bridge.

Takes Issue With Sunbeams Column On President Bush

I am a long time subscriber to The Quincy Sun. I have always felt that there was more "Quincy" information than in The Patriot Ledger. The Patriot Ledger, in my opinion, was too left leaning for my taste and I have long since cancelled that subscription.

However, it now appears that you have slanted your paper in the same direction, most recently evidenced by your hateful editorial against the President of our country. These types of articles usually seen in the mainstream media often appear abroad on the Web sites of Islamic terrorists, giving aid, comfort and encouragement to our enemies.

Most recently, General Joseph Dunford, USMC, a Quincy native and Iraq veteran, was here for the Flag Day celebration. You would have done well as the editor of a local paper to interview him regarding the present conflict and print a legitimate opinion rather than parrot Pelosi, Reid, Kennedy, Kerry et al, who hope to strive towards military failure with no regard for the fallen or their families, and to embarrass the President.

I will be looking for and hope to see more balanced coverage in the future.

'A Day In Italy' For Hancock Park Adult Day Health Center

Members and staff of Hancock Park's Adult Day Health Center recently spent a whole day in Italy, thanks to Gerard Martocchio who owns Gennaro's Eatery, Quincy.

It was "magnifico," according to center Director Pat Leavey, who said that everyone enjoyed their day in the "Old World" which included a homemade Italian feast, a ride in a gondola, some opera and bocce competitions.

For the event, Martocchio catered and donated a multi-course dinner with such homemade delights as chicken caeciatore, lasagna, chicken Parmesan, Italian breads, rolls and authentic Italian cookies.

Chef Martocchio is a good friend of Adult Day Health volunteer Mary Boschetto and her husband John. In fact, John Boschetto, now retired from his own bakery, often makes Italian baked goods at Gennaro's.

After Martocchio heard about Mary's volunteer work, he decided to bring the taste of Italy to the center's members.

As a result, the staff and members of the center adopted the Italian theme.

Activities Director Debbie Nelson created a lifetime gondola cutout for the day and staffer Maureen White dressed as the gondolier. White wore the striped red and black top shirt and black pants and the appropriate headgear for her duties on the gondola.

And to top off the day, Nelson who's trained in opera treated center members to an opera experience.

Landmarks Orchestra Concert Tonight At Beale Estate

Boston Landmarks Orchestra will present "David and Old Ironsides" at an outdoor concert tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Beale Estate, Adams National Park, 181 Adams Street, Quincy. Participants are invited to bring blankets or chairs to relax on the lawn of the estate.

"David and Old Ironsides" is the Landmarks Orchestra's newest commission with music by Boston composer Larry Thomas Bell and the narrative by Boston children's writer Constance Leeds.

The work commissioned by Landmarks' Artistic Director and Conductor Charles Ansbacher celebrates the true story of a young man named David DeBias who served aboard "Old Ironsides," the USS Constitution, in the 19th century.

In January of 2001, the Boston Landmarks Orchestra was founded with a mission of fostering a broad appreciation of classical music among diverse audiences. The orchestra performs free concerts celebrating historical settings and serving diverse audiences.

The event is free and street parking is available. Audience members may bring food, but no alcohol. In case of rain, the concert will be held at North Quincy High School. The decision on a change will be made two hours before the opening.

Folk Artist Instruction At Adams Historical Park

American folk artist Christopher Gurshin will offer "budding artists," age 10 and up, hands-on instruction in American folk art through a full day of instruction from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Monday, Aug. 6, at the Adams National Historical Park, 135 Adams St., Quincy.

Each child will be provided with individual attention and all the necessary equipment to create their own "work of art" on a small canvas.

According to Gurshin, each child will receive guidance throughout the day, as well as a detailed step-by-step numbered set of instructions, reusable precut Mylar stencils, and several guides, including a color print guide of the painting, "Adams Farm."

No painting experience is required for this class which is the first offered by Gurshin who has been a professional folk artists since 1966. However, students will need to bring some minor equipment, such as small brushes, a clean cloth, ruler and palette to class.

Both the materials list and the luncheon menu will be sent to all registered students. The cost of the class is $135. Interested persons may register or request additional at 617-770-1175 or visit www.nps.gov/adam.

Judy Paul Presented Beechwood Lifetime Service Award

The Beechwood Community Center's Board of Directors recently awarded Judy Paul its "Lifetime Service Award" in honor of her 25-years of dedication to the center.

"It is fitting that this special award be gifted to Judy Paul on the 25th anniversary meeting of our Center," said William Macdonald, Vice President of the Board of Directors.

Macdonald noted that 25 years ago, Judy and her late husband Cecil, along with other members of the community and the support of Eastern Nazarine College, founded the center.

"Since that time, Cecil has passed on, but Judy and the Paul family have continued their interest and support and the center has flourished," said Macdonald at the ceremony.

Macdonald noted that Judy Paul became president of the Board of Directors several years ago.

As a hands-on president, she "has worked tirelessly" with Executive Director Sharron Beals for the success of the center, noted Macdonald who said the quarter century anniversary was an especially fitting time to honor Paul.

Honored By Archbishop Williams High School

Quincy's Kelly Canniff Goff Named 'Woman of the Year'

Quincy resident Kelly Canniff Goff has been named the 2007 Outstanding Woman of the Year by Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree.

Goff was honored for her service to Archbishop Williams High School, the community and the coaching profession. As a student at Archbishop Williams she worked hard in the classroom, she participated fully in extracurricular activities and was a real presence in her class.

Several years after her graduation, Goff returned to Archbishop Williams as a track coach. This job complemented her teaching job in Weymouth as an elementary school teacher.

Goff has coached girls' cross country for 12 seasons

('95-present) and coached girls' spring track for 12 seasons ('96-present).

"Kelly Canniff Goff embodies the AWHs spirit that we, in the Williams community, so cherish," said Steve McGrath (Class of 1971), the director of development/alumni.

"As a 1990 graduate, Kelly has lived the advice that every graduate receives when they leave Archbishop Williams behind: 'Stay in touch and give back! She is truly a wonderful model and mentor to her athletes."

"She exemplifies a strong work ethic and sportsmanship. She is there for her athletes whether the team is large or small, blessed with lots of talent or running simply on desire."

Archbishop Williams High School is a Catholic co-educational high school, which educates young men and women spiritually, academically, morally and physically. A college-preparatory school, Archbishop Williams High School opened its doors in 1949 and is located at 80 Independence Ave., Braintree.

Mushroom Stuffed Zucchini

My brother John called one day and told me he had some fresh zucchini for me from a friend's garden. But I didn't realize how big they were until my sister-in-law Anita brought them to me.

Once I saw them, I thought they would be great stuffed.

I cut them in halves and scooped out the insides, which I sautéed with the rest of the ingredients.

The following recipe is for one large zucchini.

Mushroom Stuffed Zucchini

1 pound fresh mushrooms (cut) olive oil for sauteing
the inside of the zucchini 1/4 cup white wine garlic powder about a half cup seasoned bread crumbs
salt and pepper to taste
blue cheese for topping

Pre-heat oven to 350 degrees. In a frying pan, saute the mushrooms and the inside of the zucchini in the hot oil. Saute for a minute or two and then add the wine. If you do not want the wine, add either water or chicken or beef stock. Cook until mushrooms are done. Turn off the jet and add the bread crumbs blending until mixture is moistened enough. If you need more liquid, add a smidgen of water.

Scoop out the inside of the zucchini.

Place the zucchini in a large baking pan. Place stuffing on each one and top each one with blue cheese (I found this gives so much added flavor)

Bake covered for about 35 minutes and then uncover and bake about five minutes more until cheese is melted on top. When cooled cut in pieces and serve. (If you do not like blue cheese, any favorite shredded cheese will do.)

Keenan Urges Mayor: Address Health Costs

City Councillor at Large John Keenan has urged Mayor William Phelan to begin addressing the city's unfunded health insurance liability before it impacts municipal finances, including its bond rating.

Keenan, a candidate for reelection to a fourth two-year term on the Council, pointed out that future costs of health insurance to the city might be well in excess of $100 million.

"The City Council, over two years ago, and on two other occasions since, has urged the mayor to address the issue," he said.

"Many communities are already in the planning process, yet Quincy has not even completed the first step of determining the city's costs."

"The administration should have already completed the actuarial study and should have started the process of planning how to meet the city's obligations."

Keenan noted that Governor Deval Patrick recently signed into law the Municipal Partnership Act which would permit the city to join the Group Insurance Commission (GIC) as a potential way to control present and future health insurance costs.

"While some are pointing to the GIC legislation as the way to solve the city's present and future health insurance obligations," he said, "it may not be the solution."

He pointed out that recently negotiated contracts between the city and its employees do not require them to join the GIC and the city would have to engage in another round of bargaining.

An agreement with the employees would have to be reached prior to Oct. 1 in order for the city to join the GIC for the next fiscal year.

Even the director of the GIC, Keenan added, has said that joining the GIC "may not be the best option" for some cities and towns.

"If the administration had started this process two years ago, it would be in a much better position to address the city's present and future health insurance obligations," he said.

"The city would be better able to assess the potential benefits of the GIC and compare it to a redesign of the city's present plan."

"The city would also have been able to factor innovative approaches, such as a Retiree Medical Trust."

"How the city addresses present employee health insurance issues and how it plans for the future will have a significant impact on the city's financial health."

"Several months in the planning process already have been lost so it is imperative that the city complete the actuarial study immediately, begin the bargaining process with employees and look as well to innovative methods of addressing the city's long-term health insurance obligations."

NLRB Election Outs 35-Year Falon Union

For 35 years, the Office of Professional Employees Union (OPEIU) Local 6 of Quincy represented the field providers at the Fallon Ambulance Service.

Last year, they were challenged by the California-based National Emergency Medical Services Association (NEMSA) to a National Labor Relations Board election.

The result? No union at all.

The Paramedics, Emergency Medical Technicians and Chair Coach Attendants were given three options on the ballot — OPEIU or NEMSA or an open shop.

The balloting was held July 16 to July 30 and were counted Tuesday, July 31, and the vote was to forgo union representation after 35 years.

After a seven-day certication period, if the count is not contested by either losing party, the vote becomes final.

"This is a significant step for our employees to take," said Tim Fallon, the CEO of the company.

"We appreciate their trust in the ownership and management of Fallon Ambulance but we are also very mindful of the many contributions that unions have made to the workforce."

To all Quincy residents:

We are concerned Quincy residents who feel an obligation to speak up. We've been following the news of the Quincy 4 trial. We are shocked at the outcome. We want to say that we cannot understand why two young men with no prior record were sentenced to serve the first 10 days of a six-month suspended jail sentence and two years' probation for resisting arrest and/or disorderly conduct.

This breaking of silence is to acknowledge that we care about what happened. We care about our community.

We would like to thank all the individuals and organizations who have been helping to inform and guide the public through this process. This incident helped us learn about the judicial system and to witness how justice is served. Our hope is that this experience is an enlightenment to the residents in Quincy.

August Moon Fest Comes To Quincy Center Aug. 19

The August Moon Festival, the second biggest holiday on the Chinese calendar, is moving up the ladder in Quincy's plethora of multicultural observances.

Two year's ago it was at the Presidents Plaza. Last year, it was in the same place, only the location had been renamed the Kam Man Marketplace.

This year, the 20th annual Quincy August Moon Festival will be held Sunday, Aug. 19, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Hancock Street in the heart of downtown Quincy.

"We were too successful," said John Brothers, executive director of Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI), recalling the events of the last two years on the Quincy Avenue mall.

"There was not enough parking. People had trouble getting to it. The Festival has become one of the primary cultural events in Quincy."

An estimated 10,000 are expected at the 20th annual August Moon Festival between 1400 and 1600 Hancock St., a short walk from the MBTA station and free public parking.

Brothers predicted that "the new location will accommodate this festival for many years to come."

"The festival was launched in 1987 as a way to celebrate Asian heritage and culture to the Quincy community," said Tackey Chan, the chairperson of the 2007 event.

The first festival was held in the Wollaston Lutheran Church parking lot and the attendance, both in visitors and participants, was sparse.

This year, more than 100 local businesses, government and social service agencies and individuals will be participating in the festival at its prime new location.

The festival, which is celebrated in Vietnam, Korea, Malaysia and Singapore as well as China, is a family event offering entertainment for all ages.

There will be performances of Chinese, Filipino and Vietnamese music and dance and exhibits featuring the work of local Asian artists, including Lion Dances, Japanese Taiko Drumming and other entertainment for elders.

For the young, there will be a children's area complete with Asian games and crafts, and local restaurants will serve various types of Asian cuisine including Chinese and Vietnamese foods.

"Thank you to the hundreds of volunteers working hard to make our new venue a success," said Chan.

"Their work is a reflection of the growth of the Asian community in the area and making it into a leading cultural event on the South Shore."

"The celebration of this event in Quincy," said Brothers, "will help the community learn about Asian cultures and will give many countries (Asian and non-Asian) a chance to share their culture with the community."

"We are grateful for the commitment and support of our Grand Sponsors, Sunshine Travel, Mohegan Sun and especially Mayor Phelan and the city of Quincy.

"With their invaluable support, we hope to build on the success of our previous festivals to bring together the community to celebrate and increase awareness of Asian culture, and better serve the needs of Quincy's Asian-American community."

Compression Fittings Are Solder Alternative

Q. Last weekend, I had a bit of a plumbing problem. I was changing out the fill valve on the upstairs toilet and discovered the former owner had run solid copper pipe all the way up to the bottom of the toilet tank, then melted the plastic screw of the fill valve to fit the connection! And of course, there's no shutoff valve to the toilet, so I had to shut off water to the entire upstairs.

The folks at the home-improvement store told me how to replace part of the copper pipe with a flexible connection, and also sold me a shutoff valve with a compression fitting that should connect the copper pipe to the flexible pipe. I cut the copper pipe off at the measured spot but cannot get the compression ring to fit, even though it is supposedly one-half inch, just like the pipe diameter. Any suggestions? I'm tired of walking downstairs to shower! — Confused in Connecticut

A. You will need to apply a little more elbow grease, and a little actual grease, to get the compression ring to slide onto the pipe.

Compression fittings are really convenient plumbing accessories that suit the Diyer quite well. Most often used to connect pipes in locations where soldering is impractical or unsafe, these fittings — either valves or connectors — use a compression system to ensure a tight fit. On each side of the pipes to be connected, a metal ring is slipped on about one-quarter to one-half inch. The end of the pipe is inserted into the fitting. A compression nut (slipped onto the pipe before the ring) pushes the ring against the edge of the fitting as it is screwed on, sealing the pipe end.

The compression ring is a hair's breadth wider than the pipe diameter, so any issue with the pipe — warping, mineral buildup, etc. — will prevent it from sliding on. If the pipe is not bent or damaged, try polishing the outside using super-fine steel wool. Put a drop of penetrating oil inside the compression ring to help it slide on more easily.

Additionally, for a compression fitting to work, the edge of the pipe needs to be smooth and free of burrs. The smooth edge presses inside the compression fitting, creating an additional seal.

Hints For Homeowners

Don't Let The Sun Keep You Inside

(NAPS) — With dreams of lounging in the sun, you've invested thousands of dollars in your new deck or patio. But the sun is much hotter than you had expected, and with fears of skin cancer increasing every day, you find yourself spending more time indoors.

But don't despair. You can enjoy your deck or patio no matter the temperature if you install a retractable fabric awning. With the push of a button, cool, shady relief is at hand.

Your personal comfort is just one of the benefits of a retractable awning. The shade from your awning can reduce heat gain inside your home by as much as 77 percent, lowering indoor temperatures by 15 degrees. Not only will you save on your energy bill, but you will also protect valuable draperies, carpet and furniture from fading.

"Most people add an awning to their homes for personal comfort so they can enjoy a deck or patio," said John Dearden, managing partner of Eclipse Awning Systems, a leading national manufacturer.

"The additional benefits—reduced energy costs and protecting home furnishings—are advantages that homeowners quickly appreciate just as much."

There has never been a better time to consider a retractable awning. Improvements in materials and design innovations have made retractable awnings longer lasting and more flexible than ever before. Lateral arms, roller tubes, connecting components and all-weather performance fabrics, such as the Sunbrella brand, are designed for carefree service.

Anyone concerned about sun exposure will be glad to know that Sunbrella fabrics have been recognized as The Skin Cancer Foundation as offering significant levels of sun protection.

Motorization of retractable awnings and associated electronic controls contribute to carefree service. Wind sensors can automatically retract your awning to protect it from high winds, and sun sensors will cause the awning to extend when the sun comes out.

One of the most recent advances in retractable awnings is flexibility for just about any space. Through advanced engineering, an awning can be extended up to 16.5 feet from your home to create an entire deck or patio. For smaller spaces, such as a town home, retractable awnings can be created that extends as much as 11.5 feet but are only 8 feet wide.

"Anyone considering a retractable awning should do their homework to be sure of getting a quality product," Dearden said. "With the right materials and professional installation, a retractable awning adds comfort and value to your home."

Visit www.eclipseawnings.com for more information.

Time To Repair Or Replace HVAC System?

(NAPS) — When it's time to decide whether to repair or replace your existing air-conditioning system, there are a few things to consider. When the heating, ventilating and air-conditioning (HVAC) system is newer, performing simple repairs is usually more cost effective and will often prolong the life of your system. Conversely, older systems may experience more complicated problems in which repairs are possible but may not be the best choice in the long run. Comparing the cost of replacement may aid in your decision.

Things to consider — The experts at Coleman Heating & Air Conditioning from Johnson Controls suggest a few things to examine, when it comes to your HVAC unit.

First, as you make your comparison, consider energy costs. Today's air conditioning systems are up to 60 percent more efficient than systems manufactured 10 years ago. If you are concerned about utility bills and are faced with an expensive repair, look at the energy savings new systems offer.

Second, the nature of the repair is also important. Repairs that require replacement of system components may result in an unmatched system, which can decrease system efficiency, compromise comfort and shorten the compressor life span.

Third, when it comes to comfort, if repairs to an immediate problem will not address ongoing comfort issues, such as cold spots, drafts, humidity or air-quality concerns, these are good indicators that it's time for a new system.

Today's new systems, such as the Echelon ST Series 15+ SEER air conditioner from Coleman, offer a variety of new features, including two-stage cooling, WhisperDrive technology and humidifiers, designed to increase comfort and improve indoor air quality.

For more information, visit www.colemanac.com or call (877) 874-7378 to learn about stylish, energy-efficient and quiet HVAC units that help to ensure comfort.

Neighborhood Housing Homebuyer Workshop

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in conjunction with Rockland Trust, will host a first-time homebuyer workshop Tuesday, Aug. 7 from 5 to 9 p.m. and Thursday, Aug. 9 from 5 to 9 p.m.

The workshop is open to all Massachusetts residents, regardless of income. It will be held at the Abington Town Hall, 500 Gliniewicz Way, Abington.

Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive a homebuyer certificate.

Topics include mortgage options, legal aspects of the home buying process, how a home inspection works, and other presentations from related professionals.

Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs. There is a $15 fee per person. Call (617) 770-2227 ext. 29.

Protect Your Home

(NAPS) — Although many of today's home have security systems, there are further steps a homeowner can take to help prevent intrusion.

Forexample, making sure a home appears occupied is an easy way to divert uninvited guests. Invitations to intrusion include notes on the door, unshoveled snow or an unmowed lawn, accumulations of mail or newspapers, total interior darkness before a normal bedtime and an empty garage or carport with no vehicles present.

According to the experts at HouseMaster, leaders in the home inspection industry, making the house appear lived in weaves away by alternating timed lighting and radios and having neighbors pick up the newspaper or mail is a critical security measure.

To discourage intruders, also keep doors and windows locked, especially at basement and first-floor levels or where the home is accessible from a tree, porch or other structure. Inside doors that lead to the basement or garage should also be kept locked.

Electrical Fixture Cause Of $350,000 Blaze

1920 and located in Quincy's historic district had recently been a residential home for at-risk juveniles until just days prior to the fire.

According to all reports, there was absolutely no connection between the former residents and the destructive blaze.

According to the department report, "The fire first presented itself in the ceiling of the centrally located second floor bath. Truck companies opened up more of the ceiling revealing that much of it was involved in fire."

"The fire extended into the roof rafters and (was) breaking through into the finished attic space."

Smoke, but no fire, billowed into the adjacent house on Francis Avenue, according to Spear Street neighbors Stephen Jones and Tom Morgan.

On Tuesday, giant tubes were still vacuuming smoke residue from the adjacent Francis Avenue house which appeared to have suffered some collateral damage but was not reported to have caught fire.

And on Tuesday, Jones and Morgan were still awestruck by the work of Quincy's firefighters.

"The firemen were amazing," said Jones who watched the firefighters battle for hours through the 90-degree heat and humidity. "As hot as it was, they were up on the roof. The smoke was coming out of the eaves.

When they opened up the roof, it just started cooking."

"I was in complete awe. After watching them in action, I can't say enough. Unbelievable!" said Morgan. Morgan, a former postal employee, said that the firefighters deserve everything they ask for and more.

Morgan and Jones both noted that the Spear Street house had been a residence for up to 16 teenage boys, mostly from broken homes or parentless home. Most recently, eight teenagers lived there.

"The kids. They moved them back to Lexington," said Morgan.

who added there had been some problems and neighborhood meetings about the juvenile residence.

In addition, they noted that the Quincy Square location did not seem an optimal setting for a home for at-risk juveniles.

However, the residence wasn't all bad for the neighborhood, according to both Jones and Morgan. They recalled that the teenagers sometimes did chores and shoveled snow for their elderly neighbors and they would "...do it voluntarily."

"We all thought the timing (of the fire) was suspicious," Morgan said, noting the young tenants had just been moved.

However, Morgan, also recalled that all the lights were left on in the entire house all the time after it was vacated. "They had all the lights on.... It was lit up like a Christmas tree, all the electricity, all the floors, all night."

Among the dozens of firefighters at the scene were Captain Steven Baylis and James Kennedy, Lt. James McClusky and Kevin O'Connor and firefighters Michael Casey and Kenneth Dowd.

No Preliminary Election First Time In 67 Years

(Cont'd From Page 1)

Linda Stice's decision not to run.

Seeking re-election are Elaine Dwyer, vice chairwoman, and David McCarthy. The other candidates are former School Committee member Jo-Ann Bragg, Eileen Mullen of Trafford Street and Nicholas Puleo of Phillips Street.

In addition to Denehey and Boussy, others who did not return nomination papers were Kevin Worley, Douglas Street; Stan Underwood, Clay Street and John Rodophele, Grenwood Road.

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, July 24, at approximately 9:15 p.m., Detective Ed Ryan was stopped at the light at the intersection of Elm Avenue and Hancock Street when he observed a Blazer fail to stop at the red light exiting the 7-11 Store. He also saw that the front right passenger was sitting on the doorframe, hanging out of the vehicle, banging his fists on the roof.

LT. DAN MINTON

There was a large group of youths in the parking lot yelling at the occupants of the Blazer as it sped off north-bound on Hancock Street.

Just as Detective Ryan followed the Blazer, Communications informed area cars that there was a disturbance at the 7-11 store. While cruisers were sent to the 7-11 store, Detective Ryan informed Communications that the vehicle he was following might have been involved in the incident.

Officer Lane Watkins assisted Detective Ryan as they stopped the suspect vehicle on West Squantum Street at Hancock Street. As the Officers approached the vehicle, they observed a female in the back seat moving about frantically.

They also saw that the front right passenger was attempting to use his right foot in a kicking motion as if to hide something under the seat. Due to these suspicious movements, the occupants were ordered to keep their hands up where they could be seen. As Detective Ryan approached the window, he could smell the odor of marijuana. The front right passenger was removed from the vehicle and as he walked, it appeared that he was not putting any weight on his right foot.

Concerned that the suspect might be harboring a weapon, Detective Ryan conducted a pat-frisk and found a multi-colored glass pipe with black residue, used to smoke marijuana. The suspect (#1) was handcuffed and placed in Officer Watkins's cruiser. Detective Ryan removed the female (suspect #2) from the rear seat and asked if she had any weapons or drugs on her. She said she did and then removed a clear plastic sandwich baggie from the right cup of her bra and gave it to the Detective.

Inside the bag were three smaller bags filled with marijuana. Detective Ryan recognized that this was street distribution and she was also placed under arrest. Officer Watkins pat-frisked the driver (suspect #3) while Detective Ryan searched the Blazer and found a large bag of marijuana.

The driver was placed under arrest. Suspect #1, a 17-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with "Possession of Class D (Marijuana) and Conspiracy to Violate the Drug Control Law."

Suspect #2, an 18-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with "Possession of Class D with the Intent to Distribute, Drug Free School Zone violation and Conspiracy to Violate the Drug Control Law." Suspect #3, a 22-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with "Possession of Class D and Conspiracy to Violate the Drug Control Law."

The drugs were seized as evidence and sent to the lab for confirmation. Back at the 7-11 store, youths denied there was a problem.

Nice Work!

LARCENY, 12:58 p.m., 45 Gay St. Past. Three statues taken from the front of the house.

VANDALISM/PROPERTY, 1:36 p.m., Manet Community Health Center, 1193 Sea St. Tagging. Complaints for tagging.

VANDALISM/PROPERTY, 5:47 p.m., 776 Hancock St. To motor vehicle. Passenger side rear window was smashed sometime overnight.

VANDALISM/PROPERTY, 5:55 p.m., 1076 Furnace Brook Parkway. Hot tub.

BREAKING AND ENTERING/PAST, 9:22 p.m., 99 Elmwood Park. Dwelling. Toshiba DVD player, Apple laptop computer, and HP laptop computer known missing.

LARCENY, 9:26 p.m., 973 Sea St. Gasoline. Someone siphoned gasoline from two cars.

VANDALISM/PROPERTY, 10 p.m., 129 Copeland St. Youths threw items at car.

FRIDAY, JULY 27

ASSAULT AND BATTERY, 1:33 a.m., Marina Bay Marina, 333 Victory Rd. Past. Group was throwing items off of "J" pier into water. Ran off when caller yelled at the, got into Mercedes with plate similar to 643W4V and fled. Victim is a female, 20-25 years of age, curly hair.

VANDALISM/PROPERTY, 1:58 a.m., McDonald's, 275 Hancock St. In parking lot. Male smashed out passenger side window of rental car. He then fled in a maroon Pathfinder, plate lists to black Honda.

VANDALISM/PROPERTY, 6:10 a.m., 39 Rivebank Rd. Dog feces. Someone put dog feces on her 1991 Buick.

Internet Scams

If you are like most people, you like free offers - if it's free, it's for me. On the Internet, there are many advertisements, such as "Get your free laptop" or "You have just won a free computer", which often lures people to seek further information, but sadly, not the accurate information. The headlines make it seem so simple. I decided to investigate one of these offers.

I opened a site called "Electronics Bonus Paths", which offered a free laptop computer. Their first request for information about me was my email address. Keep in mind that when you give out your email, you are verifying that it is active and you may receive more junk email. After carefully reading the "terms and conditions" of the offer and the small print, I learned that there were going to be problems. To be eligible for your "free" laptop, your standard terms are required, such as, being a U.S. citizen, and being 18 years of age or older. As I read on, it became more obvious that additional requirements were being put in place that would allow more solicitations and ultimately put my personal information at risk. This was the small print:

"... (iii) agree to receive solicitations, marketing materials and other communications from us and Sponsors via e-mail, telemarketing, direct marketing, mobile marketing and any other method; (iv) have cookies enabled; (v) provide the address of your principal residence as a shipping address; and (vi) comply with each of the provisions of these Terms and Conditions." http://www.electronicbonuspaths.com/info.htm?tp=to&promo_name=dynamicgift&gift=25820

Receive solicitations? As if I don't get enough already. This also requires that you enable cookies, which allows websites to send their pop-ups straight to your computer, increasing your risk for viruses. There's no doubt you will be in desperate need for a new laptop! But wait, there's more! You must complete "Sponsor Offers" and "Comply with the cancellation limitations." What does this even mean?

For this promotion, Select Your FREE Laptop, you must complete a total of 15 offers as follows: Page 1 (Silver) - complete any 3 offers; Page 2 (Gold) - complete any 3 offers; Page 3 (Platinum) - complete any 9 offers to get your gift.

Offers for what and what am I getting myself into? This is when you should be thinking it was too good to be true. A scam? For sure. Even after you complete everything they ask of you, you're still not guaranteed to receive the free product they are offering you, according to the Better Business Bureau. "Last year, the BBB System logged more than 5,200 complaints against online and direct mail marketers. Many consumers complained that, despite jumping through the considerable hoops - which often included buying pricey merchandise, services or providing friends' email addresses - they didn't receive the "free" merchandise they were promised or were billed for other merchandise they didn't want."

This is not to say that everyone who followed the "terms and conditions" and did everything they were suppose, didn't receive their free gift. However, after everything you will have to go through - the risk of viruses, putting up with more spam through your email and telemarketing, and possibly being charged for other unauthorized merchandise, you have to ultimately decide if it's worth the hassle. Remember, in order to pay for the merchandise or services, you would also have to provide your credit card information. When it comes to the Internet offers, nothing seems to be free, so be careful and research the offer using the Internet. Using Google, punch in the name of the soliciting group, the person soliciting or even the telephone number if given. Use the Internet against those who are using the Internet against you!

Disappointing Finish To A Magical Season

Road Ends For Quincy Legion

By SEAN BRENNAN

Quincy Post 95 had its magical season come to an end last week in the opening round of the American Legion South Sectional tournament.

Post 95 lost the first two games of their best-of-three series against Brockton Post 35 and was eliminated from post-season contention. Post 95 dropped Game One at Adams Field last Wednesday night, 7-4, and fell in defeat last Thursday, 9-5 in Game Two, at Campanelli Stadium down in Brockton. The team finished the 2007 season with a 14-9 overall record.

"This is absolutely disappointing," said manager Dan Sweeney. "On the other hand, after going 2-18 last year, this was the first time in 30-40 years we've made it to the second round."

In the second and deciding game, Quincy Post 95 trailed by just one run heading into the eighth inning, but Post 35 broke the game wide open with a three-run outburst that put the game and the series out of reach.

Post 95 showed heart throughout the series and after falling behind 4-1 after two innings in Game Two, Quincy scored one run in the top of the third on a RBI single off the bat of shortstop Mike LeBel.

Post 95 took a 5-4 lead with a three-run fifth inning. Jay Lewis singled, Mike Leone and LeBel hit back-to-back doubles and Bill Kiley singled. Tom Conley drove in the final run of the frame for Post 95 with a fielder's choice.

The atmosphere at Adams Field for Game One was electric, and Quincy Post 95 got the home crowd into the action early in the game, but missed scoring opportunities in the first few innings came back to bite Post 95 in the end.

Quincy put up the first run of Game One on a monster home run from Tom Conley to start the second inning. Brockton's ace starting pitcher Brian Galligan left a flat curve ball over the middle of the plate, and Conley deposited it over the fence in left field to give Post 95 the 1-0 lead.

In the bottom of the third inning, Tom Power led off with a walk and after Galligan recorded two straight outs, Mike LeBel (two hits) singled, moving Power to third. With runners on the corners, Bill Kiley (two hits) drove in Power with a single, but Post 95 would leave LeBel and Kiley stranded in scoring position.

Post 95 would not have another runner on base until there was one out in the bottom of the eighth, as Galligan settled down and retired fourteen straight Quincy batters after Kiley knocked in Power to make the score 2-0 Quincy.

"We didn't get to Galligan early tonight," said Sweeney. "He is a very strong pitcher who settled in after the third inning and shut us down until the eighth."

Quincy 14-Under Softball Team Surprises All In Tournament

The Quincy 14 and under girls travel softball team played earlier this month in the Taunton Girl's Softball League ASA Tournament.

The tournament was an open event with ten teams participating. The Quincy entry was competing for the first time at the tourney, and entered play with little knowledge of what to expect from the competition in the round robin tournament.

In their first game Quincy faced the Fire Stars from Pepperell, and came away with a 5-3 victory. In their second game against the Bristol County Wave, Bristol, RI, Quincy played the Wave to a 6-6 tie.

Quincy won its third game of the day 10-8 to earn the number two seed for the playoff round which began on Sunday.

The playoff round started with Quincy facing the Mass Bay Inferno out of New Bedford. Quincy won 5-2. With the win, Quincy advanced to the semifinals, where they played in a rematch game against The Wave. The team played strong defense and produced at the plate in the 9-2 win.

In the finals, Quincy played against the Rehoboth Fusion. The girls played hard and were down by a 5-3 score after three innings, but the Fusion were too much to handle and Quincy dropped the game 11-3.

With their second place finish, Quincy was the talk of the tournament. A superb team effort was given by Cristina Doherty, Sam Bonanni, Katie Sheridan, Julia Yee, Colleen Newcomb, Jamie Shaughnessy, Devon McKay, Courtney Peters, Taylor Shepherd and Emma Ansley.

Jimi Bonanni coached the team with assistance from Dave Sheridan and Bob Yee. The team sponsor was Perfection Auto Repair.

Third Annual Dennis Thomson Golf Tournament, Banquet Aug. 17

The third annual Dennis C. Thomson NQHS Scholarship Fund Golf Tournament and banquet in memory of Dennis C. Thomson will be held Friday, Aug. 17 at Presidents Golf Course and at the Irish Pub, 55 Billings Rd., Quincy.

The golf tournament will begin (rain or shine) with a scramble tournament/shot gun start at 7:30 a.m. with registration beginning at 6:30 a.m. at Presidents Golf Course.

Entry fee is $125 per golfer and includes greens fees, cart and banquet. Cash prizes will be awarded for: hole in one, first, second and third place teams, closest to the pin and longest drive.

All participants must wear collared shirts. No tank tops, halter tops or dangereous of any color.

The banquet to follow after golf is at the Irish Pub. If you only wish to attend the banquet, a $25 donation is requested.

All proceeds will benefit the Dennis C. Thomson North Quincy High School Scholarship Fund.

Checks and donations should be made payable to Dennis C. Thomson Scholarship Fund, c/o Dennis C. Thomson, 68 Freeman St., Quincy, MA 02170.

innings. When Anthony Alibrandi replaced him in the eighth, Post 95 trailed 4-2.

"Alexander kept us in the game with his pitching and he gave us a chance at the end," added Sweeney. "This was his best pitching performance of the season until he got tired in the eighth."

In the bottom of the eighth, Post 95 was looking for anything to kick-start their offense against Galligan. After Power popped to shortstop for the first out of the inning, Jay Lewis doubled, giving Post 95 its first base runner since the third.

Left fielder Mike Leone popped out to shortstop for the second out, but LeBel responded as he has all season long with a RBI single, scoring Lewis, to make the score 4-3.

Brockton Post 35 quickly responded with three runs off Alibrandi in the top of the ninth inning. Alibrandi's single, followed by another single, a passed ball, a hit batsman, and another single, resulted in three runs and a commanding 7-3 lead for

The boys of Quincy Post 95 would not go quietly, however, in the home half of the ninth. Kyle beat out an infield hit to start the ninth. After Conley struck out for the first out, pinch-hitter Steve Kussman singled into the hole at shortstop to put runners on first and second with one out.

Mike Jay followed Kussman's single with a single of his own, but Sweeney held Kyle at third as the throw from the outfield was on the money to the plate. With the bases loaded, Mike Horgan drove in Kyle with a sacrifice fly to left field. Jared Kenney, representing the tying run, struck out to end the game.

MANAGER DAN SWEENEY (left) guided Quincy Post 95 to a 14-9 overall record and an American Legion post season appearance for the first time in seven years. Athletic officer Lenny Seitz is on the right.

"Things changed this season for us," said athletic officer Lenny Seitz. "Dan Sweeney brought his own style of managing to the team and it showed itself throughout the spring and into summer. He preaches team chemistry, and the team bought into what he was saying. Do your job, be ready to play at a high level when called upon and play hard for the program."

The steps Post 95 took this year, one season removed from a 2-18 campaign give Seitz and Sweeney a clearer picture of what can and should be expected in 2008.

"Experience and team chemistry is the key to a successful team," Seitz added. "We have shown that we can play with the likes of a Brockton, but we had never been that far in the post-season before. Next season, with Dan having another year to develop these players, the team should be prepared to play at an even higher level."

The marked improvement of Post 95 has brought back fans that have not been in the stands the last few years, and the team's success has shown Seitz the support of parents like never before.

"This year we had veterans from the post who had never been to games and this year went to most home and some away games. But it was the parents who showed the most support. They were there throughout the year and it was great to see and was much appreciated by the coaching staff and myself. I would also like to wish Tom Power success in the future as he will be graduating from Post 95."

Post 95 will wrap up the summer with an alumni game on August 18 at 2 p.m. The game, which will be played at Adams Field, will match the 2007 roster against former Post 95 players of the past. There will be a buffet dinner at the post following the nine-inning game.

Any interested alumni should call athletic officer Lenny Seitz at (617) 472-4287 for more information.

Quincy Girls Travel Softball Kicks Off Jimmy Fund Week

The Quincy Girls Travel softball team kicked off a weeklong fundraising effort in Quincy to benefit the 77th Annual Patrick White Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament. The team raised $722 during a softball fun night at Pageant Field on July 27.

At the night of softball fun, girls of all ages tested their softball skills and enjoyed a pizza party.

David Tapper On Quincy College Dean's List

The Quincy College Spring Semester Dean's List that recently appeared in The Quincy Sun was incomplete and as a result omitted the name of David Tapper.

The Sun regrets this omission.

Britney Johnson-Papile, of Quincy, recently signed a letter of commitment to play basketball at Barton County Community College in Great Bend, Kansas.

Johnson-Papile will join a program that is coming off a 27-3 season, including a 15-1 conference record in the Jayhawk Junior College Conference. Head basketball coach Chance Lindley is looking forward to utilizing Johnson-Papile as a scoring point guard, whose versatility will help to create a variety of offensive opportunities for the Lady Cougars.

Johnson-Papile played basketball at North Quincy High School for three years and finished her high school career at Notre Dame Prep.

Wollaston Blue Eliminated From Playoffs

The Wollaston Blue Senior Babe Ruth team was eliminated from the playoffs by Norwood in a best two-out-of-three series last week.

In Game One, Wollaston Blue received a solid pitching performance from Matt Edgerly (three hits, zero earned runs), but fell in defeat 1-0. Wollaston could manage just three hits all game, with Dave Regan contributing two hits and Rob DeAngelis one.

Game Two saw Norwood score four unearned runs to beat Wollaston 6-4. Eric Moreschi and Dan Meyers limited Norwood to just five hits and two earned runs.

Brendan Carnell (two hits, two RBIs), Dave Griffin (two hits, one run) and Dan Meyers (two hits) led the offensive attack.

The Blue completed its most successful season, making the post season in just its third year in the league.

Next year the team will miss its 18-year old players. Brendan Carnell, who for the second year in a row led the team in batting (.467) and in on-base percentage (.567); Matt Edgerly, who led the team in wins (four), batted .417, and scored a team-leading 18 runs; Dave Regan, who batted .333; Eric Moreschi; Steve McGarty; Corey Morgan; Rob DeAngelis and Brennan Carey.

Carey, McGarty, Moreschi and Regan are three-year veterans of Wollaston Blue.

Wollaston Blue is looking forward to the return of its ten other players, including 17-year olds Dan Meyers, Dan Munkley, Chris Timmins, Edwin Nunez, Chris Doyle, Tom Pepe and Paul Oldham; 16-year olds Dave Griffin and Greg Ouellette; and 15-year old Joe Edgerly.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A turn in a relationship upsets the amorous Arian, who is puzzled by Cupid's romantic antics. Be patient and considerate. The confusion will soon sort itself out.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's a good time for traveling Taureans to take off for fun-filled jaunts to new places. And don't be surprised if Cupid tags along for what could be a very eventful trip.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You appear to be of two minds about continuing a relationship that seems to be riding roughshod over your emotions. A frank talk could help you decide one way or the other.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Stepping back from a relationship problem provides a new perspective on how to deal with it. Meanwhile, watch your words. Something said in anger now could backfire later.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A changing situation makes the Big Cat uneasy. But hold on until things settle down around the 4th. Meanwhile, continue your good work on that still-unfinished project.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A decided improvement in a work-place situation results in an unexpected, but very welcome, added benefit for everyone. Personal relationships also improve.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Money matters remain a bit unsettled but will soon ease into the kind of stability you appreciate. Meanwhile, an expanding social life offers a chance to make new friends.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Use an unexpected roadblock in your monetary dealings to reassess your financial plans and make changes, if necessary. It will soon be smooth sailing again.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Aspects of love are strong for both single and paired Sagittarians. Professional dealings also thrive under the Sag's clever handling of difficult situations.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Set a realistic goal and follow it through to completion. Remember: You're more likely to impress the right people with one well-done job than with lots of jobs left undone.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You like to plan ahead. That's fine. But be prepared to make some changes because of an unsettled period that influences your aspects through the 4th.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A brief phase of instability affects your usual work cycle. Use the time to catch up on chores around the house or office. Things settle down soon after the 4th.

BORN THIS WEEK: You love being the center of attention and would probably be a big success in show business.

Sacred Heart Music Ministry To Host Children's Choir Camp Aug. 6-10

The music ministry of Sacred Heart Parish will hold its first Children's Choir Camp Monday, Aug. 6 through Friday, Aug. 10.

This innovative program, for children entering grades 3-7 as of September, 2007, will be held on the parish grounds, 386 Hancock St., Quincy, from 9 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. daily.

This year's camp theme is Noah's Ark. The goal of the camp is to foster a better understanding of the church's liturgy and music.

Camp will include times for fun, games and crafts as well as signing and prayer. A hot lunch and two snacks will be provided daily.

The week culminates Friday, Aug. 10 with a short musical presentation based on Noah and the Ark, titled "100 Percent Chance of Rain."

A "make your own sundae" party for all in attendance will follow the performance.

An extended day on Thursday, Aug. 9 is planned with final music rehearsals, a short Evening Prayer liturgy, and a family movie night in conjunction with the parish's "Popcorn, Movie & Discussion" night. The movie for the evening will be "The Chronicles of Narnia: The Lion, The Witch and the Wardrobe."

Camp openings are available. Registration deadline is Monday, July 28. Cost is $75 per child and includes all workbooks, music, crafts, lunches, snacks and dinner and popcorn on Thursday.

For reservations, or more information, contact Sacred Heart Rectory at 617-328-8666 or visit the website www.sacredheartquincy.org.

held at 6:30 p.m. followed by the book discussion from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

The 9:30 a.m. worship service on Sunday, July 29 will be entitled "The Spirituality of Harry Potter."

The Sunday, Aug. 19 worship service will be held at 5 p.m. instead of the morning. The "Soulful Sundown" service will be a theological hymn sing together, exploring favorite hymns and their meanings.

Bethany Congregational Church

Bethany Congregational Church, 18 Spear St., Quincy Center, will have a Communion Sunday Worship and One Room Sunday School at 10 a.m.

The Rev. Gary W. Smothers will conduct the service and preach a sermon entitled "Love's Last Appeal."

Childcare will be available for infants and toddlers.

This is also "Food Pantry Sunday." Donations of jam, jelly or mayonnaise are most welcome.

Following the worship service there will be fellowship time in the Allen Parlor where light refreshments will be served.

All are welcome. The church is handicapped accessible.

'Son Harvest County Fair' At Covenant

"Son Harvest County Fair" will be held Monday, through Friday, Aug. 13-17 at Covenant Congregational Church, 315 Whitwell St. in Quincy.

The fair will feature singing, skits, crafts and games as participants learn how to grow "good fruit" in their lives.

Fair hours are 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. daily.

The event is free, but limited to children ages 5 through the fifth grade.

For more information or to register a child, call Covenant Congregational Church at 617-479-5728.

Houghs Neck Congregational Church

The Sunday service at Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave., Quincy is held at 9:30 a.m.

The guest pastor will be Rev. Herb Davis, long-time mentor of Pastor John Castricum.

Diaconate members serving will be Janice Hughes and Dick Robbins. Peter Johnston, associated with the church since childhood, will pay the organ and piano.

During the summer members of the congregation choose in advance the hymns sung each Sunday. This week the hymns were chosen by Susan Stimpson.

Refreshments are served in the Coffee Room following the service.

The church is air-conditioned and has cushioned pew seats.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SUPERSTITIONS . . . Are you a superstitious person? What are your feelings about walking under ladders, avoiding black cats, broken mirrors, knocking on wood?

Superstitions have fretted people with fears and follies a long, long time. The world-wide habit of believing in supernatural influence dates back to Plato's time - 400 years B.C. - perhaps longer. Some people are very superstitious. You will never convince them that superstition may be nothing other than an unfounded idea or a coincidence. . . In fact, superstitions are often funny and it requires a sense of humor to witness the antics and behavior of some people who are superstitious. Mostly, superstitions are harmless - as long as a custom or legend does not disturb a mind with incredulity or contempt of Divine Power.

plete in fighting for our taxpayers, but we will continue to address health insurance costs, grow our commercial tax base and locate other ways to ease the burden on our residential taxpayers."

Haley harkened back to June 21, 2004, when he submitted a letter to the City Council regarding the city's Fiscal 2005 budget, which included an analysis of a four-year (Fiscal 2000-04) increase in single family tax bills.

The dates included the final budgets of Mayor James Sheets, who lost his 2001 election bid to Phelan.

"The city of Quincy's four-year increase for single family tax bills was 45.72 per cent," said Haley. "The average four-year increase in Quincy was 11.43 per cent which was the highest in the cities in the state and the communities surrounding Quincy."

Since then, according to Haley, Quincy's four-year increase has been 3.84 per cent and its yearly average increase has been 1.28 per cent compared to:

Braintree	4.61
Brockton	3.94
Dedham	9.72
Fall River	9.03
Fitchburg	27.11
Lawrence	3.83
Lowell	6.57
Marshfield	8.87
Milton	3.57
Newton	6.55
Newton	11.42
Plymouth	26.62
Revere	7.48
Springfield	22.02
Weymouth	13.84
Worcester	12.18

13.56	4.52
11.77	3.92
12.18	4.06

Phelan attributed his success in holding down the tax rate to aggressive collection of outstanding revenue, his efforts to grow the city's commercial tax base and his administration's ability to leverage outside funds.

He said he negotiated deals with Quincy College, the Quarry Hills Association and the MWRRA to recognize more revenue for the city.

He cited a number of commercial initiatives like the revitalization of the downtown area, expanding the park at Crown Colony, a new parking garage in North Quincy and plans to develop the Fore River Shipyard.

He also pointed to a $5 million state grant for downtown Quincy, a $6 million federal earmark for the Quincy Center Concourse, a $19 million state investment in the Crown Colony ramps, and $7 million from the state to upgrade Wollaston Beach.

"Our success is not an accident," he said. "It's a result of a direct commitment made to our taxpayers in my 2004 inaugural address. I will work hard to protect our taxpayers."

Reverse Mortgage Seminar Aug. 8

Patrick D'Ambrosio, a reverse mortgage specialist, will conduct a seminar on the subject Wednesday, Aug. 8, from 1 to 2 p.m. at the Koch Park and Recreation Complex, One Merrymount Parkway.

Homeowners age 62 and older can learn how a reverse mortgage can improve their quality of life. Attendance is free and light refreshments will be served.

Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

HIGH-ARCHED FOOT

A high-arched foot, also called a Cavus foot, can cause problems for people because the high arch results in the heel and ball of the foot absorbing more than their fair share of weight. People who have the condition will often experience hammertoes, calluses, and/or pain when they stand or walk. Having a high arch can also cause one's foot to be unsteady, which can lead to ankle sprains. Many neurological disorders result in people having a high arch, but it can also be simply a structural abnormality. Podiatrists can treat the condition in several ways, depending on what kind of problems the high arches are causing. In some cases, surgery may be the best option.

The first step in treating any foot problem is an accurate diagnosis. This requires a comprehensive history, physical exam, and, in some cases, x-rays and lab tests. Depend on it - whatever is causing your foot pain, whether it's arch pain or an injury, a hereditary condition, or any number of ills that can plague the feet - you can count on us for relief. For family podiatry that combines state of the art technology and old-fashioned care and compassion, call 781-986-3668 for an appointment at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

P.S: It is important for people with high arches to wear properly fitting shoes.

Learning To Swim Draws Hundreds Of Youngsters To Lincoln Hancock Pool

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Every summer, for over 30 years, the Recreation Department's swimming program at the Lincoln Hancock Community School has taught hundreds of Quincy youngsters to swim and this summer is no different.

In a city like Quincy, that's the way it should be, according to Recreation Director Barry J. Welch. Welch believes that learning to swim is essential in Quincy for safety's sake as well as for the fun of it.

"With 27 miles of waterfront, not only is it sound recreationally to teach as many kids as possible, it's the responsible thing to do," said Welch who has directed the program since the pool opened on July 5, 1976.

Welch noted that six lane pool which holds 450,000 gallons of water meets AAU (Amateur Athletic Union) standards and is used for regional high school swim competitions and that Quincy's program has a superb safety record which he credits to his staff.

"They're a great staff. We're so fortunate," Welch said.

Over the course of a year, Quincy residents, young and old, use Lincoln Hancock pool for a total of 23,000 to 27,000 swim visits.

This year, nearly 500 youngsters from 6 years to 17 years old are learning to swim, perfecting their strokes, or earning certification, thanks to the summer instruction program at Lincoln Hancock.

As a result, every inch of the Lincoln Hancock pool is used for five hours straight every day. There are lines sectioning off four classes an hour and some 40 youngsters can learn at the same time.

Equally impressive is the number of instructors and

Would Replace Four Officials With Private Citizens

Koch Calls For Revamping Of License Board

Mayoral candidate Tom Koch proposes a major revamping of the City License Board which would replace the police chief, fire chief, health commissioner and building inspector with private citizens.

Koch, noting that the lineup of the board has had no major change in nearly 60 years, said

"Instead of reacting to concerns of residents by tinkering with the time of board meetings by a few hours, we need bold, substantial changes that will actually lead to more citizen involvement on this important commission. So many areas of our government need a fresh look to find ways to make city hall more open, responsive and respectful. This is a good start."

Four citizens would replace the Chief Building Inspector, the Health Commissioner, the Fire Chief and Police Chief on the board under Koch's plan. The City Clerk will remain as the board's chairman ex-officio to continue that office's traditional role of official record-keeping, history of institutional knowledge, and management of the board, Koch said.

One of the citizen appointments would be reserved for a resident with a business background, and meetings would be changed from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. according to Koch's proposal.

"Our departments will lose no oversight role with this change, as every office will offer opinions on every issue just like they do today for matters before every other regulatory board in the city," Koch said. "In many cases, the role of department heads on the license board is redundant, as they must also sign off on various other permits. The difference with this plan is we will not be tying up some of our most important managers in lengthy meetings. The current structure

Siciliano Pension Issue Not A Speedy Process

Mayor William Phelan's call to revoke the $37,860 city pension of Anthony Siciliano, who was convicted of child rape, isn't going to be achieved in the blink of an eye.

"We don't take orders from the mayor," said George McCray, chairman of the Retirement Board. "And we don't go by what we read in the newspapers."

"We've already begun our investigation. We've put in a request to the district attorney's office for the court records. It's not a decision to be taken lightly."

The 65-year-old Siciliano, the volunteer deputy emergency management director who retired from his paid job in the traffic department, was sentenced to four to five years in prison for rape of a teen-

ANTHONY SICILIANO aged boy.

In order to revoke a pension, the crime must have been committed in connection with the criminal's work with the city.

"If it (Siciliano's crime) rises to

'Neat Neighbors' Nominations Open

Nominations are open for the annual "Neat Neighbors" contest that recognizes those who take exceptional care of their property.

Twenty-five Quincy residents who keep their property exceptionally beautiful will be acknowledged through this program, according to Mayor William Phelan.

"As mayor and a resident, I feel so fortunate and proud to be surrounded by individuals who take such great pride in the care of their property and the overall impact it makes on the appearance of their neighborhood," said Phelan.

Nominations will be open through Labor Day and residents can nominate a friend, relative or neighbor who they feel should be acknowledged for their contribution to the beautification effort. Park department personnel will check all nominated properties to ensure that they meet minimum contest requirements.

The 25 "Neat Neighbors" will be chosen at random from all the nominees who meet the contest requirements. There will be no judging of properties associated with this contest.

Nominations may be made by contacting the Quincy Park Department at 617-376-1251 and including the name and address of the nominee.

"Residents who are willing to dedicate their time and effort to make our city a more beautiful place deserve this recognition and should know their efforts are appreciated and enjoyed by all of us," Phelan said.

For more information or to nominate a "Neat Neighbor," contact the Park Department at 617-376-1251.

At Presidents City Inn

'Mrs. Fitz' Bids Farewell After 50 Years At Front Desk

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Eisenhower was president in 1957 when the Presidents City Inn opened at 845 Hancock Street and Mary Ann Fitzpatrick took the job as first clerk on the front desk.

Nine presidents and half a century later, "Mrs. Fitz" as she is called, was still at the desk. She retired last week on the same day she'd been hired 50 years earlier.

The job never got old and it seems that neither did "Mrs. Fitz."

"I'm here at 6:30," Mrs. Fitz, now 84, said, adding that she and the night clerk shared notes and reviewed the guest list every morning by 7 a.m.

"Five days a week. No matter what Mother Nature sent, that woman made it to work," said her daughter, Donna Tripp of Duxbury. On those days when her mother couldn't drive, Tripp said that she walked four miles to work.

Even when Mrs. Fitz was injured falling down the brick stairs of a church in 2006, she came to work, recalled Ashish Sangani, manager now of Presidents' City Inn.

During that half century, there were times when the Red Cross sent fire victims or disaster victims to the motel on Route 3A. Mrs. Fitz was there.

Tripp described her mother as a "proper" lady who doesn't even own a pair of shorts or slacks. She only wears dresses or skirts, even when gardening.

Even so, said Tripp, she never hesitates to pitch in and work with her hands helping people in need, whether those stranded in blizzards or evacuees from fires.

Nothing changed on her last day of work either.

Before the farewell cake was cut and a small gathering said their good-byes, the five foot one inch Mrs. Fitz was at her post at President's Inn, still enthusiastic about the Inn and still one of Quincy's biggest boosters.

"I love Quincy. It's a marvelous city," she said on her last morning, noting that it's halfway between Cape Cod and Boston, that it has the Red Line, and has such special history.

"This is tourist time; it's the best time," she said, then outlined the marvels of Quincy. "Year in and year out, she sent tourists to the

Quincy, Boston Seek No Dump Waste Rule For Boats In Harbor

In 1982, Quincy was the leader in filing suit to clean up Boston Harbor that led to the creation of the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority (MWRA).

Now, 25 years later, Quincy is joined by Boston in an effort to pressure Coastal Zone Management and the EPA into banning waste dumping from boats in the harbor.

"Quincy began the effort to clean up Boston Harbor and now this is a natural step toward ensuring a cleaner harbor," said Mayor William Phelan.

"We have made great progress in 25 years, but there is more to be done.

"We cannot ask our rate payers to pay higher bills to clean up the harbor while boat owners are still permitted to dump untreated waste from their boats into the harbor which we are paying to clean.

"I am confident that most boat owners already embrace this concept and are doing the right thing already."

Phelan joined Boston Mayor Tom Menino, EPA Regional Director Robert Varney and State Environmental Secretary Ian Bowles Monday in announcing their plan for a "no discharge zone" for boats in the harbor.

The Quincy mayor cited the city's efforts to provide a pump-out boat and private pump-out facilities at marinas and yacht clubs.

The new cleanup effort comes on the 25th anniversary of the day Assistant City Solicitor William Golden was out jogging and stepped in untreated waste washed up on Wollaston Beach.

The result was a suit by the administration of Mayor

Frank McCauley to clean up Boston Harbor and the creation of the MWRA to do the job.

Phelan cited the work done by City Councillor Doug Gutro and Harbormaster Patrick Morrissey in preparing the zoning application and City Councillor Leo Kelly and his Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission in bringing people back to the beaches.

"It's through organizations like the Beach Commission and the Friends of Wollaston Beach that people are realizing that they can help make a difference in getting people to enjoy this incredible resource," said Phelan.

"It is encouraging that it is once again difficult to get a parking spot along Wollaston Beach."

Traffic Signal Upgrade At N. Quincy Intersection

The traffic signal controller at Hancock and East Squantum Streets are being upgraded this week.

Mayor William Phelan and DPW Commissioner Steve O'Donnell said the system will be improved by adding a left turning arrow from east Squantum and West Squantum Streets.

"We recognize that this intersection is in need of upgrade and we have worked to improve pedestrian safety and the traffic flow all around the high school area," said Phelan. "I believe that better traffic coordination is good for both pedestrians and motorists alike."

O'Donnell cited dedicated drop-off lanes and coordination with the police department as improvements made last year to improve pedestrian safety.

"Another school year will soon be upon us and we will continue to look for ways to make things safer for children, parents, and other pedestrians that cross this intersection," said O'Donnell. "The school committee and the school community have been very helpful in offering ideas and suggestions and we will continue to work with the community to make things better."

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Aug. 11, 1856, a hurricane hits the Louisiana coast, killing more than 400 people when Isle Derniere is totally submerged by storm surges. A tidal wave carried off upward of 150 people, with some bodies ending up 6 miles away. The only survivors were those who were able to make it to a steamship moored at the island.

• On Aug. 8, 1907, the Rolls-Royce Silver Ghost passes its 15,000-mile official trial with flying colors, showing off its seven-liter engine and four-speed over-drive gearbox. A total of 6,173 Silver Ghosts were produced.

• On Aug. 6, 1932, Richard Hollingshead Jr. first registers his patent for the drive-in movie theater. Hollingshead was awarded the patent in May 1933, though it was declared invalid in 1950. After the patent was revoked, thousands of drive-ins appeared on the American landscape, reaching a peak of 4,063 in 1958.

• On Aug. 9, 1949, author Jonathan Kellerman is born in New York City. His first novel, "When the Bough Breaks," was published in 1985. Kellerman currently has more than 20 million books in print.

• On Aug. 7, 1971, the Bee Gees top the charts for the first time with "How Can You Mend a Broken Heart." The Brothers Gibb went on to score more No. 1 hits than any group in history except the Beatles and the Supremes.

• On Aug. 12, 1985, a Japan Air Lines Boeing 747SR crashes into Mount Otsuka, 70 miles northwest of Tokyo. Twelve minutes into the flight, as the jumbo jet was approaching its cruising altitude, an explosion shook the aircraft and blew off part of the tail section. There were 524 people aboard, and all but four were dead by the time rescuers reached the remote crash site 12 hours later.

• On Aug. 10, 1993, a rare collision of three ships (two fuel barges and one phosphate freighter) in Tampa Bay, Florida, results in a spill of 336,000 gallons of fuel oil. Three thousand volunteers saved almost all of the native wildlife that was affected by the disaster.

On Being Grandma Or Grandpa

You know, you really haven't lived until you've become a grandmother or grandfather.

Doesn't matter whether they call you Grandma or Nana, Grandpa or Papa or some other special name, it's one of the greatest milestones to reach in life.

The Senior Center at Beechwood on the Bay recently held a "Grandparents Are Grand Day" as a sort of tribute.

Sharron Beals, executive director and proud grandmother herself, of eight, invited seniors to discuss their favorite grandparent sayings, some of them from grandchildren:

A few examples:

• "A Nana is old on the outside but young on the inside."

• "Grandmas and Nanas are moms with lots of frosting."

• "What a bargain grandchildren are! I give them my loose change, and they give me a million dollars worth of pleasure."

• "Grandmothers are just 'antique little girls.'"

• "A grandparent is a babysitter who watches the kids instead of television."

• "My grandkids believe I'm the oldest thing in the world. And after two or three hours with them, I believe it, too."

• "Grandpas never run out of hugs or cookies."

• "Nanas and Grammas hold our tiny hands for just a little while, but our hearts forever."

• "An hour with your grandchildren can make you feel young again. Anything longer than that, and you start to age quickly."

• "Perfect love sometimes does not come until the first grandchild."

• "Becoming a grandparent is wonderful. One moment you're just a parent. The next you are all wise and prehistoric."

• "Grandkids don't stay young forever, which is good because Granddaddies have only so many horsey rides in them."

• "Grandmas and Nanas always made you feel she had been waiting all day just to see you and now the day was complete."

• "It's such a grand thing to be a mother of a mother. That's why the world calls her grandmother."

• "Grandchildren are God's way of compensating us for getting old."

• "I wish I had the energy that my grandchildren have-if only for self-defense."

• "Grandmother-wonderful mother with lots of practice."

• "You do not really understand something unless you can explain it to you grandmother."

• "Grandmother-grandchild relationships are simple. Grandmas are short on criticism and long on love."

• "Nobody can do for little children what grandparents do. Grandparents sort of sprinkle stardust over the lives of little children."

• "If becoming a grandmother was only a matter of choice I should advise every one of you straight away to become one. There is no fun like it for old people."

• "It's amazing how grandparents seem so young once they become one."

• "Grandparents are similar to a piece of string-handy to have around."

SHARRON

• "One of the most powerful handclasps is that of a new grandchild around the finger of a grandpa."

Take a bow, all you Nanas and Grampas.

BILL MURPHY has a top-notch security-protection firm, Executive Protection International, based in North Weymouth.

And offers a free service he hopes won't grow:

Guarding the homes of servicemen and women killed in Iraq or Afghanistan during their funerals.

"It's the least we can do for those who are doing so much for us over there," Murphy said.

He has provided that service twice so far.

"I hope we don't have to do it again," he says. "We want to see them come home alive. But if we are needed we will be honored to be there to do our little part."

Murphy was former Mayor Jim Sheets' security driver on various occasions such as going to Logan Airport or to state-mayor meetings.

Murphy was also deputy chief of the Quincy Auxiliary Police during Sheets' administration.

His firm recently was called on to guard $3 million in watches at a watch manufacturers convention at the Boston Harbor Hotel.

MILESTONE: George Burke, who has put on a few political miles, was honored by friends and family on his 75th birthday Saturday at a party at Clark Hall on Sagamore Beach.

George, of course, has been city councillor, state representative and district attorney and is still practicing law.

He has also generously supported his alma mater, U-Mass Amherst where he was a basketball star, and has awarded thousands of dollars in scholarships to Quincy and North Quincy graduates going there. Not to mention the many other causes he has backed.

Although the big party was in Sagamore there was a little surprise one at his North Quincy law office two days before.

That's when Ginny Holdstock, a long-time friend and her dog, Dharma, dropped by with a birthday cake. Congratulations, kid.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1911 real photo postcard showing the beginning of a new quarrying operation somewhere in West Quincy. The person who took this picture and mailed the postcard noted the scene had changed substantially as progress on the quarry was moving quickly. Shown here are two of the Holmes derricks first used for quarrying by Solomon Willard in 1826 at the Bunker Hill Quarry here in Quincy. For well over 100 years these derricks were ubiquitous in Quincy. They were used in every quarry and stone shed throughout West and South

Quincy. By the time the last quarry ceased operation here in 1963 there had been 55 quarry holes opened, and at the industry's peak in 1900 there were over 140 companies engaged in the granite industry. They all had one or more of these derricks. The derricks and their guy wires dominated the skyline. The last standing Holmes derrick in Quincy was dismantled in 2000 at the former Settimelli stone yard on Totman Street. They are, however, still in use elsewhere. Circulating Petition Opposes Track At Pageant Field

As this "done deal" (according to the mayor's office) of a track at Pageant Field comes ever closer I am stepping up my efforts to stop this ill-conceived project.

I have recently begun approaching fellow Quincy citizens with a petition opposing the track. Interest in this petition has been great with many concerned citizens stepping forward to sign it. I have also engaged in some enlightening discussions. Here are a few of the opinions expressed to me by fellow citizens.

Quincy residents ex-

Suggests Alternating Time

It seems an issue as simple as moving License Board meetings from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. should not generate so much debate.

Just because the License Board has been meeting in the morning for 65 years doesn't make it the best time. As far as the business community's opposition to pressed five great reasons for keeping Pageant Field as is:

It's a beautiful green space with a unique and varied landscape.

Its layout of parkland combining trails, ball fields and picnic areas create and ideal multi-use facility, accessible for ALL Quincy residents to enjoy year-round.

Its central location is within walking distance or a short drive from most neighborhoods.

There are already four special use fields in the Merrymount Park area which are fenced in.

The continued trends towards closing off more and more open space for sports teams and that ilk disenfranchises the average citizen.

By-and-large citizens who oppose the track project at Pageant Field (not a track per se) feel that they are not only being shut-out of the city's park system in favor of organized sports but also that the city has left many projects unfinished.

For example: The "Formal Gardens" and adjacent WWII Memorial on Hancock Street in Wollaston continue to be an unsightly mess. My last letter (July 11) addressed the sorry state of this area. I am sad to say that in the proceeding weeks the dirt piles have only grown bigger.

Since I can't reach every citizen who opposes this project, I respectfully request that you print my letter and also the URL so these citizens can e-sign the petition, www.petitiononline.com/QMAIPFMO/petition.html.

Thank you for your consideration.

Commends After School Child Care Program

My appreciation and gratitude goes to the Quincy After School Child Care (QASCC) program.

For the past two school years my daughter has been enrolled in this program, and it gave me enormous peace of mind to know that she was being cared for in a safe, stimulating environment. The staff at the Bernazzani site always offered a choice of fun activities (after homework was completed), which were supervised in a clam, competent manner. Because the program is offered at most elementary schools, there are no transportation issues. In addition to the convenience and wonderful care, the cost of the program is reasonable.

A huge thank you to the fantastic QASCC staff at the Bernazzani School. Thanks also to all who have made this program possible, including Jo-Ann Bragg and Doug Veeder, who were instrumental in initiating After School Child Care in Quincy. The parents in this city are very fortunate to have this program available.

City, Tax Association Differ On Disabled Men's Work

By FRANK McCAULEY

"There are 55 men, now employed by the highway and sanitation divisions, who do not do a full day's work for a full day's pay," George Yarrington, executive director of the Quincy Taxpayer's Association, charged.

Charles R. Herbert, commissioner of public works, denied the charge. He pointed out, however, that it is true occasionally that men decline to go out on rubbish and garbage trucks on the grounds that physical infirmities make it impossible for them to do the work. In some cases, the men have been sent home without pay.

A HELIPORT FOR QUINCY?

The Patriot Ledger editorialized on a possible future heliport for the city of Quincy. The paper noted that within three years helicopter service should be common in most large cities in the United States.

"The helicopter will eventually be used as we use buses today. There will probably be helicopter service from Quincy direct to Logan Airport, to Plymouth, to the Cape, to the North Shore. Seems to us that it's time Quincy started thinking about its air transportation future."

KEEPING UP WITH THE RED SOX

The Boston Red Sox were in sixth place in the eight-team American League, with a record of 44 and 62. They were 31 games behind the league leading Cleveland Indians.

Tom Brewer (7-6) and Mel Parnell (0-3) were scheduled to pitch in a day-night double-header against the fifth place Washington Senators.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

After 10 Years

Janice Magee Christmas Parade Theme Winner

After 10 years of trying, Janice Magee of Quincy is this year's Christmas Parade theme winner.

George White, chairman of the Christmas Festival Committee, said her entry in the contest "Christmas Celebrations" was selected from a large number of entries from Quincy and the area.

The theme, he noted, presents float builders with a wide scope of imagination in designing their floats.

Magee will ride in an open convertible in the annual parade scheduled for

JANICE MAGEE

Sunday, Nov. 25. Ram date is Sunday, Dec. 2.

She had submitted entries for the past 10 years to no avail, but was not discouraged. One year she forgot to mail her entry and would have been a co-winner if she had. She and the winner had the same theme.

She was a drum majorette with the Quincy High School band in the 1950s. And has been a spectator at the parade the past 40 years with her five grandchildren.

She will be recognized at the parade Awards Event at the North Quincy High School auditorium and presented a gift from the committee following the parade.

Frisbee Tricks At Library Saturday

Frisbee Champion Todd Brodeur will perform Frisbee tricks and discuss the science and history of the Frisbee during a special presentation of the library's Art-To-Go weekly series entitled "Catch the Beat." The show will be held rain or shine.

The presentation is scheduled Saturday, Aug. 11 at 10 a.m. on the front lawn of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Square.

In case of inclement weather, the program will be moved inside the Main Library which may limit the type of tricks that can be shown.

Brodeur who is a two-time

Frisbee Freestyle World Champion said teenagers and older children are especially interested in the Frisbee shows, but he welcomes all ages to the event. Participants will be invited to demonstrate their own Frisbee tricks.

The Friends of the Thomas Crane Library sponsor the program.

Making Movie Star Sunglasses Project At Crane Library

Making movie star sunglasses is the "Catch the Beat" arts project for the week of Aug. 13.

In the following week of Aug. 20, the theme will be musical mobiles.

The Art-To-Go project is a weekly art activity available for children throughout the city this summer.

The projects are planned and easy enough for toddlers and pre-schoolers to do with an adult's help and are free form enough for school-age children.

The Art-To-Go travels citywide throughout each week. Participants can drop in anytime on specific days from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the libraries to create their project.

On Mondays, supplies for the projects are available at the Thomas Crane Main Library Children's Room, 40 Washington St., Quincy Square. On Tuesday, supplies can be picked up at the Adam Shore Library Branch, 519 Sea Street; on Wednesdays at the Wollaston Library Branch, 41 Beale Street, Wollaston; and on Thursdays, at the North Quincy Library Branch, 391 Hancock St., North Quincy.

Kilroy's Miniature Golf Course Open For Second Season

Kilroy's Miniature Golf Course opened its second season recently at the former Fore River Shipyard, located off Route 3A at the rotary just before the Fore River Bridge.

Both the USS Salem and the U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum are at the same location, which offers families a day of fun and history at a small price. Visitors can enjoy both the museum and a round of mini-golf for just $8 a person.

Each of the 18 holes on the course features a replica of one of Quincy's historic site, such as the two Adams' birthplaces, the Granite Rail and the Hancock Cemetery. The miniature golf course is open seven days a week from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Also open seven days a week is the USS SALEM where the hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"Kilroy's Mini golf and the USS SALEM are a terrific day trip for all ages," said Michael Condon, Executive Director of the museum. "What makes this a nice trip is the hands-on nature of the museum and the sheer scale of the ship."

"This ship is enormous and you touch all the displays; kids love it," notes Frank Campbell, the ship's Volunteer Coordinator.

In fact, the USS Salem is a 716 foot-long United States Navy heavy cruiser gunship and is the only remaining ship of this type in the world. It was built in the former Fore River Shipyard where it is permanently moored and on display.

Last summer was the first for Kilroy's Mini Golf and it was an instant success, according to Condon and Campbell.

Visitors may enjoy the golf-ship combination ticket for $8 or just tours of the ship and its museums for $5. The tours are both escorted and self-guided. Discount admission is available to groups of ten or more.

Kilroy's and the USS SALEM are located at 739 Washington St., Quincy, at the foot of the Fore River Bridge. For additional information, call 617-479-7900 or check the Web site at www.USS-Salem.org.

Free Tours Aug. 18 At Dorothy Quincy Homestead

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead will be open for free public tours and demonstrations of colonial era crafts Saturday, Aug. 18 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Visitors are invited to enjoy informal presentations on the processing of wool and on the uses of herbs at the time when the Edmund Quincy Family occupied the Homestead.

In addition, tours of the house and the gardens will be offered beginning at 1 p.m. and, then, every hour and a half. The last tour begins at 3:30 p.m.

Barbara Lak will show how wool is processed from a sheep's fleece to a knitted garment. Visitors will be encouraged to experiment in making yarn using a spinning wheel and a drop spindle.

Herbalist Lisa Tavakoli will discuss the many uses of herbs during Edmund Quincy's era. Voluntary contributions are welcome.

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, located at Hancock St. and Butler Rd., was recently designated a National Historic Landmark. Currently, an extensive renovation of the building is nearing completion.

For additional information, visit the Homestead's website at www.nscda.org/ma/quincy_homestead.htm.

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Lauren's Italian Chicken Salad

We were having our usual Sunday get-togethers recently and our lovely granddaughter Lauren brought the most delicious Italian chicken salad.

And since Lauren does not like mayonnaise, this one is so delicious you will never miss it. The recipe lends quite a large crowd, but it can certainly be shortened if needed.

Italian Chicken Salad in Lettuce Cups
 10 cups shredded cooked chicken
 2 cups roasted red and yellow bell peppers (coarsely chopped)
 1 large red onion thinly sliced
 3/4 cup fresh parsley

3/4 cup slivered almonds (toasted)
 1/2 cup drained capers
 1 1/2 cups red wine vinaigrette
 salt and pepper to taste
 4 ounces parmesan cheese (shredded)

In a large bowl, mix the chicken, bell peppers, onion, parsley, almonds and capers in a large bowl and enough vinaigrette to moisten. Season with salt and pepper.

If you use the lettuce cups, arrange a leaf on each plate. Spoon the chicken salad onto the lettuce cups and drizzle a little more vinaigrette over the salad and then sprinkle with the parmesan cheese. The salad got raves!

Young Professionals Sought By Rotary For Visit To India

Rotary Clubs from Quincy to Cape Cod are seeking four outstanding professionals to visit India in January as part of a Group Study Exchange Program of Rotary International.

Under the program, teams of young professionals from the two countries trade visits of four to six weeks to experience the way of life, customs and vocational practices of another country.

The Rotary Foundation pays for the round-trip airfare and Rotarians in the host country provide the meals, lodging and group travel. Team members pay their personal expenses.

While abroad, team members stay in Rotarians' homes and have an opportunity to meet their professional counterparts. They make presentations to Rotary Clubs and other groups.

Young adults between the ages of 25 and 40 who are interested in applying should be employed full-time in a business or profession. Applicants must live or be employed on the South Shore or the Cape.

For an application or more information, contact Caryn Smith at Caryn's Corner at 617-770-0536.

Adams Mansion, told them to sit on the front porch and be transported back in time. Then, she'd map out Quincy Center and United First Parish Church and Old City Hall.

When Presidents' City Inn first opened, there were 16 units, recalled Mrs. Fitz who worked first for the Strout family, then for Eastern Nazarene College which bought the inn and, five years ago, sold it to Rina Inc.

In the beginning, there was a switchboard, "a monster up on that wall," she explained, adding she was delighted years later when the telephone equipment was downsized to desk-size. "I was so glad."

Now there is the Internet and business is booming, according to Sangani who said clients come first for the lower rates near Boston, but they stay to enjoy Quincy. Mrs. Fitz adjusted to the changing times.

"There were three owners," Mrs. Fitz said, adding

"They each kept me. I started 50 years ago today. That's why I stayed til today."

When Mrs. Fitz told Sangani she was leaving, he wanted to have a party to honor her.

"I was going to put up a tent. Everybody loves her, our contractors, our workers, our guests, everybody. She has been like our grandmother," said Sangani.

Sangani said that Mrs. Fitz said no way, no party, and told him, "This is a very sad moment. I don't want to celebrate."

Both Mayor William Phelan and the Quincy City Council issued proclamations honoring Mary Ann Elizabeth Fitzpatrick for her work, example and her dedication to Quincy.

Mrs. Fitz may be retired from one job now, but she's not done working. According to her daughter, she has contacted a local church and has volunteered at a nearby rectory on Saturdays.

Sangani, also, described how important Mrs. Fitz' family was to her. Mrs. Fitz and the late Joseph Fitzpatrick, a soldier in World War II, were married in St. Ann's Church on Hancock Street. Fitzpatrick served in Japan and was present at the surrender of the Japanese.

Mrs. Fitz' son, the late Paul Fitzpatrick, was a Hall of Fame basketball player and a physical education teacher in the Quincy schools. Her grandson Robert is a firefighter with the Duxbury Fire Department and heads the Diving and Recovery team.

Jennifer G. Symonds earned her Bachelor of Arts degree in history; Nancy M. Yankum in modern languages and Pierre Jean-Michel was awarded a bachelor of science in business administration.

Neighborhoods First! Program Starts Anew

City Hall is going on the road again.

"Neighborhood First!" community meetings were held in Beechwood Knoll and Montclair last week and next week they'll be at the Snug Harbor School in Germantown Tuesday and the Wollaston School Thursday.

Both meetings will feature a free community barbecue and will begin at 5 p.m.

"Neighborhood First!" has elicited the strongest community response of any program that I have seen," said Mayor William Phelan.

"We have empowered our residents to help determine where best to focus our resources.

"As a result, we have tapped into a great resource of energy, enthusiasm and advocacy for our city's great neighborhoods.

"Quincy residents have direct access to their mayor, their department heads and the resources used to improve their city."

The aim of the meetings are to update the neighborhoods on the progress made on the priorities established by neighborhood committees last year and chart the course for the future.

Phelan cited a $2.2 million investment in sidewalk repairs, improvements to Sailors' Pond, creation of a code enforcement officer, and the success of the Illegal Rooming House Task Force as examples of progress.

He highlighted plans to repair the public landing at Houghs Neck, create a new passive park in Squantum, improve the Dickinson property in Marina Bay and open new neighborhood centers in Germantown and North Quincy.

"The strength of Quincy is its neighborhoods," said Phelan. "We have great tight-knit neighborhoods full of people that want to maintain and improve their community."

"The interest in this program has exceeded our highest goals and I want to thank all of those concerned citizens that helped us improve their neighborhoods in the past year."

Lamotte Returns As Traffic Engineer

Roy Lamotte has returned to his former post as the city's Traffic Engineer.

Lamotte, who served as traffic engineer in 2003 and 2004, comes back to Quincy from a similar position in Tampa, FL.

Mayor Phelan who rehired Lamotte said:

"It's great to have Roy back in the city. Not only is Roy a consummate professional, but his existing knowledge of Quincy and the traffic issues will be invaluable. We have a number of important projects that Roy will be instrumental in helping."

Quincy joins a handful of other communities in Massachusetts that have full-time traffic engineers on staff. Boston, Brookline, and Newton were the only cities identified in a recent survey that have full-time Traffic Engineers.

"I look forward to the challenge that his job presents and I thank Mayor Phelan for having the continued confidence in me," said Lamotte. "There are a number of major projects that have been ongoing in my absence that I need to come up to speed on and plan on spearheading from a traffic perspective."

Lamotte cited the work being done on the Quincy Center Concourse, the closing of Woodward Avenue for construction of a new high school, and the traffic safety plan being designed for Sea Street as existing projects that he looked forward to working on.

DPW Commissioner Steve O'Donnell also cited the city's ongoing efforts to improve synchronization between traffic lights, improvements at the intersection of Hancock Street and East Squantum Street, and pedestrian improvements at Southern Artery and Quincy Avenue as projects that will be presented to Lamotte.

Six Residents Receive Emmanuel College Degrees

Six Quincy residents were awarded degrees at the 2007 Emmanuel College commencement.

Two residents, Boris Lazic and Maureen Broms, earned Master's Degrees.

Four residents earned bachelor's degrees.

They are: Colleen Haley, Lejda Hodaj, Caitlin Doherty and Kendra Hackett. Hackett graduated magna cum laude.

Ann Yeomans Elected Human Rights Chair

Ann Yeomans, the past treasurer, has been elected chair of the Quincy Human Rights Commission, succeeding Ed Grogan, who stepped down after three terms.

Nancy McDonald was named to another term as secretary and Kumu Gupta was elected vice chair and Harvey Solomon treasurer.

The Human Rights Commission, which organizes the annual Martin Luther King breakfast, meets the second Tuesday of every month and is open to the public.

It is also involved in the August Moon Festival of Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI), and recently organized the Quincy Career Fair.

Its members are appointed by Mayor William Phelan and housed under the city's Office of Constituent Services.

The commission was recently recertified as a No Place To Hate community by the Anti-Defamation League of New England. The city has been one since 2001.

Commissioners were scheduled to participate in a Brockton Rox baseball game last night (Wednesday), sponsored by the Verizon Wireless HopeLine Program.

tive for the Norfolk County District Attorney; Ed Grogan, the past chair of the Commission; Ann Yeomans, the new chair; Gene Ward, commissioner; Kumu Gupta, the new vice chair; and Harvey Solomon, the new treasurer. Missing from the photo is Nancy McDonald, who was reappointed secretary.

15 Residents Receive Honors At Curry College

Fifteen residents earned Dean's List honors at Curry College for the spring term.

They are Lisa Barrett, Helen Devlin, Alysia

Quincy Credit Union In School Backpack Drive For Needy Children

Quincy Credit Union (QCU) will participate in a school supply backpack drive to help underprivileged and homeless children in Quincy as they head back to school in September.

Now through Aug. 31, backpacks filled with new school supplies, such as notebooks, scissors, dictionaries, crayons, rulers, pens, pencils, erasers and highlighters, may be dropped off at QCU, 100 Quincy Ave., Quincy, during business hours. Individual supplies are also accepted.

All items will be donated to the Cradles to Crayons "Ready for School" program which will enable children to start a new school year with basic supplies and the everyday essentials they need.

Founded in 2002, Cradles to Crayons provides year-round support to children in need.

Quincy Credit Union, which serves over 22,000 members, is celebrating its 70th anniversary this year. The credit union membership is open to all who live or work in Norfolk and Plymouth counties, Dorchester, and to any family member.

Senior Bridge Club To Meet

The Council on Aging's bridge club for seniors will meet every Friday from 12:30 to 3:30 p.m. at the Dawes House on Quincy Shore Drive, corner of Channing Street.

All level players are welcome.

Puleo Calls For $1M Quality Fund At No Cost To Taxpayers

School Committee candidate Nick Puleo has called for the creation of a $1 million quality fund to provide Quincy's schools with additional resources for classrooms and extra-curricular activities.

Puleo says he has developed a plan to implement the program at no cost to taxpayers.

"An extra $1 million for our schools would make an incredible difference in terms of funding for computers, curriculum improvements, arts programs, and athletics," said Puleo. "The most remarkable part is that, under the current funding structure, we can accomplish this at no cost to the taxpayer, and without detriment to any other city services."

Under his proposal, Puleo would allow the school district to create the fund using revenue generated from federal reimbursements. Quincy's schools already earn well over $1 million a year in federal Medicaid reimbursements for services provided to eligible students, he said. Currently, the reimbursements are deposited in the City's general fund, and the schools do not have access to it.

Puleo noted that the city posted substantial surpluses in recent years, and that the creation of this fund would not harm the city's financial well being. He added that since the funding was already included in the overall financial picture, there would be no additional cost to the taxpayers.

Vision Deprived Meet To Learn New Skills

Seniors and others with limited vision meet twice a week Tuesdays and Fridays at 10 a.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada Rd., to learn new skills from each other.

For more information, call the Council on Aging at 617-376-1506.

NICK PULEO

"It's a win-win situation for everyone," said Puleo. "With the right financial expertise and the political will to improve quality in our schools, we can easily make this reality."

Puleo pointed to a number of programs within the school system that have proven very successful, but have often struggled to raise the funds needed to operate.

In addition, he stated that computers and Internet access within the schools are substantially lacking in quality and reliability. The creation of a quality fund would allow schools to address these problems outside of usual budget constraints, he said.

"It's time to broaden the dialogue, and start thinking about how we can improve quality in every classroom across the city," said Puleo. "In the world today, children need 21st century skills. We need to take innovative steps to help ensure their success."

Those with questions about Puleo's plan may email him at puleo2007@gmail.com, or write to him at: 31 Acton St., Quincy, MA 02170.

City Workers, State Funding Make For Safe Teen Summer

Strategic placement of city personnel and a state grant program are credited with keeping the peace this summer at two popular teenage gathering places.

The Charles Shannon Grant allowed the city to place a police officer and recreation leaders at the Sterling Middle School playground and the Fenno Street Courts.

The city personnel interacted with the teens, organized games and kept an eye on both popular teen hangouts.

"This program was an outstanding success this year," said Mayor William Phelan. "Too often we tell teens what not to do; this year we told them what they could do.

"Our police department and recreation employees built valuable relationships with area teens and provided them with opportunities to have fun on summer evenings without getting into any trouble.

"I hope to continue to expand this program in the coming months and years."

The program at Sterling was a continuation of last year's pilot program to give teens positive options for the summer months, allowing them to play basketball, do community service and learn job skills.

Phelan cited City Councillor Jay Davis and former Sterling Middle School Principal Earl Metzler for their work on the program.

At the Fenno Street Courts, the program targeted a location that often had 100 or more teens hanging out last summer by placing a police officer at the site and organizing a new basketball league.

"I believe the positive activity chases away the lure of trouble for young people," said Phelan. "This program provided our teens a chance to make positive decisions and avoid trouble.

"I want to thank Governor Patrick and our elected state delegation for their support of this important grant program."

Merrymount Fifth Graders Trace Their Family Roots

For the past 15 years, all of Merrymount School's fifth graders have studied and reported on their roots, their heritage and their culture through teacher Elaine Gibbons' Heritage Project.

For the fifth graders, the Heritage Project is almost a rite of passage as each student completes a fully researched study on another country before they leave Agawam Road and the Merrymount School and move from elementary school to middle school.

As Social Studies and Writing teacher, Gibbons developed the annual project as a means of teaching writing, research and social studies to the students.

"Each child had to research their family trees," Gibbons said recently, describing her first assignment to her new classes each fall. They then begin studying different cultures.

"Every night they had homework (on the project)," Gibbons said, adding that they must compile cards on such areas as culture, economy, history and business, and, even "why they eat the meals they do."

Gibbons said that Libby Payne, historian, Quincy Historical Society, visits the classes to outline the process and tools needed for research.

They must prepare a bibliography on their research, submit a "hand-drawn map of their country" and are expected to type at least half of the required 22 paragraph final report.

"They have a keyboarding class," Gibbons said, referring to instruction at the school's mini-computer lab.

According to Gibbons, the students must use three resources to study their particular country. They, then, develop their notes on color-coded, numbered cards with a timeline for each study area.

In addition, they write two to three letters to embassies, consulates or officials of their country of choice.

"They're so excited when they get answers," Gibbons said, describing the brochures, pamphlets and maps addressed to the fifth graders.

In addition, the students share information with each other about the culture, the dress, the food, music, history, population, and geography of their parents' or ancestors' homeland.

The youngsters bring in foods, coins, dolls, books and recipes from their grandparents' or parents' native lands.

As the school year winds down, the students prepare for the annual Heritage Fair and invite their parents and the rest of the 310 students at Merrymount School.

This year, the 52 fifth graders represented 19-20 countries. In the past, Merrymount students always had a large representation from Ireland, according to Gibbons who said recent classes, also, included Cape Verde, Morocco, Malaysia, Cambodia, Haiti, Taiwan and Vietnam.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Decorations & Assembly Occupancies

The State Fire Marshal's Office is putting a big push on fire safety in social clubs. A recent fire in a Fall River religious club promoted this initiative.

Apparently the fire began with a candle igniting combustible decorations. Thus managers and members of these occupancies have to understand what is required of them in maintaining safe assembly occupancy and be vigilant in adhering to the code that exists to protect them.

In Quincy, we have emphasized for years now that any decoration within an assembly occupancy, such as a social club, bar or restaurant, must be non-flammable. In fact, during our yearly inspections, the owners or managers are required to sign an acknowledgement that they fully understand a list of code requirements, including an agreement not to use flammable decorations.

It's an important aspect of public safety and I frequently remind these locations of its importance. Especially during the holiday season, it's not unusual for me to mail a flyer as a reminder for that very purpose as well.

Simply put, the act of fire prevention has a great deal to do with isolating combustibles from potential ignition sources. In this instance the State Fire Marshal's Office has attempted to do that by emphasizing the importance of eliminating combustible decorations in these occupancies, while the elimination of smoking has eliminated a potential ignition source as well.

No code is effective, however, unless it is embraced and implemented on a daily basis by those managing and accepting responsibilities for these occupancies.

Consequently, much of our effort is naturally placed on educating citizens, business owners, and managers on the rules for maintaining safe occupancies. For instance, we can't emphasize enough, the need for unobstructed exit access and the importance of maintaining in-house public safety systems in assembly occupancy.

Through articles such as this, flyers and discussions during inspections, we take each opportunity to impress upon an owner or manager that it benefits all when public safety is at the forefront of their concerns and decision-making. Our education efforts continue here, while attempting to frequently emphasize the importance of public safety over and over again. The reminders continue with every opportunity as with this one. Get the point?

Everyone benefits in a well-maintained, safe environment; make it your priority as well. Thank you for it.

Meanwhile, keep in mind that we are always available to assist you with your efforts or remind you of their importance.

Melissa Falcone Receives Essay Award From Quincy Credit Union

Quincy school student Melissa Falcone recently received an award of recognition from the Quincy Credit Union for her participation in the eighth grade essay writing contest.

Judith Brazil, Quincy Credit Union's vice president of marketing, presented the award to Falcone at the Point Webster Middle School's eighth grade awards ceremony.

For the past three years, the Quincy Credit Union has partnered with the Point Webster Middle School.

The essay writing contest was co-sponsored by the Financial Literacy Committee of the Massachusetts Credit Union League, Inc. and the Massachusetts Credit Union Share Insurance Corporation.

Competing in this year's contest were approximately 1,500 participants from 20 different credit unions located throughout the state. Out of 1,500 entries, only one first-prize winner was chosen. In addition, there were nine finalists and 16 students who received honorable mention along with a $50 U.S. Savings Bond.

Essay writers were given a quote from President John F. Kennedy: "Ask not what your country can do for you; ask what you can do for your country." Participants were required to write a 250-word essay (no more, no less)

MELISSA FALCONE of Quincy (right) receives an award of Recognition from Judith Brazil, vice president of marketing at Quincy Credit Union, for her participation in an eighth grade essay writing contest.

"about something that they would like to do to help their community, how the community could benefit from their help and of what they hope to learn from these experiences."

Essays were judged on their originality, content, neatness, grammar and spelling.

"This year's seventh and eighth grade finalists made outstanding decisions in their choices of community involvement," said Jack Morrill, vice president of Educational Programming of Massachusetts Credit Union League.

"From serving the elderly, providing companionship for children hospitalized for extended periods, introducing music and the arts to underserved children or establishing environmental programs, these seventh and eighth grade students revealed their spirit and desire to make a difference," Morrill said, adding choosing a winner was not an easy task.

"However, from reading all the essays that were submitted, it is obvious that we have a wealth of talented young men and women in our middle schools today."

The Quincy Credit Union's Board of Directors is proud to offer congratulations to Melissa Falcone and wish her good luck in the future.

Quincy Credit Union is located at 100 Quincy Ave., Quincy, and serves more than 22,000 members. Credit Union membership is available to those who work or reside in Norfolk and Plymouth Counties, Dorchester, and any family member.

Quincy Credit Union celebrates its 70th anniversary in business this year.

Koch Calls For Revamping Of License Board

dates back to the 1940s, and it is clearly time for a change."

The License Board regulates business in the city, most importantly the distribution and oversight of liquor licenses for bars, restaurants and package stores.

Koch said his proposal is not a criticism of any decisions made by the current board, but is instead aimed at fostering more community involvement and improving efficiency for taxpayers.

From walking neighborhoods, attending coffee hours, and speaking to residents across the city, Koch said residents clearly believe annual property tax increases should at least lead to more efficient, effective, and responsive government.

Mayor William Phelan recently asked the License Board to change its meeting times from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. after complaints from some residents.

"If a resident, or business owner for that matter, can't make a meeting at 10 a.m., I don't see 4 p.m. as much easier for anybody," Koch said. "Instead of a half-hearted reactionary move, let's dig deeper and lead on this issue."

The proposal, Koch said, will also serve another purpose: Guarantee that a majority of board members are Quincy residents. Koch noted that just three years ago, a majority of the board members lived outside of Quincy.

Koch's plan will need to be filed in the form of a home-rule petition and approved by the City Council and the state legislature. Koch said he will file the legislation in January.

"Let's start having real discussions about this and so many other issues, not just one-sided directives," Koch said. "I'd say every idea is on the table. I'm sure city councillors have their own thoughts on this, so let's talk about it. That's good government, and that's leadership."

The License Board took the issue of 4 p.m. meetings under advisement July 24 and continued the meeting and discussion to Tuesday, Aug. 14.

Introduction To Knitting At Library Wollaston Branch

Youngsters 9 years and older are invited to join the Introduction to Knitting class scheduled for Wednesday, Aug. 15 from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the Wollaston Branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 41 Beale St., Wollaston.

Participants will be taught the three basic steps of knitting from the first cast on, to the basic knit stitch, to the cast off.

These three basic steps will open the door to a world of crafting possibilities, according to the program planners who said that each child will make his or her very own small item.

The participants will create either a simple stuffed animal to hang from their backpack or a small bag to hold change or a holder for a cell phone.

Space is limited so registration is required. Interested persons can call or visit the Wollaston Branch at 617-376-1330.

Alexander Miner Visits Chicago With B.C. High Classmates

Senior Alexander Miner of Quincy was one of the 15 Boston College High School students who recently spent a weekend at the University of Chicago Model UN Conference at the Palmer House Hilton.

The trip sponsored by the Model United Nations Club included a tour of the campus of the University of Chicago, Loyola University, Wrigley Field, and the Chicago Museum of Science and Technology where they viewed a captured WWII German submarine, U-505.

Representing Costa Rica, Miner and the other BC High students debated issues concerning Renewable Energy Sources, Bio-terrorism, Congenital Birth Defects, Repatriation of Historic Artifacts, Economic Dependence on Drug Trafficking, Child Labor in the Developing World, and Globalization in the Expanding World Economy.

Four club members received honorable mention for their work there: junior Dan Branagan and sophomore John Cuchural for their work in the UNESCO com-

Storytellers At Library Aug. 14

The last performance of the library's summer Storyteller Series will be held Tuesday, Aug. 14 at 7 p.m. and feature Davis Bates and Roger Tincknell presenting "Rhythms of the World." The Quincy Arts Council sponsors the program.

Bates and Roger will perform not only familiar favorites, such as "I've Been Working on the Railroad," but, also, stories and song from around the world.

The audience will hear such exotic instruments as the Aztec rain stick, the Inca flute, the Russian balalaika, the African drum, as well as banjos, guitars, the Irish bodhran, the cubesa, cowbells, the guiro, spoons and the mandolin.

The program, for children five and older, will be held in the large meeting room of the Thomas Crane Main Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Square.

A Homegrown Solution to Hard Water Spots

Q. What can I use to remove hard water spots from a double-pane window? The water spots came from the garden sprinkler. — Virginia B., via e-mail

A. "Hard" water is generally called such because of the amount of mineral deposits, especially calcium, it contains. It's common throughout the United States, as groundwater often runs through sections of the earth containing limestone, chalk or similar minerals. Magnesium, iron and other minerals are also typically present in hard water.

Well water — from which some sprinkler systems draw their water — can contain much higher levels of minerals than municipal water, which has reduced mineral content due to the treatment process. Because the most common issue with hard water is the buildup of mineral scale on surfaces over time, homeowners using well-water-fed sprinkler systems should check the sprinkler heads throughout the watering season to keep scale from clogging the nozzles.

Which leads us, sort of,

back to hard water spots on windows. These also can occur with nagging frequency and are difficult to clean off, mineral salts adhere to the glass quite easily. And depending on the mineral, store-bought window cleaners may not have any effect and can be counterproductive.

A homegrown solution that may work is to apply a thin coat of oil (lemon oil or even vegetable or olive oil) to the glass and let it sit for about an hour. The oil can soften the mineral scale and help lift it away from the glass. Then, make a thick paste of water and cornstarch (or baking soda) and dab on with a soft cloth or toothbrush, cleaning one section at a time in a circular motion.

Clean the entire window-pane with warm water and mild dish soap and check for remaining water spots; spot-clean with the paste and toothbrush and rinse. Once all the spots are gone, use an ammonia-based window cleaner to finish.

Energy Saving Ideas

Cool News For Homeowners

(NAPS) — The high cost of keeping your home comfortable doesn't have to get you hot under the collar if you heed a few hints:

- Determine how airtight and insulated your home is. Check ductwork for leaks, the "R" value of your home's insulation (living area, basement, crawlspace, attic), any leaky seals or gaps around doors and windows, double-glazed windows (is there moisture inside or are double-glazed windows "cloudy"?)

- Ask your air-conditioning contractor to give your home a checkup. If your home system is more than 10 years old, it may not be at the height of efficiency, so even if it is in good condition, changes in technology have probably created units that can offer more affordable comfort. With new 13-SEER (Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratio) high-efficiency units, homeowners should expect to see their air conditioners and heat pumps translate energy used into affordable comfort.

- Have a contractor check your system to determine how efficiently it cools. Is it properly sized (one sized too large will do the job, but at a price that is more expensive; and one that is too small will constantly cycle and run up bills while not delivering comfort)? Would a dehumidifier help (taking some moisture out of the air could make your home feel cooler without touching the thermostat)? Is the air filter working properly and are there other small problems that could escalate into larger ones and affect the entire system if left uncorrected?

- Changing the thermostat setting a degree or two can save you many dollars. A programmable thermostat remembers and adjusts heating and cooling times even when you forget.

- Pull the shades on the side of the house where the sun is in warm weather to ease the load on your air conditioner.

- Don't let children (or anyone else) stand in open doors minutes at a time.

- Get a service contract. When choosing an air-conditioner contractor, consider one with NATE certified air-conditioning or heat pump technicians. Certified professionals have passed a stringent test that is national in scope. You can find contractors employing NATE certified technicians at www.natex.com.

- Keep these tips in mind and you may find you can keep more money in your wallet and more comfort in your home.

The Great Outdoors

Transform Your Basement Into Extra Living Space

(NAPS) — Looking for extra space in your home? Head down to the basement.

Basements can provide added space for exercise rooms, media rooms, workshops—even extra bedrooms. So why are they not always used? Basements can be damp and leaky. These conditions can create the perfect conditions for the growth of mold and mildew, which can be musty, ugly and difficult to keep in check.

However, it's easy to reclaim your basement and transform it into a beautiful living space—with state-of-the-art products and a few tips from the experts at Zinsser.

Reclaim your leaky basement — Excessive moisture can make a basement unusable. Worse yet, it can cause structural rot and decay, which promotes the growth of mold and mildew and creates high humidity levels throughout your entire home. That's why water problems should be taken care of immediately.

Fortunately, it's easy to keep water out and keep mold and mildew away-by painting your concrete basement walls with two coats of waterproofer that contains mold and mildew protection, like Waterlite Mold & Mildew-Proof Waterproofing Paint. Available in either an oil-based or the new latex-based formula, these superior performance products are guaranteed to stop water and offer a five-year mold-and-mildew-proof paint guarantee. Both are low odor, easy to use, dry to a very smooth, bright white finish and can be tinted to pastel colors. Plus, the latex version cleans up easily with soap and water.

Tips from the pros: Waterlite can also be applied to concrete floors before installing carpeting, tile or linoleum to prevent groundwater from seeping through and ruining your new flooring.

Prevent the growth of mold and mildew in finished basements — Finished basements also need protection against mold and mildew to keep them looking beautiful. Consider painting dry wall, wood or other paintable surfaces with Perma-White Mold & Mildew-Proof Interior Paint. This low-odor, bright-white durable paint is guaranteed to prevent the growth of mold and mildew on paint film for five years. Plus, it can be tinted to off-white, pastel and medium-tone colors to enhance any décor.

For more information on Waterlite, Perma-White and other products for the long-term prevention of mold and mildew and for more tips and home improvement ideas, visit www.zinsser.com.

Planning For Your Future

How Close Are You To Your Financial Independence?

(NAPS) — You can combat many of the things that can stop you from enjoying financial freedom: debt, overspending, poor credit history, bad investments, lack of information to name only a few of them.

With so many factors to consider when getting your funds on the right track, however, it can be easy to lose sight of the basic steps that can make your finances sparkle.

Consider the following tips from the woman known as the Internet's No. 1 personal finance columnist, Liz Pulliam Weston of MSN Money, to help you get on the road to financial liberty:

Break out the BBQ — Just barbecuing one night a week instead of eating out can save you a lot of cash.

"Don't spend more than you earn. It sounds easy but many people struggle with overspending," Weston said. One of the best ways to curb this problem is to track where you're spending money with a program like Microsoft Money.

For many people, large purchases are not to blame for their money problems; it is more likely that small to medium-sized purchases are eating up their checking account.

Once you've added up how much you spend dining out or going out for coffee in a month, it's easy to identify less expensive alternatives and reduce the amount you spend.

Try a buy-nothing month — Led by Weston, dozens of people posting on the YourMoney message board on MSN resolved to spend money only on necessities for one month. The typical amount saved was $400. The experiment helped people realize how much of their spending was voluntary and often unnecessary.

Being debt free is something to celebrate — Many people believe that credit card debt is normal in the United States but Federal Reserve Systems figures show that the majority of U.S. households have no credit card debt and that the median balance among those that do is only $2,200. People who pay off their credit card debts not only improve their finances but also boost their credit scores, the three-digit numbers lenders use to gauge credit worthiness.

Get finance savvy — It's always a good idea to learn as much as you can about money and finances. Web sites such as MSN Money are great resources to help you stay informed with up-to-the-minute financial data, including access to the insight of money experts, tax tips, valuable stock-trading tools and investment information.

Weston is just one of many finance experts who write a twice-weekly column for consumers. Visit www.money.msn.com to learn more on helpful tips and tricks about anything finance related.

Real Estate Fraud

The number of cases of mortgage and real estate fraud continue to soar, and law-abiding buyers and sellers across the country are inadvertently getting pulled into fraudulent deals without realizing it. Often the first clue an innocent buyer or seller has that something is wrong is when the authorities show up at the closing table and arrest everyone.

Here are the possible players in a fraudulent real estate transaction:

Appraiser — Inflates the value of the house or hides the true value from the mortgage company.

Lender — Alters income, employment and credit documents or creates false ones for unqualified buyers; or works with appraiser to increase the value of the house. Often the lender gets a kickback on the inflated loan amount.

Title company — Misrepresents current and previous ownership and produces forged deeds.

Buyer — Lets someone else use their name and credit information in exchange for cash, or who takes cash back at closing, never intending to make any of the mortgage payments.

Seller — Raises the price of the house and gives cash back at closing or agrees to a silent second mortgage that the lender doesn't know about.

Real estate agent — Pulls comparables in a neighborhood to justify the higher price of a house, or steers unqualified buyers to lenders who will handle "creative" loans.

Notary — Notarizes documents without adequate evidence of who's signing the paperwork.

Even the most vigilant buyer or seller can inadvertently be sucked into a real estate scheme. Before you buy or sell, take a look at "Protect Yourself from Real Estate and Mortgage Fraud," by Ralph R. Roberts and Rachel Dollar (Kaplan 2007). Due out this summer, the book walks you through every possible scenario and shows how you can protect yourself.

Rules of thumb:

• If it isn't in writing, it's probably illegal. If every dollar in a transaction isn't accounted for on the HUD-1 Settlement Statement, it's evidence of fraud.

• If cash exchanges hands after closing, it's evidence of fraud.

• If you're pressured to lie about anything at all, it's evidence of fraud.

As an indication of the seriousness of real estate crimes, a bill has been introduced in Congress to make available $65 million to state and federal regulators for the prosecution of the criminals.

David Uffington regrets that he cannot personally answer reader questions, but will incorporate them into his column whenever possible. Write to him in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Your Lawn & Garden

Remedies For A Stressed-Out Lawn

By JOHN BUECHNER

(NAPS) — Good weather is meant for picnics, barbecues and spending time with family and friends outdoors. Life is carefree and it's time to relax. There's only one problem: the effect that seasonal stress has on the green lawn that will serve as the backdrop of memories for years to come.

Most homeowners cringe at the thought of having a dried-out, dull lawn due to the stress that summer heat puts on grass roots. How are they going to deal with the reality of it come the fall season? There's only one solution: proactive preparation.

This is a stressful for lawns. Hot days in the early summer set the stage for a relentlessly hot, dry August and stressed-out turf. The high summer temperature and lack of moisture cause most lawns to go dormant for several weeks, just in time for fall, leaving lawns desiccated and homeowners with a bad return on their investment.

Lawn Doctor, whose specialists help homeowners' lawns recover from stressful summer conditions with periodic inspections and treatments, recommends:

Mowing

• When mowing, raise the mowing height to no lower than three inches. This height helps drive the roots deeper into the soil so they're able to pick up moisture. And longer grass blades will shade the soil, reducing soil temperature and heat stress.

Water And Aerate

• Consistently water the lawn with approximately one-inch of water each week.

• Remember to aerate the lawn in the fall so grass roots have a better chance of getting oxygen for good growth.

• Homeowners should be able to continue enjoying a lush, green lawn all season long. The best way to beat the heat is to maintain your lawn with proper mowing and watering, protecting your investment so your lawn looks beautiful and remains healthy throughout the season.

• Changing your lawn care practices now is essential for beautifying your lawn and home. Continue to enjoy your time on your yard without having to worry about summer stress.

For more helpful tips, visit www.lawndoctor.com or call (1-800-452-9637).

Arms That Look Good in Tank Top

Q. I would like to feel comfortable wearing sleeveless shirts, but my arms have NO muscle tone. What type of exercises can I do to tone the muscles of my arms with hopes of wearing a tank top by the end of summer?

A. Toned arm muscles are the desire of many exercisers when setting their fitness goals. The appearance of strong, lean and toned muscles can be achieved through a comprehensive exercise program that not only focuses on appearance but also stability, muscle balance and function.

The muscles most people want to tone are the triceps (back of the arm), biceps (front of the arm) and deltoids (shoulders). Each of these muscle groups must work properly for you to maximize function, strength and stability. Although your goal may be to tone your arms, an exercise program that targets the entire body will help you reach your goals.

As you probably know, you cannot spot train and target just the arms to produce results. Fortunately, we use our arms while working other muscle groups such as the chest and back, so although you are not focusing just on the arms in those exercises, they have to work in order for those exercises to be completed.

Great exercises for the arms include bicep curls, triceps extensions and shoulder raises. These exercises can be done with dumbbells, resistance bands, body weight or with exercise machines. Be patient when trying new exercises, and complete sets and repetitions that will allow you to progress as you get stronger.

Don't forget that exercises such as push-ups, pull-ups, chest press and rows also require the arm muscles to work, even though they are not isolated. Exercises for your lower body may not seem to have anything to do with your arms, but they can help lower your body fat and increase your overall lean muscle mass.

Give yourself several weeks to begin to see results, and maintain a consistent exercise regime. Try not to overtrain in trying to reach your goals, and allow your body time to recover between higher-intensity workouts.

Remember that nutrition and other positive lifestyle choices also are important in getting you in your sleeveless shirts in no time.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. Andrea Renee Wyatt, M.S.S., C.S.C.S., is a certified personal trainer with an extensive background in strength and conditioning as well as therapeutic recreation. Now Is The Time To Talk To Kids About Not Smoking (NAPS) – Youngsters love the freedom of unsupervised summertime fun and time to play with their friends. But with these freedoms also come risks of which all parents should be aware.

Many children during summer will be approached with the opportunity to try their first cigarette. While it is unrealistic for parents to supervise their children every moment of every day this summer, your values and beliefs should be known and understood. That is why now is an ideal time for parents to talk to their children about how they feel about smoking and other negative behaviors.

Dr. Michael Popkin, author, parenting expert and spokesman for Talk Early, Talk Often sponsored by Lorillard Tobacco Company's Youth Smoking

Prevention Program, says children are trying their first cigarette as early as age 8, with the majority trying it between the ages of 12 and 14. Most of these children are approached by a friend who they consider to be "cool" and therefore has influence on their decisions. Popkin recommends establishing clear guidelines for your child's behavior.

Make Expectations Very Clear

"Taking the time to sit with your child and agree on clear guidelines for behavior can pay off greatly when your child has to make a choice about whether or not to try smoking," says Popkin. "I use the term 'problem-prevention talk,' which is a dialogue between you and your child that makes your expectations of him or her very clear."

The problem-prevention talk consists of five steps:

1. Identify potential problems and risks.
2. Share your thoughts and feelings about these problems and acknowledge your child's thoughts and feelings.
3. Generate guidelines through brainstorming and negotiations (within limits that you can live with).
4. Decide on logical consequences for violating the guidelines (if necessary).
5. Follow up to ensure that guidelines were followed and to enforce consequences (if necessary).

Create A Written Contract

Creating a written contract between you and your child that clearly lists your expectations and the logical consequences that you will apply if these expectations are not met is another suggestion made by Popkin. "Written contracts ensure that the is no miscommunication about your child's decision not to smoke," says Popkin.

Dr. Popkin is one of the nation's foremost experts on parenting education, with more than 25 years of experience helping families communicate about tough topics like smoking.

Parents are encouraged to visit www.keepkidsfromsmoking.com to prepare them for their conversations with their children. On this Web site, parents will find talking tips, warning signs, age-specific advice and further parenting advice.

Travel Health Update

Putting Medications On Your Packing List

(NAPS) – Here's a healthy reminder: The next time you travel, don't forget to pack your prescription drugs.

How To Travel With Drugs

The Academy of Managed Care Pharmacy says the safest way to travel with medications is to keep them in their original containers, but that's not always practical, especially for short trips. You don't want to take along several bottles of 30 or more capsules for a four-day weekend. Judy Cahill, the Academy's executive director, advises, "Take along just enough to last through the entire trip, with perhaps two or three extra days' supply in case of travel delays or trip extensions." And keep them with you—don't take a chance on checked luggage.

The next best thing to do is to place your medications in a pill carrier; many types are readily available in any drugstore. In addition, write down all the medications you are taking on a sheet of paper, including the medication's name, the doctor's name and phone number, how much to take and when to take it. If there's any chance of confusion, include a description of the colors, shapes and sizes.

Your Pharmacist Can Help

Many pharmacies have these records and would be happy to provide you with a copy. Often, when you pick up your drugs at the pharmacy, you can get a duplicate label. Peel it off the backing and put it on a sheet of paper with all your other medication and keep this list in a safe place. Make sure the doctor's name and phone number are included for each medication. When you travel, bring along a photocopy of the list. If you're worried about mixing up your medications, make a copy of each label and put the copy in a secure plastic bag or container with the medications.

Your Health Insurer Can, Too

If you have prescription insurance, you can ask the plan to send you this information or help you access your records on its Web site. If you get drugs at more than one pharmacy or clinic, your insurance plan will probably have the most complete records. Be sure to pack your prescription I.D. card, too, and keep a copy of both the front and the back of the card in a separate place.

With this information, you'll be able to easily replace any medications you may need and, if you fall ill unexpectedly, you can easily communicate which drugs you are taking to a pharmacist or doctor. Your plan should be able to help you manage this process if you call the customer service number.

Who Needs It?

It's important to do this for all family members, from toddlers to seniors, because you never know who might fall ill or become injured and unable to communicate.

Further Precautions

If you take drugs that might react with other drugs or foods or if you have a serious medical condition that might leave you unconscious, talk to your doctor about a bracelet or pendant with that information and keep your medical information in an easy-to-find spot, such as a purse, pocket or wallet.

If you're taking a trip of more than a month, you may need to bring along an extra supply or refill your prescriptions where you'll be staying. Call your insurance plan and ask whether you can get additional medication for the length of your stay, or whether it has a pharmacy network in that location. It's a good idea to bring a photocopy of your records for the temporary pharmacy. Some have the ability to obtain your records electronically, for even greater safety and convenience. If your plan does have a pharmacy in the temporary location, don't forget to bring your prescription card, so your medications can be paid for just like at home. If not, keep all of your receipts so you can be repaid.

CHILDREN MUST GUARD AGAINST TOOTH DECAY

Data from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's National Center for Health Statistics show that tooth decay in the permanent teeth of children, teens, and adults has decreased in recent years. Specifically, tooth decay in the permanent teeth of children ages 6 to 11 has decreased from about 25% to 21% between 1988 and 2004. In the same period, tooth decay in the permanent teeth of teens has decreased from 68% to 59%. That's the good news. The bad news is that tooth decay in the baby teeth of 2- to 5-year-olds has increased from 24% to 28% from 1988 to 2004. This should serve as a warning for parents to help with their young children's oral hygiene.

We can help you learn good oral hygiene techniques and can point out areas of your mouth that may require extra attention during brushing and flossing. Whether your dental needs are a complete exam and cleaning, a full-mouth restoration, or anything in between, we promise to provide you with exceptional care as we enhance the natural beauty of your smile. We provide a comprehensive treatment planning and use restorative and cosmetic dentistry to achieve your optimal dental health. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Beautiful smiles are a team effort. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. The decrease in tooth decay in the permanent teeth of children and teens is largely due to the use of sealants, a plastic coating that protects against decay.

Patrick White Baseball Tournament Remembers 'A Great Kid'

By DOMENIC POLI

Bob Griffin was listening to the Red Sox game on the drive home one day about seven years ago when he heard a familiar voice coming out of the car radio.

It was a boy on his Quincy Youth Baseball team — Patrick White of Quincy. He was plugging the Jimmy Fund in a radio advertisement with the organization's chairman — and former Red Sox second baseman — Mike Andrews.

Patrick himself had been diagnosed with Rhabdomyosarcoma, a form of tissue cancer, about a year earlier.

Hearing his player's shout-out for such a great cause hit Griffin with an idea — a baseball tournament to raise money for the Jimmy Fund.

Patrick's parents, Barbara and Paul "Whitey" White, loved the idea and it soon snowballed into the Annual Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament.

With all proceeds going to the Jimmy Fund, teams from Quincy, Hingham, Duxbury and other Massachusetts towns pay to enter the tournament every year.

Patrick played in the tournament, too.

"When Bob started the tournament it was like the best thing, and [Patrick] enjoyed it and he got to play in it," Barbara said. "It was something to look forward to every summer."

In the fall of 2005, however, the world provided yet another reminder that only the good die young, when Patrick passed away at the age of 15. After his six-plus year battle with cancer, he was laid to rest at Cedar Grove Cemetery in Dorchester.

Anyone who ever knew him describes Patrick Toland White as having been a tremendous human being. A Quincy native, Patrick is said by friends and family members to have been a fierce competitor with a giving heart, who lived to play between the white lines.

NQHS Girls' Soccer Alumni Game Aug. 18

The North Quincy High School girls' soccer team will be hosting its 1st annual alumni soccer game, August 18 at Veterans Memorial Stadium. The game is scheduled to begin at 9:30 a.m.

Any former NQHS alumni who wishes to play in the game should contact head coach Paul Bregoli at (617) 471-2867.

"He was a great kid," Griffin said. "He was very supportive of his teammates and also very supportive of other kids who were struggling with the battle of cancer. [He would] go to the Jimmy Fund clinic and help there with the kids."

Patrick spent much at the clinic doing his best to lift the spirits of the younger kids sick with cancer.

For the six years fought his illness, he was in and out of treatment. But his love for America's pastime never wavered.

"Patrick loved baseball. It was his favorite thing to do," Barbara said. "Now that he's gone, I think he's probably enjoying it from heaven — that there's still baseball going on, with his name on it."

Last weekend saw the 7th Annual Patrick White Baseball Tournament, at Adams Field. It was the first year the tourney held Patrick's name. Last year it was known as the Annual Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament in honor of Patrick White. Before that, it was simply the Annual Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament.

Out of the ten team field, the top three teams advanced to play in the final round. Duxbury, the number three seed, and Quincy, the number two seed, squared off in the semifinals. Duxbury defeated Quincy 6-2 to advance to the championship game against Weymouth.

In the championship game, Duxbury beat Weymouth 4-2 to earn a first-place finish.

But winning is not what the tournament was about.

"We feel it is a great honor for our family and for [Patrick]," Paul White said. "We really appreciate that the people of the community take the effort to work or participate. It just means a lot to us."

"It's funny how much it's grown," he went on to say. "When we started it was just a little tournament over at the Mitchell and McCoy fields and we had a little grill in between the two fields and a few burgers were sold. It takes a lot of hard work by Bob Griffin and Jane [Warwick] and Cindy [Ouellette] and [Bob's wife] Rosanne [Russell]."

The generosity of the Quincy community has raised a great deal of money to lead the fight of cancer over the years.

Each team must pay $350 to play in the tournament, and Griffin said many teams had to be turned down for lack of bracket space. And the money made from the concessions is also donated to charity, after expenses. All proceeds will go to Pediatric Solid Tumor Program at Dana-Farber/Children's Hospital Cancer Care Service.

Griffin, who has organized and ran the tourney for all of its seven years, added that it has raised about $120,000 since it began, averaging about $15,000-20,000 per year.

"It's the spirit of giving," Griffin said.

A BANNER FOR the Seventh Annual Patrick White Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament hangs on the side fence at Adams Field. The ten-team tourney was held last weekend. Duxbury defeated Weymouth in the finals to earn top honors.

A PLAQUE HONORING the late Patrick Toland White reads, "An All-Star both on and off the field. A fierce competitor, loyal friend and teammate who battled cancer with tenacity and dignity. His Spirit Endures."

McDermott, White Families Unite To Fight Cancer In The Pan-Mass Challenge

Norfolk County Register of Probate Patrick McDermott and his brother, Quincy Police Officer Chris McDermott, combined their Pan-Mass Challenge fundraising efforts this year with another Quincy family who also experienced the pain of cancer.

The White family siblings-David White, Anne Marie White, Theresa Mulcahy (all of Quincy) and Tricia Brown (of Walpole) joined the McDermott brothers and more than 5,000 cyclists from 37 states and six countries to ride in the 28th annual Pan-Mass Challenge, all pedaling to raise $27 million and surpass an overall fundraising total of $200 million.

The PMC is a bike-a-thon from Sturbridge to Provincetown. A physical, mental, financial and emotional challenge, the PMC serves as the largest single fundraiser for the Jimmy Fund of the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. These efforts have saved untold lives and resulted in innumerable cancer research breakthroughs.

The McDermott brothers' participation in the PMC serves especially as a way to honor the memory of their late mother, Patricia, who died from cancer in December 1989 at the age of 55.

"Our mother inspired us in so many ways to never take life for granted and to look for ways to help others in need," said Patrick McDermott. "Even though she lost her personal battle with cancer, her faith served as a beacon of hope for so many others who wait for a cure. We look forward to the day when we can refer to cancer as a disease of the past."

Register McDermott, now in his 16th year with the PMC, also pays a personal tribute each year to his friend and political mentor, Paul D. Harold, former State senator, City Council President, and Norfolk County Register of Deeds who lost his own battle with the disease in 2002 after having been a patient at Dana-Farber.

McDermott recalls on eof his last visits with Harold, "He was tired but full of faith and words of wisdom. Then he presented me with a check for the PMC and told me I was doing a great service for the people of Dana-Farber and the Jimmy Fund. I am proud to dedicate a portion of my ride each year to Paul."

The White family rides to honor their father and mother who both lost their respective battles with cancer.

"Coming from a large family helps to provide the support that eases the pain of our loss," said David White. "We are forever grateful for being raised by two dedicated and loving parents. We can only hope that in doing the PMC, we can teach our own children the same kinds of lessons of giving back to others and sharing our hopes and dreams that our parents taught us."

Cycling and cancer research have been connected in New England since 1980 when 36 cyclists rode 220 miles across Massachusetts to raise funds for Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its Jimmy Fund. Their efforts garnered more than $10,000 and the PMC, the nation's original fundraising cycling event, was born. Today the PMC raises more money than any other athletic charity event in the country.

Chris McDermott, a 14-year rider, says he is mindful of other friends and family members who have fought or are fighting the battle against cancer.

"Cancer does not discriminate. It affects people of all ages, races, and socioeconomic scales. I unfortunately have seen first-hand the devastating effect this disease has on families. I just want to try to do my part to see the day when we can declare a full victory over this disease."

Fortunately, all six riders finished the 2007 PMC safely and without injury. Getting off the shuttle boat from Provincetown at Black Falcon terminal in Boston, there was no doubt they would all be back for 2008.

In order to participate, each rider must raise a minimum of $3,600. If you would like to join the PMC team in its battle against cancer by sponsoring the McDermott and White families, visit the PMC's Web site at www.pmc.org to make an online gift (eGifts) or checks can be made payable to "PMC/Jimmy Fund" and forwarded to Patrick McDermott at 194 Federal Avenue, Quincy, MA 02169.

RUNNERS AND WALKERS alike take to the streets of Houghs Neck recently in memory of Bill Dunn, Jr. More than 800 people participated in the first annual Bill Dunn, Jr. Memorial Road Race.

Large Turnout At 1st Annual Bill Dunn, Jr. Memorial Road Race

On June 30, the Houghs Neck community celebrated the life and memory of Bill Dunn, Jr. with the 1st annual Bill Dunn, Jr. Memorial Road Race. Dunn was lost at sea on July 1, 2006.

To honor his memory, a road race was held with approximately 300 participants running the 5-mile course along the ocean and over the hills of Houghs Neck. There were also over 500 walking the two-mile course, all in memory of "B." The race was a huge success with runners/walkers coming from as far away as Fayetteville, NC.

The proceeds from the race will benefit the Bill Dunn, Jr. Memorial Scholarship Fund, which will go to a deserving Quincy High School football player and to other local scholarships.

City Tennis Tournament Applications Now Available

The Quincy Recreation Department is pleased to announce that the 37th Annual City Tennis Tournament applications are now available and that the tournament will once again be co-sponsored by Quincy Credit Union.

"This marks the 12th year that Quincy Credit Union has provided the financial backing to keep this traditional tournament a low cost activity for all ages and abilities of Quincy families," said Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation. "The generosity of the Quincy Credit Union to our citizens is to be commended."

The tournament is open to Quincy residents. There are eleven events that will crown a City Champion. A special division, now in its fifth year, conducts a championship for city employees regardless of their residency.

This year's deadline for applications is Sept. 7 and matches will start Sept. 13. All matches are played on the municipal courts at Russell Park behind Quincy High School. Weather permitting, the tournament is scheduled to end Sept. 23.

This tournament is believed to be the largest and oldest municipal tournament in New England. The entry fee is $15 for adults and $8 for youths under 16 years of age and entitles participants to enter as many events as they qualify. All participants receive a tournament T-shirt.

The events are Men's Singles, Men's 35 and over singles, Men's 50 and over singles, Men's Doubles, Women's Singles, Women's 35 and over singles, Women's Doubles, Mixed Doubles, Boys 16 and under singles and girls 16 and under singles.

There is also Men's Singles "B" event, which is conducted from a pool of players who are defeated in the Men's Singles first round. The City Employee event rounds out the tournament.

Applications can be obtained at the Quincy Recreation Department, Quincyrec.com, or in special boxes at the tennis court's entrance.

A Job Well Done

On Sunday, July 29, at approximately 1:20 p.m., officers were dispatched to the area of a McDonald's Restaurant in North Quincy on a "robbery" call. As officers were enroute, a description was given out as a male fleeing southbound with tan cargo shorts, no shirt and claiming to have a gun.

Officer Lauren Lambert arrived on scene and immediately spoke to employees to obtain as much information as possible. One employee said he observed the suspect waiting in the back of the store for about 10 minutes, as if waiting for the lines to dissipate. When the suspect got to the counter, he told the cashier that he didn't know what he wanted to eat because he wasn't feeling well and suffered from a hangover.

OFF. DAVID LEVINE

The suspect then said, "Give me everything you have in the register" as he lowered his hand to his waistband. The suspect became aggravated because the cashier didn't move quickly and reiterated his instructions. The cashier said he couldn't open the cash register drawer because he didn't have a key.

At that time, a co-worker came over to assist and the suspect said, "I'm robbing you - I have a gun - give me everything in the register." The second employee said he didn't have a key and the drawer could only be opened after a purchase.

The suspect then retorted, "Then I'll buy a small Coke." The employee then rang up a "small Coke" and handed him all the 10, 5 and 1 dollar bills in the register. The suspect angrily asked, "Where are the $20s?" The employee said this was a new drawer (new shift) and there were none. At that time, the suspect fled out of the side door, running southbound on Hancock Street with about $300. A customer came forward and reported he saw the suspect take off his shirt as he ran away.

At approximately 1:35 p.m., Officer David Levine observed a party matching the description of the suspect at Billings Road and Hancock Street. The officer stopped the suspect just as he was about to get into a taxi and brought him back to the scene of the crime for identification purposes. The two employees viewed the suspect separately and confirmed that he was the suspect (minus the shirt) who robbed them in McDonald's.

After being placed under arrest, Officer Levine removed $294 in 10, 5 and 1 dollar bills, and equally important, no 20 dollar bills. Officer Levine questioned the suspect and learned that he had just left a local Pub prior to stopping the taxi. Although the suspect said he had a gun, he did not have one on him, so Officer Kevin DiMatteo went to the pub and interviewed the bartender.

She said the suspect came into the pub appearing to be out of breath and sick. She said he told her that he didn't feel good, then went into the men's room, came out and ordered a drink. The bartender said she couldn't serve him because she was concerned about his condition.

The suspect then asked where he could buy a "cheap t-shirt." One of the customers recommended Brooks Pharmacy. The suspect asked the bartender to call a taxi for him, but he was told that it was within walking distance. The suspect then left the pub and soon after was stopped by Officer Levine.

Officer DiMatteo searched the men's room and general area for an alleged gun and although he didn't find one, he did find a t-shirt matching the one the suspect wore during the robbery. The suspect, a 42-year-old homeless man, was charged with "armed robbery." Surveillance tapes at McDonald's Restaurant were taken as evidence, along with the money and t-shirt.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A strong social whirl brings a new round of good times to fun-loving Rams and Ewes. Cupid is also busy aiming arrows at single Lams hoping for a heart-to-heart encounter.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A romantic incident could take a more serious turn if the Divine Bovine considers meeting Cupid's challenge. Meanwhile, a professional opportunity is also about to turn up.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A bit of hardheaded realism could be just what the Twins need at this emotionally challenged time. Face the facts as they are, not as you want them to be. Good luck.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Many opportunities open up. But you need to be aware of their actual pros and cons. Check them all out and make your choice from those that offer more of what you seek.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A more stable situation begins, allowing you to feel more secure about making important decisions. Meanwhile, be sure to meet your project deadline so you can move on to other things.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Congratulations. A new personal relationship thrives as you learn how to make room in your busy life for this wonderfully warm and exciting emotional experience.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A new contact opens some doors. That's the good news. But there's a caution involved: Be sure you protect your rights to your work before showing it to anyone.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A former colleague might seek to resume a working partnership. Ask yourself if you need it. If yes, get more information. If no, respectfully decline the request.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Good times dominate your aspect. So why not have a party to celebrate a loved one's success? And do invite that special person you want to know better.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The shy side of the Sea Goat soon gives way to your more assertive self. This should help you when it comes time to speak up for yourself and your achievements.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new period of stability will help you deal with some recently reworked plans. Once you get your current task done, you can devote more time to personal matters.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Things are finally more stable these days, so you can restart the process of meeting your well-planned goals with fewer chances of interruption or delay.

BORN THIS WEEK: You love being the brightest light wherever you are, and people love basking in your warmth and charm.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

St. Joseph's Church Kicks-Off Youth Group

St. Joseph's Church in Quincy Point will kick off the start of a long anticipated youth group at a cookout Sunday, Aug. 12, from noon to 4 p.m. at the church, 550 Washington St., Quincy.

Music, volleyball, whiffle ball, water-balloon games, hot dogs and hamburgers will be part of the day open to all students going into 6th to 12th grades. The event is free and will also provide students with an outline of fall events planned for the program.

For the past 13 months, many adults at St. Joe's have been working hard to formulate a plan for the program. Under the leadership of Fr. Vinnie Doolan, the parish has adopted a model called "Sparkling Youth Ministry" provided by the Archdiocese of Boston.

"We're really excited because we finally have a long term plan and an active adult participation in place to make this program successful," Fr. Doolan said. "I want to thank these folks who have worked long and hard to prepare for this new venture at St. Joseph's."

Four high school students from St. Joseph's just returned from a week of training at the Catholic Leadership Institute, run by the Archdiocese Office of Youth Ministry. These students will assist in administering a "drop in night" on the first Friday of every month for students in 6th to 8th grades.

Games, activities and food will highlight the "drop-in" nights. The first takes place Friday, Sept. 7 from 7 to 9 p.m. Fall events for high school students are in the works.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It has been well stated "that the pioneer is a creature not of time but of spirit." How do you rate as a pioneer?

There is as much room for the pioneer today as when our country was mostly a virgin wilderness... There isn't a town that does not need people of spirit to act - to cut down the dead wood of lethargy and indifference, to build as did the pioneers of old - a more desirable place in which to live...

As you a pioneer in your own job? Have you gone as far as you can on your particular roadways of life - or would greater knowledge help you further? The tool of learning is yours for the taking. You have to want to use all the advantages within your reach if you are to move out into the unknown...

You can also pioneer in friendship. How narrow is your circle? Have you confided your life to a few people - or have you gone beyond and in serving your fellow men learned to know them?... It has been said that there is no form of pioneering that is richer in results than this... I look upon those with whom you come in contact as the pioneer did of the chance wayfarer who passed his way - as a welcome guest from whom much could be learned... True, it takes courage to be a pioneer. It means work and a willingness to learn and a spirit of helpfulness.

Liang Appoints Campaign Committee

Committee co-chairs are Maryann Mahoney of North Quincy and Paul Daly of Marina Bay. His cousin, Tony Liang, is treasurer. Committee chairmen are Joe Coyne, fund raising; Jane Lin, voter registration; Jonathan Yip, bilingual communications; Donnie Hoffman, website; Ellen Walkins, database; John Liang, sign holding; and Sharon Gamache, community issues. David Colton is campaign advisor. Other members of the Campaign Committee are I'Esha Brown, Steven Pansey, Chris Colman and Christopher Dumas.

"I organized my Campaign Committee to include people who are both competent and who reflect a diversity of ages, cultures, and viewpoints," said Liang. "They will help me mobilize dozens of volunteers to make this campaign a success."

lifeguards in the pool at the same time. Classes are taught only by Water Safety Instructors (WSI) certified by the American Red Cross and lifeguards are assigned to each class according to the class size.

Recently, three lifeguards were on duty while Michaela King, 18, taught a half hour Level 1/2 class using games like "Red Light, Green Light" and "Pie-Eater."

"I love the little ones," Michaela said, noting that the lifeguards are always alert for the youngsters' safety. "Sometimes they'll slip off the wall."

Michaela, a graduate of Fontbonne Academy and a liberal arts major at Quincy College, teaches 40 to 50 youngsters at all levels over the course of a day. She herself learned to swim through the Recreation Department's program.

"I started when I was six," Michaela said, adding she pursued lifeguard courses and the WSI certification because "It was one of my dreams. Looking up at the lifeguard, I wanted to do the same thing."

Nineteen year-old Victoria Holland, a sophomore at Merrimack College, also earned her lifeguard and instructor's certificate through the Quincy program.

"I like to work with the kids," said Victoria who's been teaching swimming for four years to all levels from 6 year old to 15 year old students. Some of her former pupils have moved on and are learning to be lifeguards. "Some of them, I see them swimming. Wow. They're really good."

Instructor Josh Brabazon, 19, supervised advanced swimmer Rachene Henry, 12, as she practiced the Frog Crawl in a full lane.

"It's fun and all the teachers are nice," said Rachene who is in her second year at Lincoln Hancock.

The swimming classes are held in two sessions each summer and classes are free to members of the pool. Recreational swims are held evenings and weekends during the winter.

Full-year membership charges vary for families, seniors, youths and adults. Receptionists on duty at the pool provide application forms.

Siciliano Pension Issue Not A Speedy Process

the level described in the law, then we have no alternative but to revoke his pension," said McCray. "Meantime, his pension has been suspended until we reach a decision."

"The process does not move quickly. Ralph Maher's pension was revoked five years ago and the case is still going on. Tony Siciliano is entitled to the same consideration."

Maher, the former chief plumbing inspector for the city, is suing the Board to restore his $34,000 pension that was revoked after he was convicted of breaking into the Personnel Office at City Hall.

McCray said the next meeting of the Retirement Board will be Monday, Aug. 20.

Meanwhile, Frank

Collins, attorney for Siciliano, has filed a notice of appeal, which, he said, "triggers the preparation of a trial transcript and the collection of evidence."

"Typically," he said, "it takes six months. Then we will file an appellate brief."

Collins said he has found five substantive bases for appeal but he declined to name them until the briefs are filed.

Three Water Main Projects Moving Ahead

Three water main projects are making substantial progress, reported Mayor William Phelan and DPW Commissioner Steve O'Donnell.

The projects have been undertaken to improve water flow in areas that have long had low-flow problems.

Water main improvements to Parker Street and Carlson Street will improve water flow in an elevated area that has suffered from being the dead-end of the line, Phelan and O'Donnell said. New pipes and design will prove water flow for residents and for emergency use.

On Clifton Street, they said, a dead-end line will be improved to increase water flow for residents on the street.

In West Quincy, residents of Salem Street will have better water flow from an ongoing project that is expected to be completed later this fall.

Carruth Street and Gilmore Street in Wollaston are also dead-end streets undergoing water main improvements this summer.

"We are improving those areas that traditionally have been low-flow areas because of topography or the design of the system," said O'Donnell. "We have developed plans to ensure that public safety personnel receive the necessary support. An ancillary benefit is that residents will likely enjoy better service than that which was provided by some pipes that were close to 80 years old."

O'Donnell also cited water main improvements along Summer Street in Quincy Point, and Standish Avenue in Wollaston. Both main streets will be paved once the infrastructure work is complete.

"Our payment management plan is systematically addressing one of the main problems in our city, the condition of our roadways," said Phelan. "I think we have seen dramatic improvements, but we have more work to do. We are now moving into our neighborhood streets and will continue to improve our roadways."

Mayor Asks Verizon To Compete For Cable License

Mayor William Phelan wrote Verizon this week offering to meet immediately with its representatives to begin negotiating to bring cable competition to Quincy.

Verizon has negotiated close to 50 license agreements with communities in Massachusetts.

"The door is open to bring cable competition to Quincy," said

Phelan. "Our consumers are hungry for competition and they are seeing other communities being offered more choices. Quincy residents deserve the same options that other communities are now getting. We are ready to negotiate."

Comcast is currently the sole provider of cable services in Quincy. The city has a 10-year, non-exclusive license with Comcast to provide cable television to Quincy residents.

"By all accounts, Comcast has been a good corporate citizen, but competition is good for consumers," said Phelan. "We have been hearing about Verizon's entry into this marketplace for some time now. It's overdue time for Quincy to have competition in the cable services market."

Raymondi Ordinance Amendment Aimed At Sitings Strict Control Sought Over Wind Farms

By TOM HENSHAW

There'll be no commercial wind energy facilities breaking the skyline in Quincy until the city gets better control over the placement of the giant fans.

Not if a concerned Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi has his way, anyway.

The City Council's Ordinance Committee will hold a public hearing Monday, Oct. 1, at 6:30 p.m. on a zoning ordinance amendment proposed by Raymondi giving the Planning Board strict supervision over the siting of such wind farms.

The amendment designates the Planning Board as a Special Permit Granting Authority to see that such facilities "be constructed and operated in a manner that minimizes any adverse visual, safety and environmental impacts.

"No Special Permit shall be granted unless the Special Permit Granting Authority finds in writing that

- The specific site is an appropriate location for such use

- The use is not expected to adversely affect the neighborhood.

- There is not expected to be any serious hazard to pedestrians or vehicles from the use

- Adequate and appropriate facilities will be provided for the proper operation of the use."

The ordinance was introduced by Raymondi at a special meeting Aug. 9 after Developer Jay Cashman filed for a building per-

Shea Lone Dissenter License Board Meetings Changed to 4 P.M.

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The chairman of the License Board at Tuesday's meeting was the only one opposed to changing the meeting hours to 4 p.m. as requested recently by Mayor William Phelan.

Chairman Joseph Shea voted against the change and showed members a schedule of the Zoning Board that meet on Tuesdays, and the availability of the City Hall Chambers on that night.

The hours will change in October and will meet only twice a month. Previously the board would meet three or four times in a given month.

Police Chief Robert Crowley said the change of hours will give citizens "more opportunities and in put on certain issues."

He suggested that speeches given by either supporters or abusers should be limited.

Crowley said, however, that he was opposed to Mayor candidate Tom Koch's proposal for a major revamping of the City License Board which would replace the police chief, fire chief, health commissioner, building inspector and private citizens.

Jay Duca said that the meetings are held in the best interest of the public and said he was in full support of the mayor's request.

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele said he was also in favor of meeting twice a month.

Shea said he would issue the new schedule at the September meeting.

Quincy College Awaits Mayor's Go-Ahead On Newport Ave. Campus

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The lease for a new Quincy College campus at 150 Newport Ave. in North Quincy is all signed, sealed and waiting but needs Mayor William Phelan's signature.

As of mid-week, Mayor Phelan was undecided as to his decision on signing the document. He said he would review it with Quincy College President Martha Sue Harris and city attorneys.

"I have to speak to the president of the college," Phelan said, adding that he understands that the college is set to open its fall semester but he must be sure of all of the details before committing the city to a five-year lease.

"I'll make my determination prior to that," Phelan said, referring to this Friday's deadline on the lease imposed by the City Council on Aug. 9.

Officials of Quincy College hope to begin classes on Sept. 11 in the new building which would replace and improve on the college's former locations in an old school building on Coddington St. and two houses on Saville Ave.

Regardless of the lease decision, the college is expected to keep one location on Temple Place and a second in Saville Hall (located behind Presidents' Place).

They will vacate Alumni Hall and White Hall on Saville Ave., as well as the Coddington St. building.

The lease requires approval by both the City Council and the mayor, as Quincy College is still a department of the City of Quincy.

The City Council voted unanimously to authorize the City of Quincy to approve the lease at a special meeting held Aug. 9.

However, Councilors added a requirement that mayor sign the lease by Friday or the City Council's authorization is null and void.

Early this week, City Solicitor Robert Quinn said he believed that the lease was in order and that the mayor would sign the lease in a timely manner.

Quinn did tell the City Council, "There is an outstanding issue between the administration and the college."

In addition, the mayor's Director of Operations David Murphy, told City Council last week that the mayor was expected to approve the lease.

Under the terms of the lease, Quincy College hopes to occupy portions of the first floor and all of the second floor of the North Quincy building for an annual cost of $1.2 million plus approximately $65,000 in utility charges and a onetime renovation charge of approximately $750,000.

On a motion initiated by Ward 2 Councilor Daniel Raymond, the council's majority declared the authorization would be "null and void if said lease is not signed by all signatories by the deadline of Friday, August 17, 2007."

Ward 4 Councilor Jay Davis, Ward 1 Councilor Leo Kelly and Ward 6 Councilor Brian McNamee opposed the motion which was approved by the majority.

By a 7-2 voted, the City Council also asked City

QUINCY COLLEGE OFFICIALS waited this week for Mayor William Phelan to sign off on a 5-year lease of one and one half floors of this building at 150 Newport Ave. in North Quincy. Phelan said Tuesday he will make a decision before Friday, the deadline voted by the City Council last week.

Solicitor Robert Quinn to submit a letter to City Council President Douglas Guto stating that the lease is "not in violation of procurement of the property."

The two votes followed lengthy discussion by councilors and City Solicitor Robert Quinn regarding the emergency nature of the advertising for the property and emergency nature of the property procurement.

If the new lease is approved, Quincy College would establish two campuses in Quincy, one in Quincy Square and one in North Quincy. The college also has a campus in Plymouth.

Their move of even part of the campus out of Quincy Square disappointed both Phelan and City Councilors. As a result, Ward 1 Councilor Leo J. Kelly submitted a resolution asking that Quincy College "make a concerted effort to return to downtown Quincy in five years upon the expiration of its lease at 150 Newport Ave.

Councilors unanimously approved Kelly's resolution.

Early in the meeting, Peter Tsaffaras, chairman of the Board of Governors of Quincy College, described the difficulty that college officials encountered in seeking the proper space, particularly in Quincy Square.

"These 49,000 square feet are located in a first class office building with some parking and direct access to the North Quincy MBTA Red Line Station," Tsaffaras told City Council in describing the Newport Avenue property.

"I'm so excited. We have a lot to do," College President Martha Sue Harris said after the vote. Prior to the City Council meeting, Harris personally delivered copies of the lease to each of the councilor's homes.

City Council President Douglas Guto congratulated Harris and the Board for their work in finding a suitable home for the college.

Quincy College serves over 3,000 students. In 2006, Quincy College was awarded a 10-year accreditation by the Commission on Institutions of Higher Education of the New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC).

The accreditation was contingent on the college separating itself from its ownership by the City of Quincy within ten years. The NEASC, also, directed the college to unify its campus facilities. Until now, the college has occupied six addresses in Quincy.

Members of Quincy College Board of Governors include Tsaffaras, Mark Bertman, Jo-Ann Bragg, Mary Jo Brogna, Edward Browne, Francis Byrne, David Dennis, Thomas Feenan, William Grindlay, Richard Nici, Jerrell Riggins, Pedro Viejo-Rodriguez and Joanne Condon Walsh.

QC helped unlock my potential...

"I didn't know what I had to do in order to be successful. Coming to Quincy College was one of the best decisions I've made. I've found such support here in so many ways, from the new QC Fellows Program, to the academic advising, to the tutoring at the Learning Center, to the professors who make themselves available. Now I'm on the right track to get a degree. Thanks Quincy College!"

Ribbon Cutting Aug. 21 Germantown Center To Reopen At Former St. Boniface Church

After years of cramped quarters in the Snug Harbor School, the Germantown Neighborhood Center is on the cusp of moving into an expanded home in the former St. Boniface Catholic Church.

City officials and others responsible for the move will attend a ribbon-cutting ceremony at the new and improved center on Palmer Street Tuesday, Aug. 21, starting at 10:30 a.m.

"The Center is a true neighborhood institution that would not have been possible without a collaboration between the city, the South Shore Building Trades, the YMCA and the neighborhood," said Mayor William Phelan.

"The wonderful new space provided within the former St. Boniface Church will enable the Community Center to serve more individuals and invigorate existing programming that includes a food pantry, summer camps, Peer Leader Training, family literacy and many others."

Phelan, Planning Director Dennis Harrington, Ward 1 City Councillor Leo Kelly, GNC President Ruth Norton and the South Shore YMCA will take part in the ribbon-cutting, which will be followed by lunch and a tour.

The conversion of church to center has been compared to a barn-raising, with $1.3 million coming from CDBG funds, a grant from State Street Bank, fundraising by the YMCA and donated services from Shesky Architects and local Trade Unions.

New QHS Project Receives $95,000 Grant

The new Quincy High School project has been awarded a $95,000 grant aimed at encouraging and funding energy savings designs for the new high school, which has won "green school" designation.

Quincy's $95,000 grant is one of four green school projects totaling $340,000 recently announced jointly by Mitchell Adams, Executive Director of the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative (MTC), State Treasurer Tim Cahill and Katherine Craven, Executive Director of the Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA).

"These communities join a growing number of Massachusetts towns and cities that have realized the benefits of going green," Adams said, adding,

"Schools like these are good for our children and for our wallets; advanced air systems and natural lighting are just a few of the elements of green schools that help keep kids healthy and reduce building operating costs."

COA Seeking Wheelchairs

The Council on Aging is in urgent need of wooden or metal wheelchairs of all sizes and canes to help disabled seniors to get around.

If you have one, call the council at 617-376-1506.

"I am proud to be part of this program," Cahill, a Quincy resident, said, describing the green schools project as a "fiscally responsible, environmentally sound blueprint for future school construction."

Craven predicted that green schools will be on "the cutting edge of education, environmental sustainability and better health outcomes for students and teachers."

The grants are available through a $15 million phase of MTC green schools initiative which provides design and construction grants.

In addition to the MTC grant, Quincy is now eligible for an additional 2% of the approved, eligible project costs when it is certified as a high-performance green school.

Preparation for construction of the new $126 million Quincy High School at Faxon Field has begun on Woodward Street.

As a result of the MTC's Green School Initiative, state regulations now require that all new school or major renovation projects using state building funds adopt significant green design measures.

At this time, 17 Massachusetts schools have received "green school" grants and have been certified through the Green Schools Initiatives. Three additional schools are under construction.

Papile Homestead Being Razed

It's not listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

But it's a landmark in its own right in Quincy Point. And, a warm shining symbol of the "Greatest Generation."

It's the Papile family homestead at 10 Harkins St., home to 16 children of Raffael and Lucia Papile.

And from where seven brothers went off to serve their country in World War II.

The house is soon to be demolished. But, will be rebuilt with a new look.

"It's going to be heartbreaking to see it come down," says Jim Papile, former city assessor and one of the three surviving children, who was born there.

It was determined, sadly, that because of the age of the house—believed built in the late 1800s—and the wear and tear it has seen that it would cost more to repair and renovate it than to raze and rebuild it.

The new house will be a two-family with Jim and his wife, Marge, living on the first floor. And their daughter, Julie McCormick, her husband, Stephen and three children on the second.

"If this old house could only talk it would tell you of the many happenings—happy, sad, and proud—especially during the depression years and the war years," says Papile.

Beginning with his parents buying the house in the early 1920's. And having to double its size as the family kept growing.

There were the seven individual farewell parties for the seven brothers, as they left, one after the other, to serve in various branches of the armed forces in World War II:

Bill and Angelo (Mike), Army; Al, Ralph (Chick) and George, Navy; Leo, Marines and Jim, Coast Guard. All serving overseas.

Imagine being the parents of seven sons away at war and worrying about their safety.

There were a lot of prayers said in that house—which were all answered as all seven came home safely.

The other children:

Alfonzo ("Pop"), Mary, Helen, Sadie, Gloria, Amelia, John, Edward, Jim's twin, Jenny, died at an early age. Edward was killed in a fall from a staging at the Fore River shipyard.

Bill became a city councillor, Mary, assistant city treasurer, Leo an MDC police detective; John, a member of the Quincy Board of Voter Registrars and superintendent of the Milton post office, "Pop" a member of the Quincy Housing Authority Board. Sadie, active in the community and founder of the Ladies Torre dei Passeri Mutual Benefit Society.

THE PAPILE FAMILY homestead, a landmark at 10 Harkins St., Quincy Point will soon be razed.

LUCIA AND RAFFAEL Papile at their 50th wedding anniversary celebration in March 1956.

Only Jim, Chick and Gloria Kelly, the baby of the family survive.

What was it like growing up in the Great Depression in such a large family?

"My mother was cooking and baking all the time," Jim recalls. "My father had a huge vegetable garden from which we ate fresh vegetables and my mother would also preserve tomatoes, string beans and other vegetables for the winter. We didn't go hungry."

But that garden was greatly reduced in size when the city took a large chunk of the land on which to build a gymnasium for the then Point Junior High School.

Jim remembers his father's intense pride.

"He told my mother to stay away from the welfare office. He said he would take care of his family. They weren't going on welfare. And that was that."

He found road jobs and worked on WPA projects to support his family.

What was it like at dinner with all those brothers and sisters?

THIS 1907 POSTCARD served as a schedule for the steamboats that ferried passengers between Northern Avenue in Boston and Houghs Neck. In 1901 this pier was built to a channel dug in the mudflats to allow the passengers to get to shore. Arriving next to the Quincy Yacht Club, the boats ran several times a day in the summer. A number of companies ran the boats over the years and some went on from Houghs Neck to Nantasket, which was also a popular summer spot for the people confined to the city. There were very few automobiles at that time and the only other way to the Neck was by electric trolley from the Quincy Station of the Old Colony Railroad. This pier still exists as a public way to the water, but the steamboats stopped running many years ago. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Disagrees With Koch On License Board Plan

As a relatively new comer to Quincy, I've kept up on policies and political players here via the usually balanced reporting of The Sun for the last five years.... I don't know many of the players at city hall except from what I read here, and for that I give you guys a big thanks for keeping me informed.

In the last issue you headlined a story about mayoral candidate Tom Koch's proposal to revamp the City License Board and I have to admit it floored me. From what I understand of the article... and I am concerned that it was a publicity release as opposed to an actual Sun article since it had no by-line and lacked the Sun's usual objective reporting.... Mr. Koch wants to replace the heads of the Police and Fire Departments, the Chief Building Inspector and the Health Commissioner with four private citizens. This makes no sense to me.

The article made no mention of who would appoint these private citizens (another reason I suspect it wasn't written by any of the capable Sun staffers who surely would have asked that obvious question) although the implication is that they would be appointed by the Mayor. So instead of having four professional men who know the needs and areas of the city best and who by virtue of their position are obligated to the people of Quincy, as opposed to any private interests that the new members may have, we would end up with four political appointees who owe their allegiance to the Mayor, he it Mr. Koch or Mayor Phelan. Not a good thing!

According to Mr. Koch's proposal, the four elected department heads, who collectively have the best take on who should be granted liquor licenses, would be able to "offer opinions on the issues." But, apparently, the final decision would be in the hands of those who have to answer to a political boss. The potential for trouble is so obvious that I am amazed that Mr. Koch didn't spot it. The four current members of the Board may overwhelmingly disapprove of a liquor license request for a lot of sensible reasons but the for-civilian members, under a totally different set of pressures may pass it anyhow.

Am I the only one who sees the danger in this?

Mr. Koch states in the article that his proposal is not a criticism of the current board but claims his proposal would make it more of a community effort. I think the best thing for the community is to leave this in the hands of those who know what they are doing. Mr. Koch, remember the old adage, if something isn't broke, don't fix it. The problem apparently is in the hours the Board meets. It seems to me a lot easier to change the hours of sailing than to sink the whole boat.

Please Mr. Koch if you are elected mayor deep-six this and any other senseless proposals you may have.

On Bush And Remick's

I thought I'd reply to your two recent Sunbeams regarding Adams/Bush (July 12) and the Remick's (July 26).

You sure hit the nail on the head with both Sunbeams. We are all so frustrated with the government and the Iraq problems, and it is so very sad to read of the deaths each day. May we all pray for a solution.

Regarding the Remick's, what happy memories of this great store-it was A-1 classy, and we all were so proud of Lee's acting abilities. It was a happy day when my Mom took me shopping up Remick's.

A 'Thank You' To All Volunteers

I would like to thank all those who made donations for the Houghs Neck Community Council's July 3rd

Family Fun Day.

It was a great day for the kids. They enjoyed food, music, arts and crafts, face painting, moonwalk, dunk tank, magic show, races on the beach, etc.

Among those who donated were:

Mayor William Phelan, Ward One Councillor Leo Kelly, Toni Koch, Houghs Neck Tee Ball, Bernie's General Store, Bibbs Service Center, Houghs Neck Package Store, Roche Brothers, Outback Steakhouse, the Dunn Family, Shaw's Supermarket, Stop & Shop and BJ's.

I would also like to thank the many volunteers who helped make this event possible. Every one worked hard. Without all of you, this day could not be such a success!

Thank you!

City Celebrates Japanese Surrender

By FRANK McCaULEY

After one of the greatest impromptu celebrations in its history, during which thousands milled in the streets, shouting and singing in wild acclaim today were observing the end of the world's worst war in a safer manner, as churches were thronged by persons offering prayers of thanks.

Mayor Charles A. Ross made a hurried trip from Falmouth after hearing that the war was officially over. Together with Police Chief John Avery, he made a complete tour of the city. He reported that "everything was in order and control."

THOMAS S. BURGIN PROMOTED TO LEUTENANT COMMANDER

Thomas S. Burgin, who served four terms as mayor of Quincy and relinquished the position in November 1942 to volunteer for war service, was promoted from lieutenant to lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve and sworn into the new rank by Captain Henry Davis, U.S.N.

The promotion, retroactive to July 20, is one of the first to be made by President Harry S. Truman, on recommendation of Captain Davis, on whose staff Lieutenant Commander Burgin is assistant administrative officer.

MODERN SEWAGE PLANT AT NUT ISLAND

The state legislature has appropriated $4,450,000 to build a modern sewage treatment plant at Nut Island, Houghs Neck. The plant is expected to eliminate the source of long existing pollution in Quincy and Wollaston Bays.

Carrie Jie Sunde Dances Way To Edinburgh Festival

While most of her classmates are sunning themselves on the beach, Carrie Jie Sunde is in Scotland, playing the role of a tea-drunk dourmouse and understudying the White Rabbit in "Alice in Wonderland."

The 14-year-old North Quincy High School student is performing at the Edinburgh Festival Fringe in the Burkhyn Ballet Theatre's production of the Lewis Carroll classic, which is now in the midst of a two-week showing.

The Fringe is an international performing arts festival held in the month of August which attracts performers from around the world.

Carrie Jie is one of 20 young people from the Burkhyn Ballet who are performing daily matinees, leaving them time to take ballet class and tour museums, the zoo, castles, and shop the famous Edinburgh Mile.

The dancers are staying in the Edinburgh College dorms.

Carrie Jie started ballet at the age of three in Lisa's Dance Studio in Quincy and has danced in various school programs at Woodward School of Girls, Central Middle School and "Seussical," the city's summer program.

Studying in an intensive program at Boston Ballet, she has performed seven different roles in "The Nutcracker," had a role in Balanchine's "Midsummer Night's Dream," and performed in "Swan Lake" at Johnson State College in Vermont.

She also intends to audition for Boston Ballet's production of "Le Sylphida" which will open in Boston in October.

An honors student, she plays the flute and has started on the oboe and has won school science awards, including Grand Prize for the Lower School at Woodward and the Science Fair Prize in Psychology at North Quincy.

Two summers ago, Carrie Jie was the winner of the grand prize in the Kilroy Was Here Photo Contest in which she was shown holding a Kilroy sign atop the Great Wall of China.

Rotarians Enjoy Harbor Cruise, Island Dinner

Rotary Clubs of the South Shore mixed beneficence with pleasure recently, raising funds for the Rotary International Foundation on a Sunset Cruise of Boston Harbor and dinner on Spectacle Island.

Rich Barry, president of the Quincy Rotary Club, noted that in addition to the funds raised for the Foundation, the cruise provided socializing for Rotarians from Quincy to Plymouth and Bridgewater.

The group sailed aboard the Harbor Express commuter boat, captained by Mike McGurl, a Quincy Rotarian and an owner of Harbor Express, and enjoyed a catered dinner at the newly opened Spectacle Island Visitor Center and Marina.

Quincy Farmers' Market Features Fresh Food, New Varieties Of Vegetables

By ANNEEL JOHNSON

If we want to buy locally and support our farmers, shopping at our local farmers' market can be an important part of our week's shopping trip.

Farmers sell directly to us, as opposed to selling wholesale to a supermarket, so we are an important part of the farmers' lives. We can make the difference between a good month and just getting by.

Here are a few thoughts to ponder.

First: Farmers provide consistency, and they benefit from our consistency. This means that they are there at the market every Friday rain or shine. For example, they had picked 10 bushels of lettuce for Friday's market and it rains and we decided not to go.

The farmers might go back to the farm with five bushels of lettuce which translates into expensive animal food.

So, let us put on our raincoat and go to the market regardless and buy our week's fresh food even if it is raining.

Second: Plan in advance what you need and what is available at the farmers' market. Many people lament that they had just bought their vegetables and their bread at the supermarket so they do not need anything now.

To remedy this dilemma, we suggest that you visit first the farmers' market and then, if there are items that the farmers did not have at the time, go to the supermarket.

Third, talk with your farmers and tell them what is important to you. Do you want him to grow some special vegetables that you are using in your cooking? The farmers will grow it just for you.

Finally, don't forget to tell the farmers how wonderful the food they grow is and how much you and your family enjoy it. There is a lot of hard work involved in farming and it is great for them to hear positive feedback and appreciation of their work from us, the consumer.

Going to the Farmers' Market is a wonderful social event where you can meet your neighbor and exchange ideas and recipes. You can also try new varieties of vegetables not available in supermarkets and, also, you can taste the difference in fresh produce.

Quincy Farmers' Market operates each Friday from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Hancock Parking Lot opposite Quincy District Court.

Koch Takes Issue With Mayor's Tax Survey

Tom Koch, who is seeking to unseat Mayor William Phelan in the November municipal election, has challenged the integrity of a study commending the mayor for holding down the Quincy tax rate.

The study by Robert C. Haley, former research director of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, showed that since 2004 the city's average single-family tax bill increased the least of 50 communities in the study.

Koch noted that Haley had recently been appointed by Phelan to the Quincy Retirement Board and, as an officer in the QTA prior to the appointment, he had been critical of the mayor's handling of the tax situation.

"In December of 2003, Haley . . . called an 18 percent tax hike used to fund the mayor's budget 'ridiculous,' according to a local newspaper account," said Koch.

"The newspaper account stated:

"Robert Haley, vice president of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, blasted the increase as 'ridiculous' and suggested that city officials have mangled the numbers in the last two years in a way that hurts taxpayers."

"I'm upset with the process," Haley told the newspaper in 2003. "There is not a credible explanation."

Koch said last March, a few months before he was named to the Retirement Board, Haley cast more doubt on the Phelan administration's tax policies.

Koch quoted a letter he received from Haley commenting on a $126 million proposal to build a new Quincy High School: "I'm not sure the mayor can afford to fund these projects out of the general budget."

"We have been talking a lot about how the high school project will affect the pocketbooks of our taxpayers," said Koch, "and the study conducted by the same person who offered that warning makes no mention of it."

"We need to be straight with residents about taxes."

When we take that first step, we can start looking at ways to ease that burden."

He said residents are still feeling the effects of tax surges over the last several years, adding that "it is time to stop getting defensive about it with misleading studies like this and start trying to do something about it."

"We have a lot of difficult challenges facing this city and we need leadership that can be upfront about these kinds of challenges and be willing to take action."

Koch pledged a policy of "tax honesty" with residents.

"We need a leader that listens and responds to concerns about rising taxes, not orders a political appointee to write a misleading study," he said.

"Poll-driven spin about taxes doesn't sit with me and it shouldn't with our taxpayers who only have to open their bills to see the reality."

"Doing something about taxes is more challenging than spinning numbers but it's a challenge we must confront."

He Hopes To Open Sober Club Center

Wayne Devine believes there should be a place for everyone to dance, sing, and socialize without alcohol, drugs or smoke and he's begun efforts to open such a club, Presidents' Sober Club, in Quincy.

Presidents' Sober Club could offer themed dances nightly, along with pool, ping-pong, air hockey and domino tournaments, according to Devine who, also, envisions a snack bar and function room at the same location.

Such a club "will provide anyone of all ages from Quincy and abroad, including those passing through, with a safe location to gather with their relatives and friends," according to Devine.

Devine believes the club could also feature speakers on smoking cessation, healthy diets as well as anonymous meetings on substance abuse.

Under his plan, high school students could become involved early on, not only in helping to build the club, but also, decorating the public areas.

Young people, involved in the program, might be "inspired to pursue careers in human services," Devine believes.

Right now, Devine's plan is strictly on paper but he's gotten a heads up from the governor's office and encouragement from Boston's mayor's office.

"The club sounds like a wonderful idea," wrote Governor Deval Patrick in a February response to Devine's plan.

Both Patrick and Boston's Jan Quirami, Associate Director of the Bureau of Substance Abuse, encouraged Devine to continue to develop his idea.

"We fully support the efforts of neighboring communities to establish venues, such as your proposed club where residents can enjoy safe and sober social activities," Quirami wrote after reviewing Devine's proposal.

Devine considers other clubs, such as The Camel Club, in Minnesota a model for his local plan.

In the 1990's, a similar non-alcoholic entertainment club operated in Quincy. With substance abuse at an all-time high now, Devine believes the time has come to revive the idea and add many programs to a major center.

Devine has begun seeking federal and local grants for his plan. He said last week that he will contact the federal Health and Human Services agency to seek direction.

Anyone interested in working with Devine on the Presidents' Sober Club Center can write to Wayne J. Devine at 40 Presidential Drive, Apt. 2, Quincy, 02169.

Memorial Service Sunday At United First Parish For D-Day Veterans

Some 200 visitors from all over the country and the world, including 40 World War II veterans, began arriving at the Marriott in Quincy this week for the 89th National Reunion of the 29th Infantry Division of the US Army.

The reunion committee has scheduled trips to Quincy and Boston, a benefit dinner, a Red Sox game on Jimmy Fund night and a banquet on Saturday. Speakers will include Mayor William Phelan, Professor Theodore Gatchel of the Naval War College and active generals from Washington.

On the final day, Sunday, veterans and their families will attend a special Memorial Service at the Church of the Presidents, United First Parish Church, to honor the veterans and their deceased comrades.

On D-Day, June 6, 1944, these same veterans landed on Omaha Beach on the coast of France for the Normandy Invasion which turned World War II toward the Allied Force's final victory.

Veterans from the 29th Infantry Division provided some of the history and background for Stephen Spielberg's 1999 World War II movie, "Saving Private Ryan" which depicted the agonies and victories of that war.

The 29th Division was actually organized for World War I engagements and soldiers fought in the Meuse Argonne Offensive Units in France. Units comprising the division actually date back to 1775, a year before the American Revolution.

The numbers of World War II veterans are now dwindling and their children now organize many of the reunion programs to honor their fathers' service.

Michael Melchionda, Vice Commander of the 29th Division Association, and Fran Davino of the Reunion Committee, organized the reunion. Their late fathers, Sgt. Major Melvin Sherr and Sgt. Joseph Melchionda both served with the 29th Infantry Division in France.

munity can come for quality programs and services.

The South Shore YMCA is a not-for-profit organization whose mission is to build strong kids, strong families and strong communities.

The Quincy branch, located at 79 Coddington St., was established in 1892 and provides financial assistance to community members who qualify.

Pre-School Sessions Continue Through August At Beechwood Center

Summer pre-school sessions will continue through August at Beechwood Community Center with camping, cooking and ocean adventures on the calendar.

All camp programs will focus on nature exploration, making new friends, water play and having fun, according to Preschool Director Sharon Fayette.

From July 30 through Aug. 3, children can enjoy "Let's Go Camping." Youngsters will play in real and pretend tents, and enjoy such activities as making pet rocks, playing 'kick-the-can,' camp dancing, a scavenger hunt, fishing, hiking, and eating s'mores.

From Aug. 6 through Aug. 10, "What's Cooking" will be the theme. Campers will learn about cooking utensils, flower arranging, outrageous pizzas, and will bake edible and non-edible treats.

From Aug. 13 through Aug. 17, the "Mad Scientist" will be help explore the outdoors with magnifying glasses and binoculars for the participants.

In late August from Aug. 20-24, there will be a week of 'Amazing Adventures' with such special events as a treasure hunt, a pirate day, an archeological day and a safari day.

This summer's last program, "Wacky Water Fun" on Aug. 27 through Aug. 31, will offer a week at the beech. Children will explore the Hummocks, make ocean animal projects and enjoy water fun.

Atria Marina Place Recognized By National Assisted Living Nurses Assn.

Atria Marina Place, an Atria Senior Living Group community in North Quincy, received a Platinum Community award from the National Assisted Living Nurses Association (NALNA) for 100 percent quality compliance based on a Massachusetts state survey.

The award was handed out at NALNA's 2007 National Conference. Atria Senior Living Group had the most deficiency-free state surveys nationwide compared to the other senior assisted living groups who received recognition.

"We are honored to be recognized for delivering quality care to our residents, and will continue our ongoing efforts to make our communities and the care we provide even better," said Executive Director Maria Lastoria. "We invest in our people, our operations and our communities because we know the positive difference that makes in the everyday lives of our residents."

In the past three years, Atria has increased expenditures for its Quality Assurance program by 500 percent in order to assure quality care is provided at their communities. Significant standards at Atria communities include:

Requiring every Atria community to have licensed nurses in care management roles, even though some states don't require licensed nurses in communities at all.

Appointing an independent Chief Quality Officer who reports directly to the Board of Directors.

Designing a comprehensive quality assurance tool, with nearly 350 questions that cover 740 requirements and that is often more thorough than state surveys. The tool covers everything from resident apartments and services to medication administration and administrative compliance.

Conducting two unannounced, comprehensive three-day quality reviews per year at every community.

"Quality assurance for care is our priority," said Sandy Hicks, vice president of care at Atria Senior Living Group.

Koch Launches 'Getting Results' Feature On Web Site

Mayoral candidate Tom Koch has launched a new feature on his Web site entitled "Getting Results" to highlight what he called the positive effects of a campaign that listens to the concerns of residents and treats people respectfully.

"People are making their voices heard, and we are without question starting to see the ripple effects," Koch said. "It speaks to the kind of leadership we plan to bring to city hall-listening, responding, and always treating people with dignity and respect."

Koch's Web site, www.kochforquincy.com, points to the city's recent hiring of a traffic engineer after a vacancy of nearly two years. Just a few weeks after announcing his candidacy in January, Koch called on the current administration to do everything in its power to fill the job, and he has since made a series of proposals to address traffic problems around the city.

"We have a traffic engineer today because our community forced the issue, but this is only the first step toward cleaning up the traffic mess in our city," Koch said. "We recently proposed a fairly simple plan to improve traffic, and we will keep talking about it until it gets done."

Koch, who is holding regular meetings with residents on a wide range of issues, said he repeatedly hears that "people want leadership that responds to their concerns."

"That's what we're out there doing by pushing issues like these: Repairing that vital connection between city hall and our residents," Koch said. "Our taxpayers cope with annual property tax increases: They deserve to know that city hall is listening."

Koch pointed to a meeting he had with residents of Tobin Towers on Clay Street earlier this year in which residents discussed an emergency related to hot water in the building.

"By working together with the residents, we are able to get some movement on the issue from city hall," Koch said. "These are the kinds of things that should not require an election year to address, and they won't in our administration."

Candidates' Night In Houghs Neck

The Houghs Neck Community Council will host a mayoral candidates' night Tuesday, Aug. 21, at 7 p.m. in Thomas Aquinas Hall on Darrow Street.

Residents will have a opportunity to hear incumbent Mayor William Phelan and challenger Tom Koch and submit questions for them to answer.

D'Amico Faces More Jail time

More than two years after his release from federal prison where he served four months for extortion, former Ward 4 City Councillor Michael D'Amico is faced with more time behind bars.

The U. S. Court of Appeals last week vacated the sentence already served, ruling that District Court Judge Rya Zobel erred in ignoring the 31 to 44-month sentence recommended by the guidelines.

The District Court was directed to resentence D'Amico, who is now 32 and operating a restaurant in Kennebunkport, Maine.

D'Amico was the youngest City Councillor ever when he was elected at the age of 20 in 1995 and re-elected in 1997 and 1999.

He was indicted in 2002 and convicted in 2004 of taking $2,500 in cash from Paul Govostes, who sought his influence in approval of a $19 million highway project in front of his doughnut shop in West Quincy.

He served his sentence in federal prison in Lewisburg, Pa., but kept his appeal active in hopes of preserving a career in the law. Prosecutors filed a cross appeal to increase his sentence.

Papile Homestead Being Razed

(Cont'd From Page 4)

"It wasn't bad," says Jim. "We ate in shifts at two tables."

How did the kids get along?

"There were no problems, really. We looked after one another. It was sort of all-for-one and one-for-all."

Jim remembers his father as being patriotic and loving his adopted country and city.

He loved Quincy so much he gave it to Leo as his middle name. And Leo was proud to tell you what the 'Q' stood for.

"My father told us to go to school and learn to do our very best in whatever we decided to do in life and to be good citizens."

His mother stressed the importance of religion and lived it. She walked a mile or so to St. John's church in Quincy Center to attend daily Mass and receive Communion until her later years.

She even had a small, but ornate altar built for the home.

And Chick remembers his mother telling the children: "You learn English. How am I going to learn it, if you don't."

Raffael died in 1962 at age 76. Lucia in 1978 at age 90.

Their 56 years together started on a special romantic note of their own.

They had been neighbors in Torre dei Passeri, Italy. Raffael came to the U.S. at age 15. While living in Quincy in 1905 he sent Lucia a picture of himself.

She sent one of herself back to him. He looked at it and decided she was the one for him. He proposed by mail and bought her ship passage. They were married in 1906. He was 21 and she 17.

The city paid special tribute to the family in 2000, dedicating a bronze memorial plaque on a granite boulder in a mini-like park outside the now Point Webster Middle School just a few feet from the Papile homestead.

"It kind of made up for the city taking the land for the school gym," muses Jim.

Jim Sheets, mayor at the time, probably best summed up the Papile family's dedication to their city and country when he said at the dedication:

"The Papile family came to give-not to take. We are paying tribute to a family that is typical of the families that made America what it is today, and what this city is."

The old homestead will soon be gone.

But not all those years of memories.

Bank Of Canton Quincy Office Celebrates Launch Of Convenience Checking With Luau

Bank of Canton recently held a branch Luau at its Quincy location at 275 Quincy Ave. in celebration of the launch of its newest account, Convenience Checking.

Quincy residents came to the event to say 'aloha' to ATM fees. Highlights of the event included hula dance lessons, a world class hula performance and a hula hoop contest for children.

The winner of the hula hoop contest received a $50 American Express gift certificate and a chance to compete for a prize worth $500 at the Brockton ROX's "Bank of Canton Night" on May 25.

"The contest was a close call. Two of our contestants went on for more than 15 minutes," said Ken Anderson, assistant vice president and branch manager of Bank of Canton's Quincy Branch.

"We even had to increase the number of hula hoops per contestant to declare a winner. Everyone had a great time at the event. The children loved the hula hoop contest and everyone learned how to master the art of hula dance," Anderson added.

"We were excited to host such a fun event."

Keeping up with the Hawaiian theme, Bank of Canton is also giving away a trip for two to Hawaii. Customers with a Convenience Checking account will be able to use any of the 400,000 ATMs nationwide without fees from Bank of Canton. The Bank will also automatically refund the ATM fees other banks charge up to $15 per month.

For more information on Convenience Checking, branch luaus or the Aloha Sweepstakes, visit Bank of Canton at www.thebankofcanton.com or call 888-828-1690.

BANK OF CANTON Hula dancers congratulate Victor Chu of Quincy, the winner of the hula hoop contest, and his father, Peter N. Chu.

Quincy Fire Department

Candles & Flame

Sitting here this evening watching the news, I'm hearing about a fatal fire in another community apparently started by an unattended candle.

Having worked today, I discovered we had a fire this weekend in our own community that started by inappropriate candle use. Fortunately no lives were lost. Over these last eight to ten years, I'm witnessing more frequent candle fires prompting this article and review.

In our own City, a young child lit a candle on its own, causing a bedroom fire. It's an occurrence I've placed among the "children and matches" concern. Having listed our concerns about proper candle use in a previous article, a child's experimentation with one isn't something I've associated with candle fires.

This being my first exposure to the possibility, I want to share it here with you and alert you of that possibility. Let it be added to the caution list and safe candle use practices listed below:

- Stay in the room with burning candles; do not

- leave them unattended.
 - Burn candles on a non-combustible surface such as a ceramic saucer or plate.
 - Give a burning candle ample free space from combustibles and cluttered surfaces.
 - Use sturdy candleholders that won't tip.
 - Be sure to snuff out candles before falling asleep, going out, or leaving a room.
 - Teach family members proper safe candle use.
 - Keep lit candles away from children and pets.
- If I understand the circumstances surrounding the fatal fire in the other community, the candle causing this fire was used during an absence of electricity and light. Hearing this raised my concern over flame use within our homes created when household conveniences we've grown to depend on fail us.

It has become an automated age while most of us have little exposure to open flame in our daily lives. Consequently, it can be easy to forget the safeguards and prohibitions associated with its use. Too often an active, lit candle can be forgotten while unattended burning candles account for approximately 60% of all candle fires. That's probably what occurred in this instance.

In a power outage, it is safer to use flashlights and other light sources generated by batteries. While candles can be decorative and functional when used properly, if you must introduce open flame into your home, please do so with the utmost consideration and respect.

Please protect yourselves and your homes by using candles and open flame responsibly. Thank you!

South Shore Savings Presents 17 $500 Awards

Stephen Palmatier of Quincy High School was one of 17 South Shore graduating seniors awarded a 2007 South Shore Savings Bank Citizen Award.

For the past 15 years, South Shore Savings Bank has awarded $500 cash awards to South Shore residents who have demonstrated a commitment and concern for community, have worked to make their school a better place, and have displayed qualities of sincerity, responsibility and of being conscientious.

Eligible candidates are chosen from applicants in Braintree, East Bridgewater, Hanover, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth, Quincy, Stoughton and Weymouth.

South Shore's president John Boucher said of the graduates, "Throughout their high school years, they have proved themselves to be active and involved citizens of their school and communities. We are proud to recognize their achievements."

Also named as winners of the 2007 awards were Andrew Bridson, Hanover High School, Joshua Caldwell, Plymouth South High School, John Cole, Braintree High School, Kimberly Effner, Weymouth Evening High School, William Gardner of North

Weymouth, Boston College High School, Kyle Horton, East Bridgewater High School,

Ryan MacQueen, Weymouth Evening High School, Meghan Mahoney of Braintree, Notre Dame Academy; Joseph McHugh of Braintree, Archbishop Williams High School; Peter Merzbacher, Norwell High School; Kellie O'Hara, Plymouth North High School; Maura Sullivan of Weymouth, Fontbonne Academy, Connie Tang, Stoughton High School, Karen Torino of Hanover, South Shore Christian Academy.

Rural Lodge Sponsoring Children's Book Drive

The Rural Lodge Freemasons, AF&AM, of Quincy, is sponsoring a book drive for children's books for the Cradles to Crayons project.

Members of the Rural Lodge have placed large white book collection boxes at both the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center, and at Hannaford's Supermarket, 475 Hancock St., North Quincy.

"This is an excellent way for Quincy residents to recycle their undamaged children's books. You can rely on us to make sure they get to needy kids," said Dave McKenney, a local Mason.

Rob Shamitz, another member of Rural Lodge of Quincy, added, "We should all remember that this is a difficult time of year for too many of our Quincy families. Everyone can help us at this time by hunting out their used kids' books and dropping them off at the Main Library or at Hannaford's in North Quincy."

Cradles to Crayons is a Quincy-based charity that stocks children's needs, such as toys, baby clothes, books and warm clothing in warehouses in classified bins. The items are protected from the elements and, then, distributed to social workers and other frontline organizations for use as needed.

Orders are picked from the highly organized shelves and delivered to the social agencies to assist specific kids.

The Rural Lodge also conducts a clothing drive in the spring for the Cradles to Crayons project.

Scrapbooking Program At Crane Library

Local youngsters, age 8 and older, can learn the fundamentals of scrapbooking at a special program planned Tuesday, Aug. 21 at 7 p.m. at Thomas Crane Public Library, 391 Hancock St., North Quincy.

Participants should bring pictures from their summer adventures to create their memory page. Registration is required and space is limited. Interested persons should call 617-376-1320 to reserve a place.

Lauren McFarland RPI Graduate

Quincy's Lauren McFarland was awarded her Bachelor of Science degree from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at the spring commencement.

FOOT NOTES

by Joel Chariton, D.P.M.
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

BUNIONETTES

You may be aware that bunions are bony bumps that are often found on the inside of the foot near the big toe joint. Few people know, however, that there is another kind of bunion called a "bunionette" or a "Tailor's Bunion." These bunions occur on the outside of the foot near the little toe and are caused by the little toe pushing inward. Wearing tight, narrow dress shoes that do not allow the foot appropriate space can cause bunions and bunionettes. To prevent them, wear shoes that fit properly and have a wide toe box. When a bunionette is fairly new, you may obtain some relief by soaking your foot in warm water.

It is important that bunions and bunionettes be recognized early and evaluated by a podiatrist. We can then offer suggestions on controlling their cause so that symptoms do not arise or become more severe. Recommendations may include exercise, a change in footwear, orthotics, medication, and surgery. Let us do what we do best—diagnose and treat your particular foot problems with compassion, knowledge, and up-to-date techniques and medical equipment. Please call us for an appointment at 781-986-3668, QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

P.S.: Bunions are more common in women.

Phelan: Quincy Tax Advantage Three Times The State Average

Mayor William Phelan has cited a recent article in The Beacon, the Massachusetts Municipal Association's newsletter to support his defense of his tax policies.

The article highlighted the fact that three out of four communities in the Bay State are taxing their residents to within 98 per cent or higher of the community's levy capacity.

"As of 2007," said Phelan, "Quincy's excess levy capacity was close to 6 per cent, more than three times the statewide average. Furthermore, the study showed that more than two-thirds of the communities in Massachusetts were at least at 99 per cent of their levy limits."

"Excess levy capacity" is defined as the difference between the property tax levy limit under Proposition 2 1/2 as calculated by the state and the amount collected from the tax payers and used by the community.

"Excess capacity" develops when the city uses less than 100 per cent of the amount available under the levy limit.

"We have worked hard and we continue to work hard to protect the interests of our taxpayers," said Phelan.

"We have identified outside revenue sources, implemented new budgeting techniques and held the line on important budgetary matters such as the costs of employee benefits.

"Some decisions may not be popular but they are getting results and that is what I was elected by the taxpayers to do."

The article in The Beacon cited a number of reasons for a community's excess levy capacity, including "mainly sensitivity to the property tax burden on individuals and businesses, avoiding excess spending and the presence of a single high-value property."

It was noted that the total available excess levy capacity in Massachusetts is concentrated within a few communities.

"Cities and towns throughout Massachusetts are over-reliant on residential property taxes as a revenue source," said Phelan.

"We are doing our best to avoid that by working to build our commercial tax base in downtown Quincy, Crown Colony and at the Fore River Shipyard.

"We are working with state and federal officials to augment outside funding sources.

"We are working with our employees to reduce our unsustainable employee benefit costs.

"Our work on behalf of our taxpayers doesn't end with another positive report. Let's keep trying to do more."

Mayor's Garden Party Promotes Tourism

MAYOR WILLIAM PHELAN'S annual Garden Party was held recently on the grounds of historic Adams Mansion, home to four generations of the Adams family and summer White House of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams. Mayor Phelan is shown here with Marianne Peak, superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park, and his wife, Tracey. Proceeds from the event go to Discover Quincy to promote tourism.

Strict Control Sought Over Wind Farms

mit to construct a 400-foot wind tower in the old Fore River Shipyard.

"Four hundred feet is about the same height as the Goliath crane," said Raymondi. "We would be making that a permanent part of the Quincy Point skyline."

"I contacted (Building Inspector) Jay Duca and we found that the zoning ordinances were silent on wind power. I was concerned that he might be able to build it as a matter of right."

"We needed something to put together to slow down the process while we defined the public process."

Raymondi quickly dashed off the ordinance amendment and advertised the hearing, which, he said, halted possible issuance of the building permit.

The Ward 2 councillor said his next step will be to invite Jay Cashman to a public meeting at the Fore River Clubhouse to explain his wind farm plan.

"We want to inform the public about wind power so that the people can make a determination," he said. "and, in particular, we want to discuss the siting at the shipyard."

Raymondi said another concern is the effect the wind towers will have on Dan Quirk's plan for mixed residential and industrial use of most of the shipyard property. "We don't want to jeopardize that," he said.

Raymondi said Cashman owns several acres of the shipyard property that he purchased from the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA).

The Planning Board also will have to hold a public hearing on the amendment, probably in October.

Just because he'd like to see strict controls on siting doesn't mean Raymondi has anything against wind energy facilities.

"This is the wave of the future," he said. "We should be proactive on it. The residents of Quincy should be educated about it."

Bohan Liu Awarded Scholarship To National Youth Leadership Form

Bohan Liu of Quincy, a junior at Boston College High School is one of four BC High students who received a scholarship to the prestigious National Youth Leadership Forum in Medicine.

The National Youth Leadership Forum on Medicine introduces outstanding high school students to the world of medicine. This ten-day summer program pairs honor students with professionals from some of the nation's top medical centers and faculty from renowned institutions of learning.

The scholarship, valued at $3,000, is sponsored by Mass General Hospital. Paul Bartush, assistant director of volunteer, interpreter & ambassador services at Mass General Hospital, recently visited campus to present the four winners with stethoscopes — tools that they will soon use as they embark on their careers in the medical field.

Boston College High School is a Jesuit, Catholic, college-preparatory school for young men founded in 1863. The school enrolls approximately 1300 students from some 100 communities in eastern Massachusetts.

With close cooperation from many prestigious and technologically advanced hospitals, research facilities and medical schools, the National Youth Leadership Forum challenges students to learn about a broad range of topics, including educational requirements, career options, clinical practice, and complex ethical and legal issues facing the medical profession today. Students discuss global epidemics, cures for life-threatening diseases, life as a resident, medical specialties and primary care with current physicians and patients.

Each program culminates in a simulation that challenges students to consider a specific issue in public health and to present pertinent recommendations for achieving public awareness and concern for each issue.

Keenan Urges Phelan To Hasten Sea St. Purchase

City Councillor At Large John Keenan has urged the mayor to seize the opportunity to purchase the property at 271 Sea St., known as the Cobblestone Development, and preserve it as open space.

"There is funding available though the Community Preservation Act and the Community Preservation Committee has recommended the site for purchase by the city," he wrote in a letter to Mayor William Phelan.

"It's now time to take the next step towards acquiring the property before the opportunity slips away."

The Cobblestone site abuts Broadmeadows Marsh and Keenan suggested it would complement the Army Corps of Engineers marsh reclamation project as well as alleviate traffic problems that would come with development.

Negotiations are underway for the city to purchase the property, Keenan noted, but the owner of the site soon may have to commence work given financial considerations.

"The possibility of the city purchasing the property has existed for some time," Keenan said, "and back in February 2007 the owner advised the city that time was of the essence due to financial considerations. Six months have passed."

"As I did in my letter of Feb. 22, 2007, I again urge you to seize upon this opportunity to preserve open space, and to prevent the worsening of an already dangerous traffic situation."

Helping Your Home's Curb Appeal

(NAPS) — Americans spend some $200 billion on home remodeling a year, according to the National Association of Home

Builders. One way to feel confident that your share of that money is being well spent is to leave home—at least as far as the curb, anyway. Then look back at your property and try to see it as a prospective buyer would. A few things to look for include:

- Mold and mildew stains, which can make the exterior of your home appear dirty and unattractive.

- A properly paved walkway. To make a graceful entrance, it should be at least three feet wide and gently curved.

- Enough lighting to keep your home safe and show off its good looks when the sun goes down.

- Lovely landscaping. Trim bushes and keep the grass mowed.

- Outdoor furniture that's in good condition. Repair or repaint as necessary.

- A good exterior paint job.

To help homeowners preserve the overall ambience and functionality of their outdoor spaces, Behr developed a new kind of exterior coating designed to save both time and money. It doubles as paint and primer in one, to form a liquid safeguard that can preserve the exterior finish for years to come.

Behr Premium Plus Ultra Exterior Paint uses NanoGuard paint technology, an interlocking molecular structure that offers a denser, more durable paint film. When dry, the paint forms an extra-protective shell that resists damage from sunlight, moisture, stains and dirt. It offers an enhanced mildew-resistant finish and is simple to clean up with just soap and water. This innovative formula also helps to block out damaging UV rays by providing a tighter, more evenly dispersed paint coating.

A Homegrown Solution to Hard Water Spots

Q. What can I use to remove hard water spots from a double-pane window? The water spots came from the garden sprinkler. — Virginia B., via e-mail

A. "Hard" water is generally called such because of the amount of mineral deposits, especially calcium, it contains. It's common throughout the United States, as groundwater often runs through sections of the earth containing limestone, chalk or similar minerals. Magnesium, iron and other minerals are also typically present in hard water.

Well water — from which some sprinkler systems draw their water — can contain much higher levels of minerals than municipal water, which has reduced mineral content due to the treatment process. Because the most common issue with hard water is the buildup of mineral scale on surfaces over time, homeowners using well-water-fed sprinkler systems should check the sprinkler heads throughout the watering season to keep scale from clogging the nozzles.

Which leads us, sort of,

back to hard water spots on windows. These also can occur with nagging frequency and are difficult to clean off: mineral salts adhere to the glass quite easily. And depending on the mineral, store-bought window cleaners may not have any effect and can be counterproductive.

A homegrown solution that may work is to apply a thin coat of oil (lemon oil or even vegetable or olive oil) to the glass and let it sit for about an hour. The oil can soften the mineral scale and help lift it away from the glass. Then, make a thick paste of water and cornstarch (or baking soda) and dab on with a soft cloth or toothbrush, cleaning one section at a time in a circular motion.

Clean the entire window-pane with warm water and mild dish soap and check for remaining water spots; spot-clean with the paste and toothbrush and rinse. Once all the spots are gone, use an ammonia-based window cleaner to finish.

Four Bright Ideas For The Kitchen

(NAPS) — In homes that welcome friends, family and good conversation, kitchens have become the new gathering place. That's why the lighting in your kitchen should be as inviting as the rest of the house. These tips from the experts at Croft & Little, lighting retailer at www.croftandlittle.com, should help shed some light:

- Avoid a single source of illumination in the center of the room. It provides little in the way of adequate task, ambient or accent lighting.

- Track lighting is often used in kitchens and needs to be located much closer to the work surface, not positioned in the center of the room.

- Chandeliers have moved into the kitchen. Chandeliers add a sense of style, perfect for the kitchen that has become the center of entertaining.

- More kitchens are using natural materials or painted decorative finishes; it is therefore best to direct the light at the front of the cabinets to give reflective light to your work surfaces.

A Job Well Done

On Wednesday, Aug. 1, at approximately 2:25 a.m., Officers David Cooper, Mike King and Paul Foley were dispatched to 10 Winter St. on a report of an unwanted female trying to get into the apartment building.

Officer Cooper was the first to respond and was greeted by the caller, who was yelling from her balcony that the suspect was now banging on her apartment door. Officer Cooper ran up to the third floor apartment and after a brief chase, he was able to apprehend the female suspect, a 32-year-old Quincy resident, and place her under arrest for "Disturbing the Peace."

As she was being led away, she told Officers that she was trying to get into the caller's apartment because that is where her ex-boyfriend lives, but his mother does not like her, so she "snatched her out" to the Police. She said that her ex-boyfriend was in the apartment and he had outstanding warrants.

Officer King verified there was a warrant related to a past assault and battery with a dangerous weapon. At this time, the caller and her sister emerged from the apartment building and asked the Officers what happened to the suspect. Officer Cooper asked to speak to the ex-boyfriend to see if he wanted to press charges, not letting on that there was an outstanding warrant.

The caller said that she did not know where her son was, and adamantly denied that he was inside the apartment. When the caller and her sister returned to their apartment, Officer Foley waited until they went inside, then turned down his police radio and listened to their conversation.

Officer Foley was able to hear a young male voice inside and believed that it could be the suspect with warrants, so he cell-phoned Officer Cooper, telling him to notify Communications that "all units are clearing." While Officer Cooper did this, Officer Foley could hear the broadcast inside the apartment, indicating that the occupants were listening to the scanner on cable television. The officer believed that the warrant suspect most likely heard on the scanner that the officers were looking to arrest him.

Officer Foley hid outside the apartment door and minutes later, the door opened and out came the caller's sister and the warrant suspect. Officer Foley walked up behind him and handcuffed him.

The suspect's mother, who was standing in the apartment and heard the commotion, came out highly agitated and questioned the Officer's authority to make an arrest, adding that she would be filing a complaint against him. At that time, Officer Foley informed the mother, a 41-year-old Quincy resident, that he would be filing a criminal complaint against her for "Misleading a Police Officer", based on her intent on impeding the arrest of her son.

No complaint was filed against the officers, nor was there any basis to file a complaint. The criminals were simply outwitted by the Police!

Nice Work!

Arms That Look Good in Tank Top

Q. I would like to feel comfortable wearing sleeveless shirts, but my arms have NO muscle tone. What type of exercises can I do to tone the muscles of my arms with hopes of wearing a tank top by the end of summer?

A. Toned arm muscles are the desire of many exercisers when setting their fitness goals. The appearance of strong, lean and toned muscles can be achieved through a comprehensive exercise program that not only focuses on appearance but also stability, muscle balance and function.

The muscles most people want to tone are the triceps (back of the arm), biceps (front of the arm) and deltoids (shoulders). Each of these muscle groups must work properly for you to maximize function, strength and stability. Although your goal may be to tone your arms, an exercise program that targets the entire body will help you reach your goals.

As you probably know, you cannot spot train and target just the arms to produce results. Fortunately, we use our arms while working other muscle groups such as the chest and back, so although you are not focusing just on the arms in those exercises, they have to work in order for those exercises to be completed.

Great exercises for the arms include bicep curls, triceps extensions and shoulder raises. These exercises can be done with dumbbells, resistance bands, body weight or with exercise machines. Be patient when trying new exercises, and complete sets and repetitions that will allow you to progress as you get stronger.

Don't forget that exercises such as push-ups, pull-ups, chest press and rows also require the arm muscles to work, even though they are not isolated. Exercises for your lower body may not seem to have anything to do with your arms, but they can help lower your body fat and increase your overall lean muscle mass.

Give yourself several weeks to begin to see results, and maintain a consistent exercise regime. Try not to overtrain in trying to reach your goals, and allow your body time to recover between higher-intensity workouts.

Remember that nutrition and other positive lifestyle choices also are important in getting you in your sleeveless shirts in no time.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. The American Cancer Society Urges Americans to Adopt Healthy Eating Habits

Eat Your Way To Cancer Prevention

(Weston, MA) — Following a reported decline in cancer death for 2007-attributed to early detection and testing, and improvements in treatments—the American Cancer Society wants that decline to continue by encouraging Americans to adopt a healthy lifestyle that can help prevent cancer.

For the majority of people who do not smoke, the most important ways to reduce cancer risk include maintaining a healthy weight and eating well, and this year's Great American Eat Right Challenge is designed to help Americans do just that.

Taking place on Thursday, August 16 (today), this year's Challenge is designed to encourage Americans to 'Nourish' themselves by making healthy food choices that can help reduce their risk of cancer.

Poor nutrition is a risk factor for cancer, and approximately one-third of more than half a million deaths in the U.S. this year can be attributed to factors including poor diet. Being overweight increases one's risk for developing many cancers, including cancer of the breast among postmenopausal women, colon, esophagus and kidney. Unfortunately, statistics show that more than half the adult population in every state is overweight. In 2005, 56.1% of adults between the ages of 18 were clinically overweight in Massachusetts.

"The good news is that there are steps people can take each day to help reduce their risk of cancer. Many people don't think they have much control over their cancer risk, but we know that lifestyle changes can make a big difference," said Colleen Doyle, MS, RD, director of nutrition and physical activity for the American Cancer Society. "Not only can watching what you eat and drink make a difference, watching how much you eat and drink can help too."

According to the American Cancer Society's Guidelines on Nutrition and Physical Activity for Cancer Prevention, a healthy diet with an emphasis on plant sources is important. That means:

- Eating five or more servings of a variety of vegetables and fruits each day.
- Choosing whole grains in preference to processed (refined) grains.
- Limiting consumption of processed and red meats.

The Society's Great American Eat Right Challenge Web site, www.cancer.org/greatamericans, provides tips and tools to help people take steps toward better health through healthier diets and habits like portion control. In addition to information about how to fit more nutrient-packed fruits, vegetables and whole grains into each day, the site features a healthy eating quiz, calorie calculator, and healthy recipes. Visitors can also check their body mass index (BMI) to determine whether or not they are at a healthy weight, and can get some practical tips for achieving and maintaining a healthy weight.

Throughout the year, the Society will help people learn what they can do to maintain a healthy weight and reduce their cancer risk. People without online access can call the American Cancer Society's toll-free number at 1-800-ACS-2345 to receive information on nutrition and physical activity and the Great American Eat Right Challenge.

The Great American Eat Right Challenge is the 'Nourish' arm of the American Cancer Society's Great American Health Challenge: 'Check, Move, Nourish, Quit.' The Great American Health Challenge is a yearly initiative that encourages Americans to adopt healthy lifestyle behaviors to reduce their risk of cancer. The Great American Health Challenge also features the Great American Health Check each January and the Great American Smokeout each November.

More information on the Great American Health Challenge is available at www.cancer.org/greatamericans or by calling 1-800-ACS-2345.

The American Cancer Society is dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by saving lives, diminishing suffering and preventing cancer through research, education, advocacy and service. Founded in 1913 and with national headquarters in Atlanta, the Society has 13 regional Divisions and local offices in 3,400 communities, involving millions of volunteers across the United States.

One Important Keepsake As You Age: Your Teeth

(NAPS) — With each passing decade, it's easy to get nostalgic and remember the "good old days." Maybe it was when the kids still lived at home (or when the kids moved out), when the first grandchild arrived or when you still had all your teeth...

As the first wave of baby boomers begins to turn 60, the good news is the promise of a longer, fuller life than any other generation, with many boomers committed to maintaining optimal health. As part of this increased focus, experts want to ensure that good oral hygiene is not just a thing of the past.

Research has shown that there is a strong link between oral health and overall health. For baby boomers, this means maintaining proper care of their natural teeth, since one of the biggest detriments to oral health and potentially overall health is tooth loss. If a tooth becomes infected and is not treated with a root canal, it typically must be extracted.

Endodontists, the root canal specialist, can help. Root canals save more than 17 million teeth a year.

"I remember my parents needing dentures," says Teresa Cyrus of Park Ridge, Ill., who will turn 56 this year. "Instead, I've had two root canals to help preserve my natural teeth."

Untreated, infected teeth can lead to other oral complications, including gum disease. Several studies have demonstrated that gum or periodontal disease can lead to a variety of health complications, including cardiovascular disease and diabetes. A root canal removes the infected tissue inside the tooth and helps to reduce the risk of periodontal disease.

An additional study from the January 2007 Journal of the National Cancer Institute showed an increased risk of pancreatic cancer in individuals who had experienced tooth loss.

"Given the connection between oral health and overall health, taking care of their teeth should become just as important to baby boomers as eating well and regular exercise," says Dr. Shepard Goldstein, president of the American Association of Endodontists (AAE) and an endodontist in Framingham, Mass. "When a tooth is infected, a root canal is the best way to save the natural tooth function and avoiding health complications."

According to Dr. Goldstein, endodontists are prepared to help baby boomers achieve their best possible dental health. "Thanks to advances in dental care, most baby boomers will keep their natural teeth for life, unlike their parents, many of whom ended up wearing dentures. Maintaining your natural teeth is another vital step in achieving optimal overall health, and root canal procedures are essential for preserving natural teeth."

WE'VE GOT YOU COVERED!

The dental restorations known as "inlays" and "outlays" are usually applied to back teeth that have endured significant damage due to decay. The difference between them is that an inlay fits within a prepared cavity while an outlay covers the tooth's entire biting surface and most of the cusps in addition to fitting within the prepared cavity. This added coverage affords the tooth more protection of whatever little tooth structure remains. If an inlay is intended for a tooth that has undergone root canal therapy or a previous filling, the only edges will rest on the tooth's entire outer circumference to protect it from further fracture. Most inlays and outlays are made of an alloy of metals that ensures durability.

At the initial consultation the dentist will determine whether the tooth can be repaired using an inlay or outlay procedure or whether a more extensive treatment, such as a crown, is needed. Our family oriented practice encourages comprehensive complete care with emphasis on prevention through early detection. We'll be sure to review your oral and general health history and give you all the options available to you. Your dental health is our number one priority. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment for gentle dental care. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are currently accepting new patients. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Inlays and outlays can last for one or two decades, and longer.

Jonathan Sheehan Cycles For Very Worthy Cause

7th Grader Rides In Kids Pan-Mass Bicycle Challenge, Raises $1,605 For Jimmy Fund

By SEAN BRENNAN

Like most kids his age, Jonathan Sheehan enjoys the occasional bike ride.

But unlike most kids his age, Sheehan recently took a bike ride for a most worthy cause.

On June 24, Jonathan Sheehan took part in the Kids Pan-Mass Challenge Bike Ride in Hingham. The Kids PMC is an offshoot of the larger two-day Pan-Mass Challenge that took place two weekends ago. But both rides have the same mission—raising money for cancer research and treatment at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its Jimmy Fund. The Kids PMC offers a way for children (age 3-15) to become part of the PMC mission and actively work to help those in need of cancer treatment.

Jonathan, age 7, is a Quincy resident and soon-to-be a third grader at Merrymount Elementary School, and he raised money and rode in the Kids PMC for his grandfather, Russell who was diagnosed with cancer in the spring.

Sheehan started the 2.5-mile Crusader ride at Hingham High School. He followed a course that led him through Wampatuck State Park and back to the high school. By sending out letters to family and friends, Sheehan raised $1,605 for the Jimmy Fund.

"With the help of my mom and dad, I sent out a letter to my family and friends and asked them if they would donate money for the bike ride," Sheehan said shyly last month. "I decided to do the Kids PMC for my grandfather. It was a short race for me, but it was a long ride."

Over 550 bikers between the ages of 3 and 15 took part in the Kids Pan-Mass Challenge and in total the 550 bikers raised over $61,000 to contribute to Dana-Farber, 100% of which went directly to the Jimmy Fund.

"I love riding my bike and just decided that this was something I wanted to do," Sheehan added. "If enough people and kids do this, I saw that in the future the doctors will find a cure. It was hot, but there was enough lemonade and cookies to keep me going for the entire bike ride."

The Kids PMC was entertained by 98.5 Mix radio with music and activities for everyone involved, and the racers were cheered on by MC Channel 5's Kelley Tuthill, who grew up in Hingham, and is fighting breast cancer.

The creator of the Kids PMC, Billy Starr, told all kids how important they all were to the effort and that this event was just the beginning of what he hoped would be their life-long habit of volunteering and fundraising. Sheehan agreed, and said that he would definitely be riding again next year.

"I am planning on riding

8 were rotated through six field event stations coached by current high school athletes.

The program was held every Thursday at Cavanaugh Field in North Quincy. Graduates of this year's program were given a certificate and those with the most nights attended will receive warm-up jerseys, singlets and shorts, bags and water bottles at the Quincy Track Club's annual awards banquet to be held on October 4 at Lombardo's in Randolph.

ASHLEY MURPHY (age 7) and Alexandra George (age 6) enjoy pizza at Quincy Track Club's annual Track & Field University Awards night.

HIS GRANDFATHER, Russell, his little sister, Julianne, and his grandmother, Donna, congratulate Jonathan Sheehan after his 2.5-mile bike ride.

again next year. It was so much fun and it was for a good cause, which I liked."

His parents, Jeff and Janice, and his little sister, Julianne, age 4, joined Jonathan at the Kids PMC. His grandparents, Russell and Donna, were also in Hingham to cheer him on.

"My parents and grandparents and sister were all at the race cheering me on," Sheehan said. "It really helped me, especially at the half-way mark when I stopped for water. They were supporting me all the way."

At the finish line, all the riders finished under a bright balloon arch, cheered on by their families and all the volunteers. All 550 bikers received a medal, which they all proudly displayed the rest of the day. The after-party entertainment included Jenny the Juggler, a Hip-Hop dance troupe and a raffle.

"The day was a success beyond imagination," said Melissa Robin, co-chair of the Kids PMC. "Donations are still flowing in and it's not too late to contribute."

If you would like to donate to the Kids PMC and Dana-Farber's Jimmy Fund, go to kids.pmc.org/hingham.

A job well done, Jonathan.

Wollaston I Senior Babe Ruth Ends Year On High Note

The Wollaston I Senior Babe Ruth team (ages 16-19) finished its 2007 season on a high note. After starting the season at 0-7, the team won six out of its last nine games.

This summer's team was led offensively by team MVP Steve Matos (.465 batting average), Joe Griffin (.425 batting avg.) and Paul Doolan (.325 batting avg.). Strong starting pitching performances were turned in by Doolan, Eric Arighchert, Ricky Bjork and Matt Jaehing.

The team's core of 16-year olds played a huge part in the late season success of the team. This group included Danny Jackson (OF), Sean Naughton (OF), John Sullivan (SS) and Mike Sullivan (C). All four were starters in their first year on the team.

The remaining players on the roster included Mark Demellin, Dan O'Connell, James Mullin, Mike Wright, Paul Ouellette and 10th player Jonathan Glennon.

"A special 'attaboy' goes out to Zak Stiffler who cracked his wrist in the first game of the season, yet showed up for every game to help in any way possible," said team manager Steve Reardon. "The bad part of the season's end is that we lost two young men who we had the privilege of coaching and getting to know the last four years, Joe Griffin and Paul Doolan.

"We had a good year and every player showed up for every game for one reason, to play baseball. I would like to thank Coach Pete Delgado and a special thanks to John Naughton, Ross Stiffler and all the parents for their support."

Wollaston Morrisette Wins 16-Year Old Prep League Title

Wollaston Morrisette Senior Babe Ruth defeated Braintree Senior Babe Ruth two games to none to capture the 2007 Prep League Championship.

In the first game of the championship series, starting pitcher John Parry allowed just four hits and limited Braintree to only two runs in a 5-2 victory. Kevin Magoon finished the game with two RBI and John Sullivan had two hits to lead the offensive attack.

In Game Two, Wollaston scored four runs in the seventh inning to come from behind and win, 6-4. Alex Tragellis, Kevin Magoon, Dave Griffin and Rob Yee each knocked in a run in the seventh inning.

Yee pitched six strong innings, allowing three runs. Magoon came on in relief and earned the save.

Wollaston Morrisette advanced to the championship series by knocking off Wollaston Blue two games to one in a three game series.

Alex Tragellis' pitching paced Wollaston Morrisette in their two wins of the series. The team won Game One 13-4 and Game Three 12-1, with Tragellis earning the win in both games.

In the third and deciding Game 3, Dave Griffin and Greg Ouellette each hit grand slams to lead Wollaston Morrisette to the finals.

Tennis Tourney Applications Available

The Quincy Recreation Department announces applications for the 37th Annual City Tennis Tournament applications are available. The tournament is co-sponsored by Quincy Credit Union.

"This marks the 12th year that Quincy Credit Union has provided the financial backing to keep this traditional tournament a low cost activity for all ages and abilities of Quincy families," said Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation. "The generosity of the Quincy Credit Union to our citizens is to be commended."

The tournament is open to Quincy residents. There are 11 events that will crown a City Champion. A special division, now in its fifth year, conducts a championship for city employees regardless of their residency.

Deadline for applications is Sept. 7. Matches will start Sept. 13. All matches are played on the municipal courts at Russell Park behind Quincy High School. Weather permitting, the tournament is scheduled to end Sept. 23.

Entry fee is $15 for adults and $8 for youths under 16 years of age and entitles participants to enter as many events as they qualify. All participants receive a tournament T-shirt.

The events are Men's Singles, Men's 35 and over singles, Men's 50 and over singles, Men's Doubles, Women's Singles, Women's 35 and over singles, Women's Doubles, Mixed Doubles, Boys 16 and under singles and girls 16 and under singles.

There is also Men's Singles "B" event, which is conducted from a pool of players who are defeated in the Men's Singles first round. The City Employee event rounds out the tournament.

Applications can be obtained at the Quincy Recreation Department, Quincyrec.com, or in special boxes at the tennis court's entrance.

The Garden Bug

Teaching kids to garden

A small container or patch of ground is best. Use easy-to-grow seeds and plants, and label them using craft sticks. Avoid exposing youngsters to harmful chemicals; use soap or oil sprays to discourage pests. Make a garden journal together using photos, drawings or dried flowers.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A strong social whirl brings a new round of good times to fun-loving Rams and Ewes. Cupid is also busy aiming arrows at single Lambs hoping for a heart-to-heart encounter.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A romantic incident could take a more serious turn if the Divine Bovine considers meeting Cupid's challenge. Meanwhile, a professional opportunity is also about to turn up.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A bit of hardheaded realism could be just what the Twins need at this emotionally challenged time. Face the facts as they are, not as you want them to be. Good luck.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Many opportunities open up. But you need to be aware of their actual pros and cons. Check them all out and make your choice from those that offer more of what you seek.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A more stable situation begins, allowing you to feel more secure about making important decisions. Meanwhile, be sure to meet your project deadline so you can move on to other things.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Congratulations. A new personal relationship thrives as you learn how to make room in your busy life for this wonderfully warm and exciting emotional experience.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A new contact opens some doors. That's the good news. But there's a caution involved: Be sure you protect your rights to your work before showing it to anyone.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A former colleague might seek to resume a working partnership. Ask yourself if you need it. If yes, get more information. If no, respectfully decline the request.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Good times dominate your aspect. So why not have a party to celebrate a loved one's success? And do invite that special person you want to know better.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The shy side of the Sea Goat soon gives way to your more assertive self. This should help you when it comes time to speak up for yourself and your achievements.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new period of stability will help you deal with some recently reworked plans. Once you get your current task done, you can devote more time to personal matters.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Things are finally much more stable these days, so you can restart the process of meeting your well-planned goals with fewer chances of interruption or delay.

BORN THIS WEEK: You love being the brightest light wherever you are, and people love basking in your warmth and charm.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Throughout our lives failures come to all of us. Sometimes no matter how hard we try things will go wrong. We should all remember that whatever we may look like to the world - whether it be hopelessly inefficient or brilliantly successful - most of us know that accordingly to our own guideposts, we have failed at some time or another.

"He who hopes to avoid all failure and misfortune is trying to live in a fairyland; the wise man realistically accepts failures as a part of life and builds a philosophy to meet them and make the most of them. ... He learns from the scientist who said, 'At best, research is about 99% failure and 1% success and the 1% is the only that counts.'" - Wilfred A. Peterson.

To put it another way - Isn't it true we would feel a lot less sensitive about failure if we remembered it just doesn't matter, except as a guidepost for ourselves? Isn't it true that there is no such thing as utter failure to one who has done his best? ...

Dolan Funeral Services Renews Affiliation With Lofty Oaks

Dolan Funeral Services of Milton and Dorchester have renewed their affiliation with the Lofty Oaks Association, a New Hampshire organization dedicated to reforestation and conservation efforts in Massachusetts.

Firms in the association arrange to have a tree planted for each funeral service performed. The tree honors the deceased with a living memorial, while also renewing the forest life of Massachusetts.

After each service, family members and friends are informed that the staff of Dolan Funeral Services has arranged the memorial tree planting. After each tree is planted, the designated family member or friend receives a certificate suitable for framing or for the family's history records.

The memorial trees are planted in the spring and the fall as part of a larger program to restore the state's landscape.

Norfolk County Recruiting Volunteer Reading Tutors

Norfolk County's Retired and Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) is seeking volunteers to assist in elementary school child literacy programs.

Volunteers are being placed for the coming school year in participating elementary schools throughout Norfolk County.

"Reading tutors are a great help to children who are having difficulty with literacy skills," said Norfolk RSVP Director Brian Buckley. "The tutors assist the classroom teachers by working with students individually or in small groups. This extra help can significantly improve children's reading, and gives them confidence to deal with other subjects as well."

Norfolk RSVP is affiliated with the Federal Corporation for National and Community service, one of the nation's largest volunteer agencies, and helps recruit and place seniors and retired volunteers in community programs throughout Norfolk County.

Programs include reading tutors, emergency preparedness, food pantry volunteers, and other programs intended to meet identified community needs. Anyone 55 years or older can be a volunteer with Norfolk RSVP.

To become an RSVP volunteer or for more information, contact the Norfolk County RSVP office, telephone: 781-329-5728, e-mail: rsvp@norfolkcountyc.org.

Exhibit Forced To Close

Reward Offered For Return Of Stolen Quilts

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Quincy police are still investigating the theft last week of quilts from off the walls of the Thomas Crane main library, according to police Operations Manager Jim McGinley.

The quilts were among 37 hand-made quilts hung for an exhibit scheduled to open Thursday, Aug. 9, at Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

Eight quilts were stolen and two had been returned as of Tuesday afternoon. A thief taking a ninth quilt was stopped as she began stuffing it in her bag.

Later this week, police officials notified Pat Fay of Quilters Compass that they were reinterviewing a witness to the theft. The quilts on exhibit were chosen from quilted art works created by 20 of Fay's 500 students at her shop, 27 Cottage Ave., Quincy Square.

Both the police and Fay hope that public outrage and areward will spur the thief or thieves to return the small quilts. The largest is 40 inches by 40 inches, Fay said these are all wall hangings, not the large quilts.

"They're not sure when they were taken," Fay said this week, noting the theft could have occurred Wednesday evening or Thursday in the daytime.

Fay is offering a reward for the return of the quilts. The monetary value of the uninsured quilts is roughly $1200, but Fay said the actual value to their owners is priceless.

"They're heartbroken," said Fay of her students whose quilts were stolen. Fay had to announce the theft on Aug. 9 as people were arriving for the exhibit reception.

She had called all but one of the quilters whose work was stolen. Unfortunately, she said that she had to tell one woman about the theft as she arrived with her family at the reception.

Fay described one stolen quilt as a "beautiful landscape of the sea" which included seashells embedded into cloth. Another is made of a man's ties signifying special occasions. Two of the stolen quilts depicted patriotic themes.

"No hassles," Fay said, "We just want the quilts back." She described how quilters use sentimental items in creating their quilts which they often give for wedding, birthdays, anniversaries and other special occasions.

One of Fay's own works was stolen. Her quilt, like the others, can not be valued as her quilt was created with her late father's shirt and tie as a memorial. Now, it is gone.

Actually, Fay said, "There were nine taken." However, that thief was caught in the act. "A patron saw one putting one in her purse and said, 'That's not yours.' (The would-be thief) went flying out."

"We closed the show that night," Fay said, noting she was disappointed in security at the library.

"The library has some homeless people who go in and stay there all day," Fay said, adding "I'm so sorry. I should have asked more questions."

Asked about the theft and security issues, Library Director Ann McLaughlin said, "We are very, very distressed. We never had any art work stolen."

McLaughlin said that the current budget actually increased the library's security force by an additional half-time person.

In addition, she said that custodians are on duty and on watch during the daytime. "I think that the staff does challenge people."

As for homeless persons' visiting the library, McLaughlin said that patrons aren't interrogated as to their living arrangements.

McLaughlin pointed out that "It was a homeless person that went after the quilt that was stolen." That same woman was responsible for the return of the eighth quilt.

Fay, also, said that she has notified all the quilters' groups in the surrounding area to watch for the stolen items.

She said it is a very tight knit community and pointed to a map pinpointing the hometowns of hundreds of visitors to her shop.

Such visitors have come from every state and almost every continent to her Cottage Avenue shop because she said that's what quilters do, according to Fay.

As soon as they're in a different location, she said they look up quilters' shop so she has a massive network on the watch for her students' special quilts.

Beechwood Knoll Sewer Project Meeting Aug. 20

Mayor William Phelan and City Councillor Doug Gutro will co-host a public meeting Monday, Aug. 20 to discuss the upcoming sewer improvement project in the Beechwood Knoll neighborhood.

The meeting will be held at the Beechwood Knoll School at 7 p.m.

The City will replace the aging sewer lines under Estabrook Road, and under portions of Florence Street, Greene Street, Thornton Road, Simms Road, Langley Circle and Marlboro Street.

Personnel from the Department of Public Works will present the project, answer questions, and address any concerns that the public may have.

The work is slated to begin this fall. Repairs to the sewer pipes will continue through the fall and re-paving of the impacted areas should take place in the spring of 2008.

For more information, call the Public Works Department at (617) 376-1959.

Atlantic Center Cookout Aug. 23

The Atlantic Neighborhood Center will host its annual end-of-summer cookout Thursday, Aug. 23, at 12 noon at the Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, 15 Harvard St.

New Germantown Center Opens In Former St. Boniface Church

With a deft snip of her scissors, Executive Director Cathy Quigley cut the ribbon officially opening the new home of the Germantown Neighborhood Center Tuesday in the old St. Boniface Catholic Church.

The ribbon-cutting ceremony highlighted a unique collaboration between the city, the YMCA, the Germantown Neighborhood Council, Ward 1 City Councillor Leo Kelly and the South Shore Building Trades Council.

"The Center is a true neighborhood institution that would not have been possible without a community collaboration," said Mayor William Phelan.

"The wonderful new space provided within the former St. Boniface Church will enable the community center to serve more individuals and invigorate existing programming that includes a food pantry, summer camp, peer leading training, family literacy and many others."

A true barn-raising effort, the $1.3 million conversion project was paid for with CDBG funds, a grant from State Street Bank, funds from the YMCA and donated services from Sheskey Architects and members of the trade unions, as well as contributions from individuals.

Retirement Board Begins Siciliano Pension Review

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The Quincy Retirement Board Monday began reviewing the rape conviction of former city employee Anthony Siciliano to determine whether or not to revoke his $39,860 annual pension.

On July 30, Siciliano was convicted by a Norfolk Superior Court jury of three counts of statutory rape of a teenage boy and is currently serving a four to five year prison term. At this time, he is receiving his full pension.

The Board will determine if the crimes occurred in connection with Siciliano's official position with the city. If so, it could lead to revocation of his pension.

Siciliano, a 30-year employee of the city, was employed as General Foreman with the Department of Traffic and Parking and, also, headed the city's Emergency Management Agency. During his employment, he contributed some $69,000 to the pension fund.

He headed the city's Emergency Management Agency until Mayor William Phelan fired him in 2002. Last week, Phelan called for the Retirement Board to revoke Siciliano's pension.

"We're not here to retry the criminal case," the board's attorney Michael Sacco said in his opening remarks. "That issue is not before us."

Sacco said that the board must determine if there is a "link between his job and the crime.... It's up to the board to find the link."

Sacco said that revoking a pension is sometimes very clear when an individual is "stealing money out of the till at work. Those are the easy ones."

In other cases, Sacco said that the decision is more difficult.

"Not every crime results in revocation of pension," Siciliano's lawyer Francis Collins said after charging that his client's crime and conviction had "nothing to do with (his) being general foreman or General Director of Emergency Management." Collins chose to have an open hearing on behalf of his client.

"The board can not speculate" Collins said, noting that the times and actual dates of the alleged rape incidents are not part of the court record.

'Quincy Salutes Diversity' Festival Set For Sept. 9

Quincy will celebrate its diversity with its first "International Festival" Sunday, Sept. 9.

The event will take place on Hancock Street in Quincy Center from 12 noon to 5 p.m.

The festival is titled "Quincy Salutes Diversity" and will feature entertainment, crafts, and food from a wide variety of cultures that comprise Quincy's population. Hancock Street will be blocked off to traffic.

"Quincy celebrates its diverse population as a strength of our community," said Mayor William Phelan. "Every culture has something to offer all of us and this festival will be a great chance to learn about other cultures and celebrate each other's traditions, customs and cuisine."

The festival will feature fun for the entire family. There will be children's games, arts and crafts, entertainment, food and much more.

Presenters and sponsors are still being solicited for the event. If you would like to participate call Cam Nguyen in the Mayor's Office at (617) 376-1990.

Sponsors of the event thus far include United Commercial Bank and South Cove Community Health Center.

"This will be a great way to spend a Sunday afternoon with the family, walking through Quincy Center, enjoying the food, and the sights and sounds of such an interesting festival," Phelan said. "I strongly encourage people of every background to come and join us for this exciting celebration of our community."

Indian Casino Record Discussed At Library

The Indian conquest of Connecticut and their prospective invasion of Massachusetts with slot machines at the ready, will be reviewed Wednesday, Aug. 29, at 7:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Sean P. Murphy, a Boston Globe investigative reporter, will look back on the history of Indian gambling in "The Commonwealth's Big Gamble: Will Casinos Become a Reality in Massachusetts?"

Murphy will discuss the U.S. Supreme Court ruling that gave the Indians gambling rights, the history of the Wampanoag tribe as well as who reaps the benefits and the traffic and crime problems gambling brings.

WORK, Inc. Opens Capital Campaign For New Office

WORK, Inc., has begun a capital campaign with a goal of a million dollars to renovate the disabilities employment training agency's new headquarters at 195 Freeport St., Dorchester.

For the past 25 years WORK's programs and administrative offices have been housed in increasingly cramped facilities designed for 200 persons at 3 Arlington St., North Quincy.

The agency purchased in April the Dorchester site, which is three times as large as the North Quincy facility and well able to handle the more than 450 individuals that are served each year.

WORK anticipates reaching its million dollar capital campaign goal by September, 2008, with donations from individuals, corporations and foundations.

The total cost of the project is expected to be $13 million.

'Nebbie' McLellan Honored At Party

100 Roses From Secret Admirer On Her 100th Birthday

By LAURA GRIFFIN

It's not every day that a secret admirer sends 100 long stem roses to a lady.

Then, again, it's not every day that a lady celebrates her 100th birthday.

But, on Monday, Nesbit "Nebbie" McLellan did celebrate her first century at a party with cake and fruit and balloons and roses at Fenno House in Wollaston. Nebbie, as she is called, is a lifelong resident of Quincy.

"One of the residents bought her 100 roses," Activities Director Amanda Anis said of the vase of red, pink and yellow roses. Anis said that Nebbie's male friend decided to keep his name secret.

Some 50 to 60 relatives and friends sang "Happy Birthday" to Nebbie as the cake was cut and the party began and she was showered with cards, gifts, and $250 from fellow residents. She'll use that for shopping with her daughter Lillian Kreitman who also enjoyed the festivities, along with her grandson.

A GIFT OF 100 ROSES was sent to Nesbit "Nebbie" McLellan who celebrated her 100th birthday at Fenno House, Wollaston. Activities Director Amanda Anis holds the vase of multi-colored roses.

"It was beautiful. I never had anything like it before," Nebbie said three hours later as she described the afternoon. By that time, nearly 4:30 p.m., Nebbie was tired and hungry and ready to walk by herself back to her unit.

After her party, Nebbie had the roses placed in the hall of the fourth floor where she often sits and greets fellow residents. She wanted to share their beauty, said Anis.

"She goes shopping with her daughter, food, clothes," said Fenno House manager Ruth Marrocco. "She likes to go food shopping."

"She's our second 100 year old," Marrocco said, describing a former resident who celebrated the 100-year mark nearly a decade ago.

"She lives independently. She's the last person to complain," said Anis of the four foot eight inch Nebbie who gets around on the elevators and in the corridors on her own with her walker.

"She goes downstairs, checks the mailbox. She's amazing," said fellow resident Jean Cristiani who called Nebbie "unbelievable." Once in a while, Nebbie will knock on Cristiani's door and discuss the meals delivered.

"She's kind of a fixture in this building," said Rose O'Neill, another resident of Fenno House.

Right now, Nebbie's eyesight and hearing are lessening but her mind is sharp as a tack, said Anis who has been with Fenno House for three years.

Fenno House is owned by the Wollaston Lutheran Church Apartments, Inc.

The Next Council President?

With no preliminary election this fall for the first time in 67 years there hasn't been much action on the political front.

There's been a few grenades tossed from the opposing mayoral camps but nothing really explosive.

The preliminary election that was scheduled for Sept. 19 was called off because of a lack of players.

Not enough candidates for mayor, city council and school committee for a run-off. (Three needed for mayor, three for each ward council seat, seven for councillor at-large and seven for school committee.) (Only 19 candidates filed nomination papers.)

But things should start heating up as the Nov. 5 final election gets closer.

Meanwhile, there is a little movement in that other election the one for city council president that will be held in January when the 2008-2009 council is seated.

There is some early behind-the-scenes campaigning for the five votes needed to take over the gavel from Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro who cannot succeed himself as council president under council rules.

Three names being mentioned as "interested" candidates are Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis and Councillor at-large Mike McFarland. Could be others.

The council presidency has long been seen as the springboard to the mayor's office. And, next to the mayor, the president is considered the most powerful elected official under the city's Plan A charter.

He (she) presides over the council meetings, appoints the chairmen and members of the council committees and serves as acting mayor in the absence or illness of the mayor.

The springboard to the mayor's office? Sometimes. Not always. And sometimes it's a delayed spring.

Among council presidents who became mayor were Joseph Whiton, Charles Ross, Tom Burgin, Amelio Della Chiesa, James McIntyre, Joseph LaRaia, Arthur Tobin and James Sheets.

But of those, only two went directly from council president to His Honor: Whiton in 1917 and Tobin in 1977.

McIntyre and LaRaia lost mayoral bids running as council presidents.

McIntyre was defeated by incumbent Della Chiesa in 1959 but won in 1965 when Della Chiesa retired. The opponent he defeated was LaRaia who was council president at the time.

LaRaia came back to win the mayor's office in 1975, upsetting incumbent Walter Hannon by 483 votes in that famous recount.

But two years later, he lost to Tobin who was running as council president.

Family Field Day To Benefit Chris White Scholarship Fund

The family and friends of Chris White will host Whitey's Family Field Day Saturday, Sept. 8, from 1 to 7 p.m., rain or shine, at LaBrique Field on Sea Street, Houghs Neck.

All proceeds will benefit the Christopher White Memorial Scholarship Fund.

The event will feature a three-on-three basketball tournament with a cash prize awarded the top two teams. Entry fee is $75 per team and each player will receive aourney tank top.

Contact Dennis Joyce at 617-894-3541 or Tom Hawes at 857-939-8412 to

You don't have to be a council president first to reach the mayor's office. Hannon and Frank McCauley are examples.

So is Mayor William Phelan who not only was never council president but never served in the council from where most mayors come from.

He was a relatively political newcomer in his second year as a school committee member when he upset Sheets by 17 votes in 2001-the closest mayoral election in the city's history.

But the council presidency is still considered a big stepping stone to the mayor's office.

The new president, however, will be limited to two one-year terms. That limit was set by the council after Tobin served eight years as president.

It later was changed, allowing Peter Kolson to serve four years. It is now back to two years.

And, the next council president...

HURRICANE DEAN is roaring into history as one of the big ones.

In case you're interested, the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency has listed the names of other Atlantic hurricanes for this year:

Erin, Felix, Gabrielle, Humberto, Ingrid, Jerry, Karen, Lorenzo, Melissa, Noel, Olga, Pablo, Rebekah, Sabastien, Tanya, Van, Wendy.

Hope we never get to meet them.

MEMA, incidentally, notes that until 1953, hurricanes were referred to by the year or location, such as "The Hurricane of 1938," "The Galveston Hurricane of 1900" etc.

In 1953 the National Hurricane Center began using female names and in 1979 started alternating female and male names. (Nice of them to give men equal rights.)

But I still think female names are more appropriate when Mother Nature kicks up her heels.

ANYONE REMEMBER a peanut store in Quincy?

Walter Whidden of Elm Street sent a note to Tom Galvin whose "Scenes From Yesterday," as you know, is a popular Quincy Sun feature.

Tom doesn't remember such a store and passed the note on to us to see if we could find a reader who might remember the store.

Whidden's note reads:

"I grew up in Mattapan. Occasionally, my father would take us to Nantasket Beach and he would drive through Quincy Square. This was in the 40s.

"I remember him stopping at a store that sold peanuts. The walls of the store were lined with peanuts.

"When I tell local people about this, no one seems to remember this store. Did I dream this? Any information you might have on this would be greatly appreciated."

Anyone remember?

PERSONAL NOTE: Thanks to long-time reader John Rogers of Elliot Ave. for those kind words. Readers like you make it all worthwhile.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1925 real photo postcard view of Wollaston Beach from near the end of Rice Road looking north. Flooding along here during storms led to the first seawall being built the length of the beach the following year. In the distant right is the Wollaston Yacht Club. In front of it is one of the floats that the Metropolitan Commission put along the beach in the summer for swimming. The woman who sent this postcard came down to Wollaston from Albany, N.Y., perhaps in a Model T parked on the left. With the recent upgrading of the streetscape along here this scene is quite different today. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Responds To Koch On Mayor's Tax Survey

I would like to submit the following letter to the editor to set the record straight on the Mayor's Tax Survey. All of the statistics that I quote in this letter come from the Department of Revenue's Municipal Data Bank.

I would like to respond to Mr. Koch's concerns (Sun issue Aug. 16) over the Mayor's Tax Survey. I take exception to Mr. Koch's statement that "we need a leader that listens and responds to the concerns of rising taxes, not orders a political appointee to write a misleading study."

I have spent numerous hours as the former Vice President and Research Director of the Quincy Taxpayers fighting for the taxpayers of Quincy. I have in the past and I continue to send letters to the Mayor and the City Council on financial matters, which I believe could be beneficial to the City and the taxpayers. I never discussed writing any report for the Mayor that would lead to my appointment on the Quincy Retirement Board or any other position. In fact, I applied for the Treasurer/Collector position in Quincy and did not get the position.

Tom Koch is quoted as saying, "We need to be straight with the residents about taxes." The Department of Revenue documents these increases. The increases for Fiscal Year 2005 were negative .05%, the Fiscal Year 2006 increase was 1.26%, and the Fiscal Year 2007 was 2.63%. These numbers stand on their own.

The City of Quincy has had a well-documented financial turnaround under Mayor Phelan. In Fiscal Year 2007, the City's Free Cash was $5,694,245. A turnaround of over ten (10) million dollars. This money can and is used to reduce the City's tax rate.

In Fiscal Year 2003, the City of Quincy's Stabilization Fund was $2,133,016. These funds can be used for capital projects such as road construction, building repairs, and equipment purchases. In Fiscal Year 2007 the City has $10,109,795 in the Stabilization Fund. This is an increase of approximately $8 million.

Quincy's Fiscal Year 2007 excess levy capacity is $8,696,104. This is the third (3rd) highest amount in the state. These are taxes that could have been levied against the taxpayers but were not because of prudent financial practices. Also, the City has received two (2) bond upgrades from National Rating Agencies. This is not about spin, this is about Fiscal reality for the taxpayers of the City of Quincy.

Quincy Athletes Need A Track - Sooner The Better

Recently, Judith Krimski voiced her displeasure with the proposed site of Quincy's new track and has urged the citizens of Quincy to sign a petition opposing the Pageant Field location.

Ms. Krimski incorrectly stated that once the track is built, the public would not have the same access to Pageant Field as it has today. In actuality, the field will continue to be used by youth football and youth soccer. Pageant Field will still be available to the public for cookouts, outings and dog walking, and concerts and other productions will continue in the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater.

This beautiful open space will be maintained; the area will not be fenced with chain-link fencing. It will not be gated. There will be no bleachers or other permanent seating will be erected to mar the view, and any trees, which must be removed, will be replaced.

The plan as outlined and approved calls for the rebuilding of the boathouse which burned down years ago, not its removal or relocation. Additionally, the garages which are currently housing trucks and other equipment will be removed, which actually adds more open space, and a new senior center and youth center will be built on the site of the current Park and Recreation building.

I respectfully request that the citizens of Quincy not sign Ms. Krimski's petition. Quincy's athletes need a track, and the sooner it is built the better.

Fire Dept. To Lose 1 Engine, 3 Men Due To Revenue Cuts

By FRANK McCAULEY

Because of budget restrictions brought about by a $3.4 million cut in state local aid, the city's fire department will lose an engine and its three-man compliment Sept. 1.

Fire Chief Paul O'Connell told councillors of the reduction during a Public Safety Committee meeting. The chief, struggling financially because of a sharp cut in overtime spending, said the city would lose Engine 6 in Houghs Neck unless the city receives $150,000 in the next two weeks.

After listening to Chief O'Connell's presentation, which traced the recent history of the department's budget, manning and operations, several councillors suggested ways to generate revenue for the department.

DECRISTOFARO HITS TOBACCO COMPANY MEETING

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro said he is very unhappy about a scheduled meeting by the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company of Winston-Salem, NC, regarding smokers' rights.

The meeting was an attempt to "try to manufacture the appearance of a grass-roots uprising against laws and policies that restrict public smoking," said Edward Sweda, Jr., an attorney for the Group Against Smoking Pollution of Massachusetts.

DeCristofaro said with the cancer rate in Quincy as high as it is, it does not seem prudent to encourage people to continue a habit that is detrimental to their health.

QUINCY-ISM

Eileen Cohen, owner of the Sweets and Things Shop on Hancock St., Quincy Center, was elected executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association. Great Cuts, 1505 Hancock St., was advertising "A Great Haircut" with $2 off the regular $8 price, when you come in with your hair already washed. City Clerk John Gillis announced that the final date to register for the Tuesday, Sept. 12 preliminary city election will be Wednesday, Aug. 23, from 8:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. at City Hall. Three Houghs Neck students were awarded scholarships by the Houghs Neck Congregational Church. They are Jason Mackay, 52 Hooper St., Elise Last, 1184 Sea St., and Charles "Chuck" Hughes, 23 Shennan St. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Morgan, she the former Elizabeth Livingston, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary at a party attended by 100 family and friends at the Houghs Neck Legion Post. The Quincy High School class of 1937 was planning their 52nd annual class reunion, to be held Sept. 22, at the Sheraton Tara Hotel in Braintree. Russ Johnson was chairman of the seven-member committee. Sheriff Clifford H. Marshall announced that two high school students from Quincy have been awarded the John A. Caporale, Sr. Memorial Scholarships. The recipients were Brendan J. Burr, a graduate of Thayer Academy, and Robert D. Roche, a graduate of Boston College High School. Thomas J. Feenan was installed as president of the Quincy Rotary Club during ceremonies at the Quincy Neighborhood Club. He succeeded Robert Guarnieri. Charlie's Mini-Market, 247 Atlantic St., North Quincy, was offering "Matilda Bay Wine Coolers," 4-packs for $3.49 and 24-packs, $17.95. The Quincy Lodge of Elks held its annual cruise and cookout for hospitalized veterans from the Jamaica Plain V.A. Hospital. The cruise was aboard the ship "Irene," skippered by Capt. Dick Sutherland. The Sutherland family has provided the boat cruise for 25 years. Heather Roche of Quincy, was a first prize winner in the 11th annual Superkids Mini Olympics held YMC's locations in Quincy, Weymouth and Milton. "Being Too Good a Neighbor" was the topic of a sermon by Rev. J. William Arnold, senior minister at the Bethany Congregational Church. Miriam Coombs, deaconess at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, was scheduled to be the guest speaker at the Sunday, Aug. 27, 9:30 a.m. worship service. Ed Flavin of Quincy, a freshman outfielder at Bentley College, won a varsity letter at the college. Flavin led the Falcons in hitting with a .354 average. The annual Dick Koch Memorial Muscular Dystrophy Benefit Softball Doubleheader raised over $1,600 for M.D.A. The Quincy Police defeated the Quincy Fire 21-4, while the City Officials overcame the News Media 21-15. The doubleheader was played at Adams Field and made Jerry's Kids the big winners. Army Sgt. 1st Class Richard S. Allison, son of Leonard Allison of Quincy, arrived for duty in West Berlin. A 1967 graduate of Quincy High School, Allison is a platoon sergeant with the 502nd Infantry.

Placing Track At Pageant Field Makes Sense

As the principle spokesman for the track community, I would like to explain why it makes sense placing a track at Pageant Field.

I have coached track and cross-country at the youth, high school and college level in Quincy since I was 17-years old (I'm 51, now). I am on the Executive Board of the Massachusetts Track Coaches Association and the MIAA. I also teach environmental science at Quincy High School.

Although some are opposed to a track at Pageant Field, I first have to explain up front that the track community here in Quincy numbers close to 2,000, including children in the Quincy Track Club (550), the middle school track program (450), the Special Olympians (100), the Senior Olympians (50), the high school student body (130) and immeasurable road racers, joggers and other adult fitness enthusiasts.

I thought previous articles in the media fully explained what the facility would look like, and how it was being funded, but apparently some have not been brought up to speed. There will be no fence around this track. No permanent structures like bleachers. It is being built with respect for the green areas around it. No jogging/walking removed. No dog walkers turned away.

Yes, we will have to cut down some trees, but any other site proposed would require cutting down even more, or involve filling in wetlands.

It is being funded by the $1 million line item originally planned for a track at the new Quincy High School. As Pageant Field is not on the campus of this school, it was transferred to the Park Department by a vote of the City Council.

This location is central to many of the people who would be using it. Central Middle School alone has over 200 kids on their track team and the high school programs total 130 student-athletes. Instead of overburdening our transportation system and polluting the environment, a big number of kids suddenly can walk to practice! This saves the city money and creates a whole lot less greenhouse gas emissions which school busses are known for. This facility would be centrally (pardon the pun) located to the betterment of all.

I know some folks hear-ken to the lazy days of passive recreation and joyous outings at Pageant Field. I don't see those ending. Frankly, as a nation, I think we're passive enough. Heck, we're the fattest nation on earth! It's time we did more to get kids and adults moving. A field with a track doesn't look all that much different than one without.

The artist's conception was tastefully done and personally I feel it improves what Pageant Field has to offer for all ages. The infield will still be used for soccer, lacrosse and football, and the outskirts for other recreational activities. When the road ringing the field was up there a couple of years ago, we still had all the activities we have there now.

The Park Board, the City Council, the Adams family, Mayor Phelan, city-wide Parents Board, School Superintendent, Athletic Director, principles of both high schools, and other school officials, all embraced this plan and it's unarguably the most economical and environmentally sound site of all originally proposed.

I presented Pageant Field to the Mayor over two years ago as the best possible place for a track commensurate with all our other sporting venues and was warmly received. It wasn't thrust upon the track community, as some would have you believe-quite the opposite. It just made more sense to build a track in the most central location, costing taxpayers the least and doing the least damage to the environment.

How can anyone argue with that?

Koch Calls Sterling Elimination 'Unacceptable Casualty'

Mayoral candidate Tom Koch today called the recent elimination of Sterling Middle School from the list of potential state-funded school renovation projects "another unacceptable casualty" of the current administration's school building program.

The state School Building Authority told local officials across the state that they must select only one major project to be considered for state reconstruction money, forcing the school committee to choose between picking either Central Middle School or Sterling Middle School.

The committee voted last week to select Central Middle School, which Koch said would have been guaranteed state funding several years ago if not for a series of critical mistakes by the administration.

"The school committee simply should never have been put in this position," Koch said. "If we had simply listened to state officials, stopped picking fights at every turn, and filed the correct paperwork, Central Middle School would already be guaranteed state money and we could be working on Sterling right now."

Koch said providing adequate and well-maintained learning spaces for Quincy's children is the mayor's most important role in education, adding his administration plans a complete overhaul of how the city is dealing with school buildings on both major projects and minor repairs.

Koch said the current administration has spent so much time and money on plans for a new Quincy High School, conditions at other schools are now in serious need of attention.

"We need leadership on this issue. We need oversight, and we need accountability not just on the major projects but in so many of other schools that are suffering today because we are bogged down with the high school project," Koch said.

"Too many school committee members, city councilors and other officials have worked too hard on these issues to allow the lack of leadership and communication from city hall to damage their work. We must do something."

Koch said he talks regularly about the new Quincy High School project and the effects it will have on local taxpayers. Just a few years ago, the project was expected to cost local taxpayers $8 million with the state paying the rest, Koch said.

Today, he said, that number is $54 million, a difference of $46 million that will be paid entirely by Quincy taxpayers. During the same time period, the city lost the promise of 90 percent state reimbursement for Central Middle School because it failed to file an application on time, Koch said.

"Now we don't know how much the state is going to pay for Central, but it's not going to be anything close to 90 percent," Koch said. "This is completely unacceptable, and a clear sign of why we need new leadership at city hall."

Bethany Church Observes 175th Anniversary Oct. 7

By JEAN ANN PHINNEY

Bethany Congregational Church, United Church of Christ, is celebrating its 175th anniversary this year.

Gathered in 1832, Bethany has had three homes. The first was at the corner of Hancock Street and Revere Road. The second church was at the site which became the Granite Trust Company, now Bank of America, in Quincy Square.

In 1927, the cornerstone of the present church was laid at the corner of Coddington and Spear Streets. Bethany's tall tower with the gargoyles is a Quincy landmark.

The celebration will be Sunday, Oct. 7, beginning with a special worship service at 10 a.m. A time of fellowship in the Allen Parlor will follow. Sunday dinner (by reservation) will be served in the Bohlken Social Hall at noon.

Following dinner, at 1:30 p.m. there will be an organ concert in the sanctuary by Peter Krasinski, a lifelong Bethany member and well-known musician.

During the day there will be special added events including the burial of a 2007 time capsule prepared by the youth group of Bethany.

An obelisk of Quincy granite will be dedicated to the past, present and future of Bethany. The eras of the three churches will be noted on three sides of the obelisk. The fourth side will be a look to the future.

Bethany Church invites anyone who has pictures or memorabilia of Bethany through the years to loan them for the occasion.

The public is invited to all events of the day. Those interested in attending the dinner are asked to call Bethany Church at 617-479-7300 for details and reservations.

Jewish Literature, Culture Explored In Library Series

Discussions around the theme "Neighbors: The World Next Door" will start with the first of a five-part series exploring Jewish literature and culture Monday, Sept. 17, at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

The series, called "Let's Talk About It: Jewish Literature — Identity and Imagination," will consider contemporary and classic books related to the theme. Attendance is free.

The first session will explore the novel "A Journey to the End of the Millennium" by Israeli author A. B. Yehoshua, the story of a voyage through Muslim Spain that becomes a personal quest in the year 999.

Other books will be discussed monthly on the following schedule:

Oct. 15 - "Red Calvary," by Isaac Babel.

Nov. 19 - "Neighbors," by Jan Gross.

Dec. 17 - "The Assistant," by Bernard Malamud.

Jan. 14 - "Mona in the Promised Land," by Gish Jen.

The discussions will be led by Dr. Jeslyn Medoff, adjunct professor of English Language & Literature at UMass-Boston.

For more information, or to register for some or all of the sessions, call 617-376-1305 or visit letstalkseries@gmail.com. Copies of each book will be available for all registered participants.

The Let's Talk About It series was developed by the American Library Association and Nextbook with local support provided by Eastern Nazarene College.

QUINCY DISTRICT COURT Judge Diane Moriarity and Presiding Justice Mark Coven at Quincy Drug Court graduation. Quincy Sun Photos/Laura Griffin

NORFOLK COUNTY SHERIFF Michael Bellotti congratulates Officer Kevin Riley who accepted a Certificate of Appreciation on behalf of the Transportation Department of the Norfolk County House of Correction.

A DRUG ABUSE EPIDEMIC is sweeping the country, according to Dr. Robert Brown, Program Director, CCS, and Advanced Relapse Prevention Specialist, who is shown with Carol Queene, court liaison for Quincy District Court's Drug Court.

A Different Kind Of Graduation

21 Candidates Earn Diplomas From Quincy Drug Court Program

By LAURA GRIFFIN

In many ways, the Drug Court graduation ceremony at Quincy District court and the party after mirrored every recent graduation.

Flash bulbs flickered and babies cried. There was standing room only for late arrivals after the first round of relatives and friends squeezed into wooden benches. The audience of some 150 people listened attentively to the graduate's name, then applauded and cheered.

A little toad head called out to one of the graduates as he headed for the microphone. "Daddy! Daddy! That's my daddy!"

Moms, dads, sisters, brothers, husbands, wives, and friends hugged their graduates. Then, after the formalities, there were sheet cakes and fruit plates and homemade brownies and cookies and that feeling of accomplishment and pride.

But this graduation was very different. This graduation was in a courtroom, the party in an empty jury room on the second floor of Quincy District Court.

Each of the graduates, ages 24 to 55 years old, is a substance abuser who successfully completed an intensive 15-month substance abuse program administered by Quincy Drug Court in 2007.

They are 21 of America's 22.5 million drug and alcohol abusers, according to figures provided by the federal government's Health Services Administration.

For some of the graduates, qualifying for commencement was a matter of life or death as one of this year's 21 graduates told the audience.

A 24-year cocaine addict, the man had a "Last Chance" stamp on his record. His last chance for life was to break his addiction.

Otherwise, he said, "I'm either going to be dead, wish I were dead, or be in jail for life."

I just hope I continue the rest of my life, clean and sober," he concluded.

The Master of Ceremonies was Probation Officer

Jo Rothman who had served as the graduates' probation officer throughout the program.

Judge Mark S. Coven, presiding justice of Quincy District Court, opened the session. In the past, Judge Coven had sentenced many of the graduates to jail. He referred them to Drug Court headed by Judge Diane Moriarity.

Judge Moriarity and court liaison Carol Queene and Ellen Quinn, clerk, then screen the applicants and keep track of their progress every day for the 15 months.

Each time they slipped, Judge Moriarity sent them back to jail and they started the 15-month program all over again.

Yet, over and over again, the graduates thanked Judge Coven, Judge Moriarity, Rothman, Quinn and Queene for their support, for their no-nonsense approach, and for the chance for the graduation day.

They also thanked Dr. Robert Brown, "Dr. Bob," who conducts the weekly sessions in the Relapse Prevention Program.

Each graduate had been drug and alcohol free for over a year and said they'd reclaimed their lives or been given a life they never had.

"Since I've been a teenager, my life's been a mess," said one, adding, "Thank you, Drug Court."

During the program, participants had been tested and re-tested time after time; their lives and employment had been scrutinized and reviewed. They'd avoided other Drug Court members, they'd attended meeting after meeting after meeting and regular treatment programs, such as anger management. They got jobs and got through.

Some applicants start the program, then quit and choose jail time. Queene said, "It's easier to do jail than to do the drug program."

Some graduates spoke of the joy of their new lives, free of drugs or alcohol.

A young man in his 20's said, "Today, I can be a father to my brand-new daughter back there." He pointed across the room where a woman held an infant wrapped in a blanket with just a shock of black hair spilling out.

And a young woman told the audience that, because of the program, she is now married and had her first child, "I now have a healthy drug-free baby boy."

One woman who'd been in and out of jail for 21 years said a Drug Court referral "literally saved my life." She then spoke of her hero, her grandmother. "She died knowing I was clean."

Some graduates are going to school, some have jobs in alcohol and drug rehabilitation programs.

"I hope someday I can make an impact on another addict," said one woman who is now pursuing her college degree.

Judge Moriarity presented the diplomas and congratulated the graduates who composed the largest of the past four graduating classes from

Quincy's program. The program began in 2001.

According to Queene, 14 graduates were able to attend the ceremony while other graduates were working and couldn't get time off. Several of the 21 completed the program earlier in the year and have moved.

Most of these graduates have been in and out of court many times for a variety of offenses, according to Queene who believes 80% to 85% of all the court's criminal cases can be traced to drug or alcohol abuse.

"(If the criminal charge) might say 'Breaking and Entering' or 'Larceny by Check.' The charge does not have the word, drug or alcohol, in it but it is," said Queene.

The graduates have had mug shots and warrants issued in their names and they'd been arrested by police officers reporting to same police chiefs who attended their graduation.

Keynote speaker of the day was Judge Robert Moriarity of South Boston District Court. Judge Ziemian founded the first Drug Court in Massachusetts 12 years ago after observing a successful program in Florida.

During his speech, Judge Ziemian acknowledged that the important work with substance abusers can be emotionally draining for those working on the front lines. He encouraged court personnel to keep a sense of humor.

Queene who has worked at Quincy District Court for 23 years has been involved with the Drug Court since its inception. She agreed with Judge Ziemian that court workers can get tapped out from the ups and downs of the work.

"This is one of the good days," said Queene who said reports from successful graduates from previous sessions also boost their morale, especially after a participant has slipped.

Massachusetts Supreme Court Chief Justice Margaret Marshall sent a letter of congratulations to the graduates, praising the program. "We all lose family and friends to substance abuse."

As Judge Moriarity presented each diploma, she gave a thumbnail sketch of each graduate and his/her history in the program. Some succeeded on their first try; some slipped and had to return to jail and start all over again.

"Sometimes, you don't get it the first time," Judge Moriarity said, adding that, for those who slip, "I lock them up. I lock them up. I lock them up."

"We have a lot of people who have trouble following the rules," said Moriarity. "They've never had to follow the rules. My goal isn't to lock them up. My goal is to succeed."

"It's tough, it's fair, it's worth it," said one graduate who described himself, previously, as "in denial, bitter, and with a lot of anger inside." This man had already had over a decade of sobriety.

At the reception, Dr. Brown said, "If it weren't for Drug Court, half of these people would be dead or in prison."

Brown, known as Dr. Bob, is an independent specialist who conducts the Relapse Prevention Programs in Quincy, South Boston and Cambridge courts. He has been in the field for 34 years and said there have been many changes, particularly the surge in drug addiction.

"They're getting younger. There are twice as many women as men. This is a disease, a family disease, and it's an epidemic but I don't see any headlines. There are our sons and daughters and nobody's paying attention."

According to a recent survey by a federal agency, the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, at least 22 million Americans suffer from alcohol or drug abuse.

Special awards at the ceremony honored the members of the Transportation Department of the Norfolk County House of Correction and Quincy Court officers for their extra help in the program's success. Kevin Riley accepted on behalf of the transportation staff and Peter Cordeiro on behalf of the Quincy court officers.

Also participating in the graduation ceremony were Mayor William Phelan, Quincy Court Clerk Magistrate Arthur Tobin and Assistant District Court Clerk Robert Bloom.

(NOTE: In order to protect the privacy of the program's participants, we have not identified any individual in this report.)

Retirement Board Begins Siciliano Pension Review

(Cont'd From Page 1)

"You can't go beyond that," Collins said, adding that "there just isn't detail (in the court record)."

In addition, Collins claimed that Siciliano knew the family of the victim prior to the boy's involvement with the city's emergency management program (CERT).

Board members and attorneys agreed that both alleged victims, now in their 20's, would remain anonymous. The claimed molestation incidents occurred in the mid-1990's. Siciliano was cleared of charges in connection with the second youth.

Collins also challenged the hearing procedures, charging that the board failed to give adequate notice of the hearing date, that Siciliano's conviction is currently being appealed and is not final, and that the board does not have a full transcript of the trial testimony.

The initial process could take as long as six months, according to Chairman George McCray who said that the Board is not going to rush its decision.

McCray noted that the previous case involving pension revocation has taken five years and is still in the court system. In that instance, the board revoked the pension of Plumbing Inspector Ralph Maher who was convicted of breaking into the Personnel office of City Hall.

"This is just step one," McCray said, adding that "due process will be observed. We don't do things quickly. We don't do things lightly."

Saccosaid that he expects to prepare recommendations for the board for their next meeting.

In addition to McCray, retirement board members include Richard Crespi, Roger Perfetti, Robert Haley and City Auditor Richard Fitzpatrick.

A Job Well Done

On Saturday, Aug. 4, at approximately 2:20 a.m., Officers Mark Smith, Joe Nabstedt and Robert Sweetland were dispatched to Taffrail Road on a report of a breaking and entering. While enroute, the officers learned that a female woke up to find an unknown man with a flashlight in her bedroom. When the victim turned a light on, the suspect fled the apartment.

LT. DAN MINTON

As Officer Smith approached the area, he spotted a male between buildings who matched the description of the suspect and was within 300 yards of the crime scene. Officer Smith stopped the suspect and noted that the suspect was dripping with sweat and appeared nervous. When asked what he was doing, the suspect said he was coming from his cousin's house and was on his way home to do dishes for his mother.

Officer Sweetland arrived and the Officers informed the suspect as to why he was being stopped and why he was considered a suspect, then asked what was in the suspect's backpack. He said it was a laptop computer and gave permission for the Officers to check the pack. The officers first found an eight-inch blade - kitchen knife.

For their own safety, they immediately searched the suspect. Officer Sweetland found a screwdriver and a flashlight in the suspect's pocket.

During this time, Officer Nabstedt was interviewing the victim and confirmed the matching descriptions and that the suspect had a flashlight. Entry was gained through an unlocked window at the street level. She said that once the lights were turned on, the suspect fled through the same window.

After providing the suspect with Miranda Rights (right to remain silent . . .), they questioned the suspect and his answers didn't make much sense. He said that he was coming from his cousin's house, but didn't know where he lives. When asked why he had a flashlight, screwdriver and a large knife, the suspect began babbling.

Officer Smith told the suspect that it didn't look good for him and that detectives were on their way to fingerprint the window where the suspect entered. At that point, the suspect stated, "All right, it was me. I didn't have time to take anything. I got scared when the lights got turned on."

The suspect, a 16-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with armed burglary, carrying a dangerous weapon, receiving stolen property and possessing burglarious tools. The laptop computer was placed into evidence for court purposes, however, it did not belong to the victim of this break and at this time, it is unknown who the additional victim is.

Nice Work!

In this case, leaving a street level window open overnight created an opportunity for someone who was roaming the neighborhood looking to break into an apartment. This doesn't mean that you have to keep your windows shut and suffer from the summer heat. Simply installing screws at the top of the window to prevent it being pushed up further than a few inches allows for airflow without letting anyone enter.

If you have an air conditioner in a street level window, it should be attached to the window frame to prevent a criminal from simply pushing it in and gaining access. Remember, if the air conditioner is off and it is hot outside, there's no car in the driveway, the newspaper and the mail are at the entrance, this could be a target home.

Current Mortgage Crisis Creates Opportunities

By RUSS DALBEY
(NAPS) – In the financial world, problems often carry the seeds of opportunity. For example, concerns about the ability of sub-prime borrowers to repay their mortgages are having a significant impact on our economy, negatively affecting not only the mortgage industry, but the overall stock market as well.

The potential glut of foreclosed homes threatens to further lower housing values and put an additional burden on borrowers with less-than-perfect credit, who may find it even more difficult to secure home financing.

One solution is a private mortgage also called a cash flow, seller-financed mode.

Once common, this financing option is making a comeback. The idea is a simple one. Since traditional financing may not be an option for some homebuyers, the entire transaction takes place between the buyer and the seller, leaving the balance of the sale due over a period of time.

Let's say I've identified a buyer for my home. Just a few months ago, this buyer would have easily qualified for sub-prime mortgage. Now, because of the large number of defaults, my buyer can't qualify. While I could simply leave my house on the market and wait for another buyer, I can also consider private financing.

It works like this. Rather than simply accepting a lump-sum check from a bank or mortgage company, I agree to carry a loan for the buyer. Typically, the buyer will be required to come up with a down payment—just as in a traditional mortgage—but I get the down payment and the subsequent payments with interest.

A typical contract might look like this: I want to sell my home for $150,000 and I have an interested buyer. The buyer is able to put down 20 percent or $30,000—leaving a balance of $120,000. We agree to terms of 9 percent (remember, this person's credit is damaged, so he or she will not qualify for the best rates) for 30 years, and I begin receiving payments of $965 each month. If I keep the loan for 30 years, I'll receive nearly $1,000 each month and a total of more than $227,000 in interest over the life of the loan.

People often worry about what might happen if the person they sell their home to stops making payments. While this is not the best case scenario, it can be profitable. For example, if the lender makes 24 payments and defaults, you've received a down payment of $30,000 and payments totaling just over $23,000 and you have your house back. Perhaps it's even appreciated in the last two years, so now you can sell your house for $155,000 and begin the entire process again, but you've already made more than $50,000.

Finally, if you find you need your cash earlier than waiting for the loan to come full term, there is a large and growing market among investors who are actively purchasing these types of seller-financed notes.

A Friend in Need

Q: A friend of mine has been having some health and financial problems recently, and so I've been helping him out with a few things. My wife brings over dinner a couple times a week, and we help with cleaning and small fix-it items. His house has bigger issues though, including a big hole in the bathroom tile where the porcelain soap holder used to be — the insulation and sheathing are visible, so I don't know where the underlayment went. For now, I've covered the hole with plastic sheeting and duct tape. But the job looks bigger and more expensive than I can handle. What do you think? — Joe T., via e-mail

A: First, kudos to you and your wife for being so dedicated to your friend and making his life easier. These seemingly small things — making dinner, fixing a few things here and there — probably take a load off your friend's mind and are helping him get through this troubled time.

Some home repairs do take more than a few hours to complete, however, and the materials cost can also be great. Fortunately, many states have assistance programs, in the form of low-interest loans and (less frequently) grants, to help low-income homeowners make needed repairs.

Make a list of the bigger home repair projects around your friend's home and investigate your state and local governments' homeowner assistance programs. Then discuss the available options with him. If he decides to have the bigger repairs taken care of using an assistance loan or grant, you may want to be at his side while he negotiates with repair contractors and supervises the work being done.

Send questions or home-repair tips to homeguru2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Ecumenical Program At Wollaston Congregational

Local Protestant churches will join Wollaston Congregational Church United Church of Christ for an eight-month ecumenical program of study, action and worship entitled "Lift Up Your Voice."

The program, open to the entire community, will feature nationally acclaimed authors and speakers who will examine traditional and contemporary religious ideas, attitudes, rituals and forms.

Author and theologian Rev. Dr. Thomas Long will offer the first of this fall's series on the weekend of Sept. 21-23. Rev. Long, a professor of worship at Candler School of Theology in Atlanta, GA, will be guest at a reception Friday evening, conduct a full day workshop on Saturday and preach at the 10 a.m. Sunday morning service.

The theme of the yearlong program of worship renewal is to bridge the gap between traditional and contemporary ideas, attitudes, ritual and form, according to the program.

"Participants will gather to understand more fully the common roots of their Christian faith," notes Wollaston Pastor Rev. Mary Louise Gifford in explaining the program funded by a gift from the Calvin Institute of Christian Worship, Grand Rapids, MI, with funds provided by the Lilly Endowment Inc.

Orientation and registration is scheduled Tuesday evening at 7 p.m. at the Wollaston Congregational Church, 48 Winthrop Ave., Wollaston.

Scholars S. Mark Heim and Elizabeth Nordbeck, both professors at Andover Newton Theological School, Newton Center will also speak during future programs as will Rev. Paul Nickers, associate Conference Minister for the MA conference of the United church of Christ.

Participating churches include but are not limited to Wollaston Congregational Church, UCC, Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, First Baptist Church of Wollaston, St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church, Wollaston Church of the Nazarene, Quincy Community United Methodist Church and the Christian Science Church.

Rev. Mary Louise Gifford is past of Wollaston Congregational Church, is the Program Director. Amy Zydanic is the Program Administrator. Eight members of the church designed the program and wrote the grant proposals.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Making Sense of Fitness Terms

The terminology of the fitness industry can be confusing. Searching for a simple exercise video can become frustrating. Understanding the basic terms and definitions can help sort out the difference between a functional and aerobic training video. Below are some commonly used terms throughout the fitness world.

Cardiovascular/Aerobic Training (heart/oxygen)

These forms of training improve the endurance and efficiency of the heart muscle. Activities that increase or maintain an elevated heart rate for 20 minutes or more with involved continuous effort and use of large muscle groups are considered cardiovascular/aerobic exercises. Such activities include walking, jogging, cycling, hiking, swimming, skating and dancing. The more you train your heart, the less likely you are to develop certain diseases and health conditions. In addition, cardiovascular and aerobic training will lower your resting heart rate, enabling your heart to work more efficiently and allow your routine activities to become easier.

Anaerobic Training (without oxygen)

Unlike aerobic training, anaerobic training does not rely on oxygen as its energy system for performance. Activities are considered to be anaerobic when completed for no more than two minutes continuous. Anaerobic exercise can be done in intervals, where an activity such as sprinting, cycling or swimming is followed by a brief rest. Anaerobic training can be useful for improving your ability to work harder for a longer period of time by improving your anaerobic threshold. If you are a beginner to exercise, consult a professional on proper anaerobic training workouts.

Strength/Resistance Training

The process of improving the strength of your muscles, bones and connective tissue (ligaments and tendons). Weight machines, free weights, resistance bands, medicine balls and your own body weight can be used to increase strength. The added "resistance" on your body requires a response, and when repeated your body increases its "strength." Improving strength does not necessarily mean you will "bulk up." Increasing the overall strength of your muscles, bones and connective tissue will help prevent injuries by supporting your joints and improve your functional strength to complete everyday tasks. Squats, bicep curls and push-ups are all strength/resistance training exercises.

Functional Training

Using training techniques to mimic and improve common activities. A combination of strength and aerobic training, functional training focuses on developing the strength, flexibility and aerobic capacity that will transfer into your everyday life. Having to carry groceries up a flight of stairs can become easier through strengthening the muscles involved. Whether you are a professional athlete or soccer mom, functional training should be at the foundation of your fitness routine.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

Eye On Health

All Eyes On The Family For Glaucoma, A Silent But Preventable Sight Thief

(NAPS) - Right now, glaucoma could be stealing your sight. Are you or your loved one at risk? In its early stages, the disease may present few or no symptoms and, left undetected, glaucoma can lead to blindness—a condition that ranks third after cancer and heart disease as the top health fear for Americans.

Family history of glaucoma increases a person's risk for developing the disease. However, more than 80 percent of those who care for someone with glaucoma do not rank the disease high on their list of health concerns for themselves, according to a recent national survey of glaucoma patients and those who care for someone with glaucoma.

To increase awareness of the importance of early diagnosis and aggressive management of glaucoma, All Eyes on the Family, a national educational program has been developed by the Lions Clubs International Foundation, recognized worldwide for its service to the blind and visually impaired in partnership with Allergan Inc., a global leader in eye care. The program will provide valuable resources including discussion guides for glaucoma patients and caregivers, as well as free glaucoma checkup and screening events across the country that feature a virtual reality simulation to illustrate the impact of the disease.

"Glaucoma is the leading cause of preventable blindness, further underscoring the importance of this program," said Nicole Brown, Lions Clubs International Foundation manager. "The All Eyes on the Family program will help to raise awareness of glaucoma and empower local communities to save sight through early detection and aggressive management of the disease."

For the millions of glaucoma patients and caregivers, the Lions Eye Health Program (LEHP) Web site www.lehp.org, provides information on glaucoma and the All Eyes on the Family program, as well as access to downloadable discussion guides for patients and caregivers to use in conversations with each other and with their eye care professionals.

"Elevated intraocular pressure, or fluid pressure in the eye, is currently the only treatable risk factor for glaucoma, and lowering it may help to prevent further vision loss. For this reason, it is important for people to schedule regular examinations with an eye doctor to detect glaucoma early," said ophthalmologist Dr. Louis B. Cantor, the Jay C. and Lucile L. Kahn Professor and Director of Glaucoma Services at the Indiana University School of Medicine. "While glaucoma cannot be prevented or cured, early detection and treatment with a prescription eye drop such as LUMIGAN, can help lower elevated intraocular pressure."

Fitness Tips

How To Get The Perfect Tank Top And Bikini Belly

(NAPS) - Three simple exercise moves could quickly have you on your way to looking and feeling great.

That's the idea behind fitness guru Mimma Lessig's time-efficient sculpting program. The former Ms. Fitness USA and one-time fitness correspondent for CBS' "The Early Show" says the regimen tones trouble spots and can start producing early results in as little as 10 days.

The key to the program's success? It doesn't waste time.

That means it focuses on movements that help busy women make the most of their workouts. Specifically, efficient, effective routines that share a common goal of increasing energy and improving health and looks.

"This is cutting-edge fitness," says Lessig. "The entire program will not only make women look better but also feel healthier, stronger and more energetic."

The workout is broken down into easy steps in Lessig's new book and DVD, titled "Tank Top Arms, Bikini Belly, Boy Shorts Bottom" (Rodale, Inc.). Here's a look at three of the most widespread problem spots—and her favorite exercises for dealing with them.

Tank Top Arms

Lessig recommends the Side Plank with Arm Raise move to tighten everything from your shoulders to your back. Get down on all fours and grasp a dumbbell with your left hand. Extend your legs straight out behind you. Then rotate your body so your left side faces the ceiling. Lift your left arm straight up into the air and over your head, with your palm facing forward. Return to the starting position and repeat on the other side.

Bikini Belly

A fusion of dance and gymnastics, the Twist and Drop helps tighten your core. Stand with feet slightly more than shoulder width apart. Bend forward at the hips and place hands flat on the floor directly beneath your shoulders. Raise your heels so that only your toes are touching the floor. Draw your navel toward your spine. Use your abdominal muscles to lift your right foot off the floor and sweep it across in front of your left foot. Then twist your body and lower your hips toward the floor so your left hip faces the ceiling and your right hip faces the floor. Alternate sides.

Boy Shorts Bottom

The Fringy Double-Leg Lift may look funny, but it can seriously improve your "rear view." Lie on your belly on the floor with legs flat and knees bent to 90 degrees, hip width apart. Touch your heels together and turn your feet so your toes point out. Cross your forearms in front of you and rest your forehead on them. Using your glutes, lift your thighs as high as you can without using the muscles in the lower back.

The book and DVD are available wherever fitness books and videos are sold.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

WHITENING DISCOLORED TEETH

Professional tooth-whitening by the dentist is very effective at removing discoloration that results from eating and drinking certain foods and beverages. For instance, red wine, tea, coffee, and such foods as blueberries can leave stains that professional whitening can remove. The dentist can also whiten teeth that have become discolored due to smoking. On the other hand, tooth discoloration and results from radiation and chemotherapy treatments does not lend itself to professional whitening. Patients should also be aware that some medications used to treat malaria and bacterial infections (antibiotics), as well as some acne and rheumatoid arthritis treatments, can cause tooth discoloration that whitening agents cannot correct. Consult with your dentist if you have any questions.

If you would like to know more about how tooth whitening can enhance your smile, ask us. We'll help you decide if this is an option that would be right for you. We know your smile says a lot about you. After all, it's the first thing most people notice when they meet you. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer professional dental care, including preventive, restorative, and cosmetic services for all ages. Remember, we're your complete dental care provider. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. If taken for extended periods, some high blood pressure medications, antihistamines, and anti-depressants may stain teeth.

Milton Hospital Adds Two Doctors To Medical Staff

Milton Hospital, a clinical affiliate of Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center providing community-based health care, is announcing the appointment of two new medical staff members.

Internists Ankur Mehta, M.D., and Jennifer L. Liu, M.D., join Milton Hospital's staff of approximately 250 physicians.

Ankur Mehta, M.D., received his bachelor of medicine and bachelor of surgery (M.B.B.S.) at Grant Medical College and Sir J.J. Group of Hospitals, University of Mumbai, India. He completed an internship and residency at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey and Robert Wood Johnson University Hospital, New Jersey.

Dr. Mehta is a candidate for his masters in clinical nutrition from the University of Florida. Formerly a researcher at the Cancer Institute of New Jersey and affiliated with the American Medical Association and American College of Physicians, Dr. Mehta is a primary care physician, and joins Milton Hospital's physician group, Community Physician Associates (CPA).

Also joining CPA as a primary care physician is Jennifer L. Liu, M.D., who earned a doctorate of medicine from the University of Nebraska Medical Center, Omaha, Nebraska, and served as an intern and resident at Oakwood Hospital and Medical Center in Michigan. She completed a master of health services Administration and a master of public health, Executive Master's Program at the University of Michigan. She is a member of the American Medical Association, American Academy of Family Practice and the Michigan Academy of Family Practice.

"As we continue to broaden our role in the community, we welcome these two physicians to help us meet the health needs of our growing patient base," said Joseph Raduazzo, M.D., Chief Medical Officer, Milton Hospital.

Milton Hospital is currently undergoing a $38 million dollar expansion project with an anticipated September opening of Phase 1 of construction, including a new Emergency Department, Endoscopy Suites and lobby.

Dennis 'Oil Can' Boyd Special Guest Babe Ruth International Holds 'All-Star Sunday'

The Babe Ruth International League recently held its annual 'All-Star Sunday' at Adams Field. Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, former Boston Red Sox pitcher, made an appearance at the game.

Boyd, who pitched in the 1986 World Series against the New York Mets, watched a couple of innings of baseball and then autographed baseballs and took pictures with each player participating in the game. He talked to the all-stars about the need to study hard in school and he talked about his time growing up in Mississippi during the 1960s and stressed that "with quite a bit of effort and determination, you can achieve almost anything you want."

Boyd also talked about his current baseball interest, the "Oil Can Boyd Traveling Urban All Stars." This team travels the country playing for charity and consists of former professional baseball players including former Red Sox Bill Lee and former Montreal Expo, Marquis Grissom.

The game between the American and National League all-stars was an offensive slugfest with the National League squeaking out a 12-11 victory.

For the winners, Nick Milone had two hits and earned the win, pitching the eighth and ninth innings, of the nine-inning affair. Aaron Sampson and Mike Litif also had two hits and Jon Barton, Sean O'Callaghan and John Morton also had hits.

John Clifford, Robert Bennett and Nick Dolan all played great defense for the National League.

Colin Hales' three singles paced the American League. Conor Bresnahan, Jarod Shields and Rich Ryan each finished the game with two hits apiece and Josh Nealon, Pat Gaskell and Matt Head hit safely. Nick Ryan and Brendon Nealon both shined in the field defensively.

Aaron Sampson, of the National League, was selected as the All-Star Game Most Valuable Player.

City-Wide 6 On 6 Soccer Tournament

The Quincy Recreation Department recently held its annual Six-on-Six Soccer Tournament for the first time on the new turf field at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Over one hundred children, from eighteen playgrounds around Quincy, came to show their moves and compete in the Six-on-Six tournament. The event was divided into a double-elimination bracket, with three age divisions.

In the midget division, Squantum, on the strength of great teamwork and determination, defeated the team from Forbes Hill in a close game.

Montclair knocked off Beechwood in the finals of the Junior Division. The two teams battled throughout regulation and two overtimes before Montclair won in a shootout.

In the Senior Division, the team from Perkins won the championship in a hard-fought game against Faxon.

Lisa Rice, Nate Schow and DJ Figueredo accompanied them.

Recreation Director Barry J. Welch praised the Quincy Bay Race Week Committee for "their commitment to providing the opportunity for our participants to enjoy the thrill associated with sailing in Quincy Bay. It is an experience they will never forget."

Alumni Winners In First North Quincy Alumni Soccer Game

The 1st annual North Quincy High School girls' soccer alumni game was held last Saturday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Thirty-one alumni came back to Quincy to play in the game against the current North Quincy varsity/jayvee squad. The alumni won the game by a score of 2-0.

Scoring for the alumni was former EMASS all-star, Jenn Ryan ('04), assisted on the goal by Amanda Saylor ('05) and Hillary O'Donoghue ('97), assisted by Allie Lacey ('02).

Former North Quincy freshmen coach Frank O'Donoghue coached the alumni team and a crowd of about 75 fans came to cheer on the teams.

"This was a way of allowing both the alumni and the current players to connect with each other," said NQ head coach Paul Bregoli. "Our former players have built a tradition of excellence synonymous with NQ soccer. Hopefully, the current players will better understand all the great players who have come through the program's history."

The following is a list of the alumni who were present:

Class of 1996 - Liz Fitzpatrick and Kelly Keegan.
1997 - Hillary O'Donoghue, Kelly

Wignore and Lisa Bragg.
1998 - Kristen Keohane.
1999 - Betsy Stone, Rachael Powers, Kristen Bowes, Lauen Koch and Katie Ceurvels.

The Garden Bug

Tenacious thyme

Its name comes from the Greek word thymon, meaning "courage." It was used as an antiseptic by the Sumerian armies. The Romans bathed in it to prepare for battle, and Scottish Highlanders drank a tea of it for the same purpose. During the Middle Ages, it was embroidered on tunics worn by knights.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) As eager as you are to take on that new challenge, it would be best to temper that spurt of "Ram"-bunctious energy until you have more facts to back up your decision to move.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This is a good time for hardworking Bovines to take a break from their hectic on-the-job schedules to bask in the unconditional love and support of friends and family.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Pay attention to what you hear in the workplace. You could pick up some hints about possible changes. Meanwhile, a new infusion of creative energy sets in by week's end.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Try to be more flexible in dealing with a suddenly difficult situation, whether it's on the job or in the home. Others might have some good points to offer. Listen to them.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You might think you're not getting the royal treatment you deserve. But be careful not to become a royal pain by complaining about it. Be patient and allow things to work out.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Watch that penchant for being super-judgmental at work. It might create a bad impression with someone whose decisions could determine the course of your career.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You've been your usual busy-bee self, gathering nectar wherever you can find it. But now's a good time to kick back, relax and just enjoy smelling the roses.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) That pesky personal situation seems to be improving. But change comes slowly, so be patient. Expect someone to bring more positive news by week's end.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Whoa! Ease up on that hectic pace you've been putting yourself through. Take time to recharge your energy levels before going full gallop again.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Try to be intrigued, not intimidated, by the issues you're suddenly facing, and you'll be ahead of the game. Don't be afraid to demand answers to your questions.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) New associates freezing you out of their inner circle? Never mind. Put a warm smile on that friendly face of yours, and you'll soon thaw them all down to size.

PISCIS (February 19 to March 20) Your wise guidance helps colleagues agree to compromise and move forward. Meanwhile, there are still vital issues you need to deal with in your personal life.

BORN THIS WEEK: You enjoy being free with your emotions, but you also can exercise disciplined focus. You would make a fine artist.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We all make many promises during our lifetime. These promises deal with all things, in every phase of life. Knowing what or whom to believe can and does pose problems at times.

Careless promises should never be given - or counted upon. A promise that can cause discomfort, harm or injustice to yourself - or to others - should never be made, no matter how much prodding or persuasion is involved.

It is usually very easy to make a promise . . . Expediency or change of mind is seldom a justified excuse for breaking a promise. A promise involves honor, duty and ethics. . . The best promise you can make - is a promise to yourself. . . Promise yourself that you will never make a promise to anyone, unless you are fully prepared and able to keep your promise. . . In addition to spiritual benefit, it is a good way to gain honor, stature, praise and prestige among your fellow human beings. . .

The Way Up Sponsors Baptism Service

Forty-five Christians from a variety of churches in Quincy, South Boston, Brockton, Avon, Dorchester and Worcester gathered on the beach last Saturday morning under sunny skies at Houghton's Pond in Milton to witness the baptism of two new Christians.

The service was sponsored by The Way Up, a local youth ministry, the First Baptist Church of Wollaston in Quincy and the South Baptist Church in South Boston.

It was led by four American Baptist ministers including the Revs. Gene and Patti Grace Langevin, co-directors of The Way Up, the Rev. Veronica Lamer, an American Baptist missionary, and the Rev. Michael Cunningham, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Wollaston.

The two people who were baptized were Dennis Peter Patrick St. Rose and Patrick

Ross Seal. The music leaders were Mindy Shave and Marci Langevin. Shave played the autoharp to accompany the hymns sung by the congregation.

Joe Lambourino was the head usher. Gary Malin, the photographer and Jeffrey Malin was responsible for making the video.

After the joyous service, everyone who was there participated in a reception held nearby in the park.

A/K/A NEIL MACINNIS
Late of QUINCY
In the County of NORFOLK
Date of Death
April 17, 2007

NOTICE OF PETITION FOR PROBATE OF WILL

To all persons interested in the above captioned estate, a petition has been presented praying that a document purporting to be a photocopy of the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed, and that JENNIFER N. MACINNIS of MARSHFIELD in the County of PLYMOUTH or some other suitable person be appointed executor, named in the will to serve without surety.

IF YOU DESIRE TO OBJECT THERETO, YOU OR YOUR ATTORNEY MUST FILE A WRITTEN APPEARANCE IN SAID COURT AT CANTON ON OR BEFORE TEN O'CLOCK IN THE FORENOON (10:00AM) ON SEPTEMBER 19, 2007.

In addition, you must file a written affidavit of objections to the petition, stating specific facts and grounds upon which the objection is based, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

WITNESS, HON. DAVID H. KOPELMAN, ESQUIRE, First Justice of said Court at CANTON this day, August 9, 2007.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN (Never Known to Fail)

"Oh, most beautiful flower of Heaven,
Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. (Make request). There are none that can withstand your power.
Oh, show me herein you are my mother. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3 times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (3 times). Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. Amen. This prayer must be said for 3 days, after that the request will be granted. The prayer must be published. M.L.M.

ENC Choir Accepting New Members From Community

The Eastern Nazarene College Choral Union, a choir made up of students and members of the community, is reaching out for new members for the Fall 2007 semester.

All adult singers, as well as school-aged singers with the approval of the music director, are welcome, regardless of experience or music-reading ability.

Auditions are not required and membership is free.

Rehearsals are held Mondays from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in the Cove Fine Arts Center on the ENC campus, 23 East Elm St., Wollaston. New members will be welcomed at the first rehearsal Sept. 17.

The choir will perform Handel's Messiah in December with a professional orchestra and four professional soloists.

For more information, call Professor Delynn Case, the Union's music director, at 617-745-3614. Directions to the ENC campus may be found at www.encyc.edu or by calling 617-745-3715.

INVITATION TO BID

INVITATION TO BID
CITY OF QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS
PURCHASING DEPARTMENT
1305 HANCOCK STREET, QUINCY, MA 02169

INVITATION TO BID

The City of Quincy invites sealed bids/proposals for furnishing and delivering to the City of Quincy:
LIBRARY DEPARTMENT PERIODICALS SEPTEMBER 7, 2007 @ 10:30 A.M.
PARK DEPARTMENT TREE PLANTING SEPTEMBER 14, 2007 @ 10:30 A.M.
Detailed specifications are on file at the office of the Purchasing Agent, Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, Massachusetts, 02169, between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Relative to tree planting: Installation and planting operations shall be conducted by an on-site certified Arborist who holds at least one (1) of the following licenses: Massachusetts Certified Arborist (MCA) or Massachusetts Certified Horticulturist (MCH) or an International Society of Arboriculture Certified Arborist (ISAC) with at least ten years experience in the field of municipal tree planting.

A non-mandatory pre-bid conference will be held on September 7, 2007 at 11:00 am at the Park and Recreation Building at 1 Merrymont Parkway, at which time locations for planting of the trees will be provided.

Bids must state exceptions, if any, the delivery date and any allowable discounts. Bids/Proposals must be in a sealed envelope. The outside of the sealed envelope is to be clearly marked "BID ENCLOSED" with time/date of bid call.

Firm bid prices will be given first consideration. Bids/Proposals will be received at the office of the Purchasing Agent until the time and date stated above, at which time and date they will be publicly opened and read. Late Bids/Proposals, delivered by mail or in person, will be rejected.

If applicable, bids shall be in accordance with M.G.L. Chapter 30B, Chapter 149 as amended, and Chapter 30, Sections 39A, 39B and 39F-R. The successful bidder for tree planting will be required to conform to the payment of Prevailing Wage Rates, as determined by the Commissioner of Labor & Industries under the provision of M.G.L. Chapter 149, Section 26 to 27D as amended.

The right is reserved to reject any or all bids or to accept any part of a bid or the one deemed best for the City and waive any informalities in the bidding if it is in the best interest of the City to do so.

7 Deadly Mistakes That Will Cost You Thousands When You Sell Your Home

Quincy - A new report has just been released which reveals 7 costly mistakes that most homeowners make when selling their home.

This industry report shows clearly how the traditional ways of selling homes have become increasingly less and less effective in today's market. Most homesellers don't get what they want for their home.

As this report uncovers, most homesellers make 7 deadly mistakes that will cost them literally thousands of dollars.

In answer to this issue, industry insiders have prepared a free special report entitled "The 9 Step System to Get Your Home Sold Fast and For Top Dollar."

To hear a brief recorded message about how to order your free copy of this report, call 1-800-611-0351 and enter ID # 1000, call any time.

Firefighters, Police Shave Heads For Childhood Cancer

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Bald is beautiful and the hot look at Quincy fire and police stations these days because a half dozen firefighters and police officers had their heads shaved for childhood cancer research last week at WaterClub on the Boardwalk at Marina Bay.

The men joined former Quincy resident Deb Shapiro and some 25 other volunteers at the head-shaving event which raised over $14,000 for childhood cancer research through the St. Baldrick's Foundation since 2000.

"It's not a big thing to me and if it helps kids, why not?" said Firefighter Bill Eastwick who raised hundreds of dollars from family and friends.

Eastwick and his fellow public safety officers are among the 41,000 volunteers who have had their heads shaved at national and inter-

The head-shaving events not only raise funds but remind the world that youngsters, and most others in cancer treatment, typically lose their hair and must be bald indefinitely.

Eastwick is stationed at Quincy Fire Department headquarters with Paul O'Grady who organized the local effort of The SuRVivor's Tour. In the next 12 months, the group hopes to cover 10,000 miles in 20 states while bunking in trailers or recreational vehicles (RV).

The national tour was organized by Shapiro who, with her husband, Gary Rideout, has volunteered a year to the St. Baldrick's Foundation.

The lazy, hazy days of summer will come to an end Wednesday, Sept. 5, when the youthful scholars in grades 1 through 9 return to school followed by grades 10 through 12 a day later.

By Monday, Sept. 10, when pre-school and kindergarten classes begin, all students will be back at their desks for what Superintendent Richard DeCristofaro calls the "excitement and challenges" of the new year.

"The Quincy Public Schools is fortunate again this year to have an increase in our school budget," said DeCristofaro in his message to students, parents and staff to start the school year.

To Our Readers

The price of The Quincy Sun will be increased effective with the Thursday, Sept. 6 issue.

At that time, the newsstand and home delivery by carrier price will be 50 cents and increase of 10 cents.

The yearly mail subscriptions were increased earlier this month and are not affected by this new rate.

We regret the increase our first in seven years but increased production and other rising costs force us to make the adjustment.

At 50 cents, the price of The Sun will still be lower than that of most weekly newspapers in the South Shore and New England areas.

We are most grateful to our loyal readers many of whom have been with us since our first issue in September 1968 and have encouraged and supported us down through the years in our role as Historic Quincy's Hometown Weekly Newspaper.

We hope that you will understand the need for the adjustment in price that we will be making effective Sept. 6.

Thank you, sincerely,

Mayoral Candidates Meet In Houghs Neck

Phelan, Koch Trade Charges In Debate #1

By LAURA GRIFFIN

There were no holds barred as Mayor William Phelan and challenger Thomas Koch battled each other last week during the first debate of the 2007 mayoral campaign.

In his opening salvo, Koch charged Phelan with saddling taxpayers with an extra $46 million in costs due to delays in building the new Quincy High School. He, also, declared that Phelan missed the boat on '00's state reimbursement on the Central Middle School project.

"You were on the School Committee at the time," Koch said, later. "You missed that opportunity." Koch called the project "Quincy's Big Dig."

Phelan fired back, charging that the high school project was delayed because the former administration which he said included Koch wanted the new school built on "a toxic waste dump that was worth zero."

"No one said anything," said Phelan claiming that the developer owning the land would have made a million dollars, practically overnight, on the site.

"I've gotten people mad but I haven't made them rich," said Phelan, later.

Koch said Phelan is rehashing the 2001 mayoral race and should stand on his own record. He asked why the City Council had to take the initiatives on such issues as a moratorium on new building projects and blight. He repeatedly claimed the administration lacks planning for the future.

The overflow crowd of some 350 people at St. Thomas Aquinas Hall in Houghs Neck

mas Aquinas Hall in Houghs Neck was near equally divided between the two candidates. With each jab and statement, half the crowd roared their approval for their candidate while the other half remained still.

Moderator Tom Timeoe read the audience's questions which ranged from taxes, city union contracts, policing, development, the concourse and school issues to social issues like drugs, gay marriage, and homelessness. The debate was sponsored by the Houghs Neck Community Council.

TAXES

Phelan said real estate taxes this year have increased less than every single city in the state.

Neither candidate would support an override which wouldn't be necessary now, according to Phelan who pointed out that the city has an excess tax capacity of over $8 million in contrast to the minus funds available when he took office and claimed year-old unpaid bills were left on his desk.

The city is financially sound, Phelan said, "unlike we were five years ago when I took office." Phelan said there are "no more inside deals."

Koch said Phelan is spending like "it's going out of style" and blamed Phelan for a 20% tax increase in 2004. He, also, cited the $30 million revitalization bond and the $31 million energy contract touted by the administration.

Koch labeled the spending "backloading" and warned that the bills will come due, as taxes, on the "backs of a future generation."

THE CONCOURSE

Both candidates support the concourse which, when completed, will cross the city from Bergen Parkway to Southern Artery. Phelan kicked off Phase One of the project in June.

Koch would reroute the road to avoid The Quincy Fair building which he said would save the city considerable money. At the same time, Koch would take the Quincy Legion Post on Revere Road as members have requested.

Phelan's administration didn't communicate property, according to Koch who said that area business owners "didn't seem to be in the know."

Phelan said the Concourse had been 30 years on the drawing board until his administration took control. He said Koch's proposal would reroute the project and make the roadway less safe.

SCHOOL BUILDINGS

One question asked why special education classes are being held in closets due to a lack of space in the city's schools.

Phelan said part of the cause of school crowding is a major effort to reduce class sizes which means using more space and, also, the city's full day kindergarten program which he promoted. He noted that the city owns the former Myles Standish School building at Squantum and that space will open up when the high school is completed.

"We seem to fail at long-range planning," said Koch who said the city moved ahead with major projects without proper planning.

CITY UNION CONTRACTS

Koch charged that the city's teachers are returning to school with low morale after a bruising contract battle last spring during which he said that Phelan chose to "vilify teachers." Even when there are differences, Koch said that it's important to "treat people with respect."

In contrast, Koch said that Phelan gave police superior officers "got one heck of a deal" in their contract while firefighters are still waiting for a contract.

Phelan charged that Koch skirted the issue of the teacher's insurance co-pay, and claimed that Koch was so generous in his contract negotiations that superior officers said it was "...like taking candy from a baby."

Koch countered that the contract in question included zero pay increases.

City First To Take Advantage Of New Energy Savings Law Major Improvements Cited As Schools Open

Students, teachers and parents will notice significant improvements in the Quincy public schools when they open next week, reported Mayor William Phelan, School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, and Buildings Director Mike Ryan.

Quincy is the first city in Massachusetts, they noted, to take advantage of the State's new Energy Savings Law and the city entered into an Energy Performance Contract with Honeywell, Inc. for the upgrades. Honeywell, Inc. guarantees the taxpayers of Quincy savings in all future electric and water bills.

As a result, there will be new and improved lighting in classrooms, new roofs, low-flush toilets and plumbing fixtures that conserve water, and new heating and ventilation systems that are more efficient than the older systems, they said.

"We have made substantial improvements in all of our school buildings without risk to our taxpayers," said Phelan. "Better lighting, better heating systems, new roofs, and better ventilation result in a better learning environment for our students. We are proud to be the first city in Massachusetts to take advantage of the State's new Energy Savings law. The savings in our electricity bills will be used to pay for the investment that we have made in our buildings and in our future. Honeywell is guaranteeing the savings to the city and they will have to cut us a check if they don't reach the performance standards. It is one of the best programs this city has ever undertaken."

Ryan said he was pleased with the work being done by Honeywell. Ryan pointed out that Honeywell uses all Union labor, ensuring that costs are controlled and deadlines are met.

"We have experienced more improvements in our school buildings in the last three months than most school systems see in twenty years," said Ryan. "The impacts will be significant. We now have better environments inside the schools and substantial savings to taxpayers. Many of these improvements would have had to be done in the coming years and the taxpayers would have been on the hook for new roofs, lights, and other improvements. By Mayor Phelan taking advantage of the new State law, we can invest in our buildings and use future energy savings to foot the bill."

The following is an inventory of the school improvements:

Lighting Upgrades: All schools—4,200 new lighting fixtures citywide thus far.

Water Conservation Efforts: All schools—replaced 600 plumbing fixtures thus far.

New Roofs: Atherton Hough Elementary School, Central Middle School, Snug

Harbor Elementary School, Bernazanni Elementary School, Squantum Elementary School.

Heating/Boiler Replacement: Atlantic Middle School, Montclair Elementary School.

School personnel are currently completing training on new systems to ensure long-term success of the systems.

"The difference in the classrooms is immediately noticeable," said North Quincy High School Principal Earl Metzler. "In addition, the upgrades that have been made in the gymnasium are dramatic. This has been a substantial improvement in the quality of our school."

"This program is good for the environment and good for our taxpayers and students," said Phelan. "Seldom will you see a program with so many benefits and so little costs. I am proud to say that Quincy is the first community to implement such a great program."

RECIPIENTS OF THE U.S. Marshal William F. Degan "Citizenship" Award at the Beechwood Knoll School were Matthew Donovan and Jane Minton, who were presented a framed award certificate along with a $100 U.S. Savings Bond. The award is presented to students who best demonstrate good citizenship at home, in school and in their communities. The awards were presented at a ceremony held at the end of the school year.

Restaurant License Suspended 2 Days

The License Board unanimously approved a two-day suspension of The Little Q Hot Pot Restaurant's liquor license after reviewing charges that a waitress served a 20-year-old woman alcohol without checking her identification.

Police Lt. Peter Turowski outlined the police "sting" operation executed on Friday evening, May 25. During that evening, a 20-year-old woman working undercover for the police visited several Quincy restaurants and bars, he said.

She was served beer at the Food Court and did not (Cont'd On Page 32)

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Aug. 27, 1859, Edwin Drake strikes oil at 69 feet near Titusville, Pa. — the world's first successful oil well. This source of crude oil, or petroleum, opened up a new, inexpensive source of power and quickly replaced whale oil in lamps.

• On Aug. 31, 1888, the first victim of London serial killer "Jack the Ripper" is found murdered and mutilated in Whitechapel's Hock's Row. The police, who lacked modern forensic techniques such as fingerprinting and blood typing, were at a complete loss for suspects. In 1892, the Jack the Ripper file was closed.

• On Aug. 29, 1911, Ishi, described as the last surviving Stone Age Indian in the contiguous U.S., is discovered lost and starving in Oroville, Calif. He was unfamiliar with white ways and spoke no English. With the help of a Berkeley anthropologist named Thomas Waterman, a crude language was created that allowed communication. For five years, Ishi lived at the Berkeley Museum, where he learned to understand and survive in the white world. He died on March 25, 1916, of tuberculosis at an estimated age of 56.

• On Sept. 2, 1931, Bing Crosby's first radio show, "15 Minutes With Bing Crosby," debuts on CBS. Crosby was born Harry Lillis Crosby in Tacoma in 1903. As a child, his devotion to a cartoon character named Bing won him his lifelong nickname.

• On Aug. 30, 1963, a 24-hour-a-day "hot line" system between Moscow and Washington, D.C., goes into effect. The hot line was never really necessary to prevent war between the Soviet Union and the United States, and its significance at the time was largely symbolic.

• On Aug. 28, 1972, toward the end of the Vietnam War, the U.S. Air Force gets its first ace since the Korean War when Capt. Richard S. Ritchie shoots down his fifth MiG near Hanoi.

• On Sept. 1, 1985, seventy-three years after it sunk to the North Atlantic ocean floor, a joint U.S.-French expedition locates the wreck of the RMS Titanic lying at a depth of 13,000 feet about 400 miles east of Newfoundland.

Yes, There Was A Peanut Store

Yes, there was a peanut store in downtown Quincy. Several readers have called to say they remember it back in the early 1940s.

They were responding to an item here last week in which Walter Whidden of Elm Street recalled such a store with peanuts in the shell lining the walls.

He couldn't find anyone else who remembered it and wondered "Did I dream this?"

No, you didn't, Walter.

Dick Laracy, retired Quincy police liquor inspector and Sheila Tordoff of Houghs Neck were among those who remember it being on the east side of Hancock Street in the general vicinity across from the Lincoln store.

The name of the store was Planters Peanuts. They remember the peanuts along the walls. And a Mr. Peanut figure, a giant peanut with a top hat.

Sheila was 4 or 5 at the time and her grandmother took her to the store on Saturdays. Laracy was in the fourth or fifth grade.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly also remembers the store but thinks it was closer to Granite Street where the Quincy Business Association is located at 1416 Hancock Street. Kelly also remembers Harold Stewart of Houghs Neck as the peanut man dressed in a large peanut shell and top hat.

Robert Halfyard of North Quincy, retired U.S. Administrative Law judge, thinks it was on the west side of Hancock Street (1391) near where the Talbot's store was located.

This could have been a later store called Kemp's that sold peanuts and a variety of nuts.

He remembers it having a machine that made fresh peanut butter while you waited.

Oh, the good old days!

LOOKS LIKE THERE might be another contender for the City Council presidency.

KELLY

Ward 1's Leo Kelly says: "I'm considering it. I think I have the experience."

Kelly, now running unopposed for his ninth term, was president of the council in 1980-81.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, Ward 4's Jay Davis and Councillor at-Large Mike McFarland were reported here last week as "interested" in taking the gavel from Ward 5's Doug Gutro who cannot succeed himself after his two one-year terms.

Overall, he has been with the U.S. Postal Service 34 years, 28 in Quincy.

"I'm going to miss it all—especially the people," he says. "When I got the downtown route, it was like going to heaven."

Richie, now a Braintree resident, is planning on settling in Winter Springs, Fla.

"I've got to remember to give the keys back," he muses.

He was trusted with about two dozen keys to offices on his route so he could deliver to them on Saturdays when they are closed.

TOM GALVIN reached a proud milestone Saturday: the 1000th consecutive day that he has walked three miles.

That's like walking across the country. The last time he missed a day was Thanksgiving, 2004.

He has been walking almost daily for 12 years but this is the first time he has put 1,000 days in a row together.

And, he's now off to make it 2,000. Tom's popular "Scenes From Yesterdays," appears weekly in The Sun. And, he's known for his tours of Mount Wollaston Cemetery. (Next one: Sept. 15)

How about a walk-off between Tom and Frank McCauley?

THE MOVIE "STIFFS" starring Danny Aiello will soon become to a theater near you.

And if you keep an eye out, you'll catch a couple of North Quincy familiar figures making their movie debuts: Sal Giarratani and Paul Picariello.

Giarratani, of course, is a well-known name. You've seen it at the end of thousands of letters to the editor here and in other newspapers. Picariello is with Accent Upholstery in North Quincy.

The movie, made by filmmakers Frank and Joseph Ciata of Lynn, was shot in the Greater Boston area.

It's now showing at the Montreal Film Festival before heading for the states.

Sal is seen at an Everett funeral home, playing a low-level hood attending a wake.

Paul is in a wedding scene at Lombardo's in Randolph. No, they don't expect to be invited to the Academy Awards Night festivities.

How Vegetarian Diet Fights Cancer Sept. 16

The benefit of a vegetarian diet in the fight against cancer will be explored in a program Sunday, Sept. 16, at 2 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

The program, "Food for Life 3: Replacing Meat and Antioxidants & Phytochemicals," was designed by physicians, nutrition experts and registered dietitians at the non-profit Cancer Project.

Cancer researchers have discovered that people who avoid meat are much less likely to develop the disease and some vegetarian sources of protein are loaded with cancer-fighting nutrients.

Registration is required for this program and may be made by calling 617-376-1316 or emailing qur@ocln.org.

The program is sponsored by the Cancer Project and the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1927 postcard view of Hancock Street in Norfolk Downs looking north from the end of Hayward Street at the Wheelhouse Diner. The newly built Regent Theater had 800 seats and remained open for over 50 years. For many years, the owners of the Regent also owned the Wollaston Theater on Beale Street. The old theater building has since been replaced with another building now home to a branch of the Bank of America with offices upstairs. The Regent building also had offices upstairs that were home to two start-up companies in the 1950s: Instron Engineering, now a worldwide company located in Norwood; and Industrial Cafeteria's and Menu-Mat, both owned by Bill Rosenberg who also started his Dunkin Donuts company here. That is now located in Canton. The next building to the left was owned by the Boston Gear Works for many years, but is now a parking lot for the bank. A few years before this picture was taken, Charlie Rizzo opened his barbershop on the first floor of the triple-decker in the distance. He was in business there for 50 years. EAST-WEST CONNECTOR LOOMS AGAIN IN DEVELOPMENT PLANS

The controversial East-West Connector across Hancock St., which was rejected by Quincy merchants last year, is looming more and more important in plans for revitalizing downtown Quincy.

Mayor Arthur Tobin said Stephen Weiner of Leatherbee Co., Cambridge, proposed developer of the John Hancock Parking Area, is also interested in tying together both sides of Hancock St. Weiner, he said, is putting together a package that includes possibly a 150,000-square foot department store and the soon to be vacant Sears Roebuck building for presentation to the city council in six months.

Against Changing License Board Members

I thoroughly agree with Robert Smith who wrote about his feelings on the Koch License Board plan.

I have seen, via the Quincy television station, the License Board in action. All the members in question know the entire Quincy City by note!

To unseat them and replace them with civilian members, in my estimation, would be a big mistake.

Opposes License Board Meeting Changes

On the issue of the time change for the Licensing Board who does this administration think they are kidding?

How are citizens going to have more input and more opportunities on the issues of the day, when they cut the meeting from three or four times a month to two times, and supporters or abutters will be limited to speaking time?

This is another ploy to have less to do with the citizens of this city. This administration is the worst I've seen in distancing itself from the citizens of the city in all my 72 years of living here.

Have they thought about parking at four in the afternoon when traffic is heavy? Possibly they have.

still no repaved road.

Mr. Davis took credit for the speed trailer that was parked in front of my house three years ago. Wrong. I asked Councillor at-Large Joe Finn for help with speeding on Willard Street, and it was Mr. Finn that had the speed trailer placed there, not Mr. Davis.

Praises Fenno Street Basketball Courts Program

As a parent of Quincy teenagers, I want to thank Mayor Phelan and the Quincy Recreation Department for operating a great new program at the Fenno Street basketball courts this summer.

Instead of thinking about unsupervised gangs of kids that used to rule the "Mount," I now comfortably allow my teenagers to spend summer evenings there under the watchful eye of the police and recreation staffs.

The police and recreation leaders are positive role models for our young people to emulate. I commend the City for operating such a great summer program and hope that this is a sign of things to come in Quincy.

September-Long Photo Exhibit At Crane Library

Hong Kong-born photographer Karman Lee will exhibit her work starting Friday, Aug. 31 and running to Sept. 30 in the Coletti Reading Room on the first floor of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

A public reception with light refreshments will be held Saturday, Sept. 29, from 12 noon to 2 p.m.

Lee, whose work reflects an interest in landscapes and nature, is known for her penchant for the abstract, obsession with detail and eye for color contrast which give her photographs their unique style.

She was born and raised in Hong Kong, coming to the United States to settle in Boston and attend Bentley College. She currently works in Washington and resides in Arlington, Va.

For more information about the exhibit, call 617-376-1301 or visit thomascranelibrary.org.

ENC Choral Union Seeks Community Members

The Eastern Nazarene College Choral Union, a choir made up of students and members of the community, is reaching out for new members for the Fall 2007 semester.

All adult singers, as well as school-aged singers with the approval of the music director, are welcome, regardless of experience or music-reading ability.

Auditions are not required and membership is free.

Rehearsals are held Mondays from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in the Cove Fine Arts Center on the ENC campus, 23 East Elm St., Wollaston. New members will be welcomed at the first rehearsals Sept. 10 and 17.

The choir will perform Handel's Messiah in December with a professional orchestra and four professional soloists.

For more information, call Professor Delvyn Case, the Union's music director, at 617-745-3614. Directions to the ENC campus may be found at www.enc.edu or by calling 617-745-3715.

Beyond The Worship Wars' At Wollaston Congregational

All are welcome to attend a weekend workshop entitled "Beyond the Worship Wars" scheduled Sept 21 through Sept. 23 at Wollaston Congregational Church, United Church of Christ, 48 Winthrop Ave., Wollaston.

The schedule includes a reception Friday night, a pancake breakfast Saturday at 8 a.m. before a daylong workshop begins and a worship service Sunday morning at 10 a.m.

Featured guest for the weekend will be Rev. Dr. Thomas Long who will discuss his book, Beyond the Worship Wars: Building

Vital and Faithful Worship. Rev. Long is a professor of worship at Candler School of Theology in Atlanta, GA.

In his book, Rev. Long discusses the nine characteristics of vital and faithful worship as practiced by "third way" congregations. These characteristics include experiencing mystery, practicing hospitality, and recovering a sense of drama.

The program is one of a year-long series of worship renewal programs sponsored by Wollaston Congregational Church UCC and supported by six other local churches, Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, First Baptist Church of Wollaston, St. Chrysostomus Episcopal Church, Wollaston Church of the Nazarene, Quincy Community United Methodist Church and the Christian Science Church.

Orientation and registration is scheduled Tuesday at 7 p.m. at Wollaston Congregational Church. The project is funded through a Worship Renewal Grant from the Calvin Institute of Christian Worship, Grand Rapids, MI with funds provided by the Lilly endowment Inc.

Financial Strategies For The Recent Graduate

By JOSEPH SHADDUCK
CLU, ChFC

If you're a recent college graduate, you might be like many others in your position: spending money you don't have, not saving anything for the future, and in general digging yourself a great big hole of debt.

Even if you didn't graduate with a degree in Economics or Business Administration, it's not too late to establish some good financial habits for your own benefit.

If you're a recovering college graduate with a job, read on:

What comes after college?

If you said retirement, you'd be right. Well, not exactly. You've still got a few decades to go. This is, however, the perfect time to begin saving for retirement. If you begin saving in your twenties, even contributing a small amount over a long period of time, you will accumulate a significant amount of money by the time you consider retirement. The money you invest can earn compound interest—meaning you get interest not only on your money, but on your interest. Sounds pretty easy, right? The longer you wait to begin, however, the greater the percentage of your earnings you'll have to contribute to give yourself a decent retirement.

Your employer may have a 401(k) plan in which you can participate. With a 401(k) plan, your employer might also match a portion of the money you deposit into a retirement fund. Some companies will automatically enroll you in a 401(k). You might want to let them: contributions come from your pretax salary, so you probably won't notice them. More importantly, this is the first step in starting your retirement savings.

Debt: Credit and College Loans

The money you accepted to fund your education was, sadly, not a gift from the bank or government. Unless you received a full scholarship, you have to pay it back—potentially tens of thousands of dollars. So how can you handle this?

Consolidate your loans.

When you (or your parent) took out your loans, you made an agreement to pay them back by a certain year, with interest. This interest rate is not locked, so it will continue to increase each year. Consolidating your loans allows you to extend the amount of time you are able to pay them back. It also allows you to lock in an interest rate to avoid paying for yearly rate increases. Consolidation combines your loans into one larger loan that you pay off monthly. This may help you keep track of payments and pay them on time.

Be selective about which debt you pay off first. Pay off high-rate debt first. You can refinance your debt by transferring it from a high-rate to a lower-rate loan in order to save on interest accruing on the unpaid principal (the main portion of your loans).

Pay bills on time. You've probably been hearing this for years, but it really can't be said enough. A Citi Credit-Ed@Harris Interactive Financial Literacy Survey shows that a third of students surveyed have missed or been late on a credit card payment and a quarter have bounced a check. Not only does this earn you additional fees and higher interest, but it also shows up on your credit report, which can affect your ability to get a loan in the future.

Establishing a health care plan

After graduation, you'll probably face a new, foreign, financial obligation: paying for health insurance. Most parental health insurance plans end on your 23rd birthday. Your school policy terminated the day you graduated. This leaves you completely uninsured, which can be a real problem if you find yourself at the doctor's office.

If you're employed, your job likely offers a health care plan, and it's almost always cheaper than buying your own policy. If you just graduated from college, it may be possible to extend your coverage from your parents' plan for a few years. If neither of these options applies to you, some organizations, such as a trade association, may allow you to purchase insurance at a group rate. Since insurance rates vary from state to state, seek out major insurers in the area for a rate quote. Visit www.quotesmith.com and www.bluecares.com for quotes.

Identify your goals

Identifying the goals that are important to you will help you plan how and when you will be able to afford certain things and how much you will have to save. This might be hard to understand, but purchasing a new car at the drop of a hat is not a good way to identify goals. Neither is signing a lease on an extravagant apartment. You have to consider the repercussions. Goals you may want to save for are things such as buying furniture, a car, or eventually owning a home.

Develop good spending habits

Once you have created clear goals to work toward, create a budget. This can have a tremendous impact on your finances. Keep track of your spending—include all money spent on entertainment, food, clothing, and those purchases that fall through the cracks, like the occasional six-pack or post-gym smoothie. You may find the money you're spending on extraneous items is amounting to a bigger chunk of your paycheck than you'd like. Budget accordingly. You may have to forego dinners out or that Xbox you've had your eye on. There's nothing wrong with spending money on fun, but don't let it jeopardize your financial future.

This is an exciting point in your life—you probably have more freedom and opportunities for growth than you've ever had before, but it also exposes you to a whole new level of responsibility. Be smart about your present, and your future may look a whole lot brighter.

Firefighters, Police Shave Heads For Childhood Cancer

(Cont'd From Page 1)

Marines in Desert Storm with Rideout. Shapiro said that O'Grady, "...pulled the whole thing together."

"A lot of guys on our job are affected by cancer in one way or another," said O'Grady and his fellow firefighters on hand that day agreed.

"I have a nephew who had cancer. He was 12. It's in remission now," said Firefighter Michael Flynn of Engine 8.

"Cancer touches everybody's family in one way or another. It's the least I could do," said Steve Sweet, Ladder 2, Wollaston, who joked, "I needed a haircut anyway."

Police officers Ralph Willard and Jason MacIsaac, also, hit the barber's chair as did firefighters Paul Cohan, Michael Casey and Bob Laracy and Christopher Graham who works at WaterClub on the Boardwalk.

The volunteer barber for the event was Denyce Bobbitt who works at Harmony Cuts, Quincy.

WaterClub on the Boardwalk donated their facilities, the disc jockey, and refreshments to the St. Baldrick Foundation for the day's event. Will O'Connell is manager.

At the day's end, it didn't how much one raised as much as how much one's heart was in it. Seven-year-old Dillon Barkas went the whole mile.

On his own, Dillon, son of Quincy Police Officer Karyn Barkas, raised $152. He'll start school next week without a hair on his head.

The event was a great homecoming for Shapiro who lived at Marina Bay for 10 years. Her brother Stephen Shapiro served as master of ceremonies while her parents, Barbara and Allan Shapiro of Brockton and step-daughter Lindsay Rideout cheered her on.

"I bought hats," Shapiro said before shedding her beautifully styled thick hair. "I want to be able to show everybody how important this is."

Shapiro and her husband chose St. Baldrick's Foundation for their year volunteer service after researching dozens of charitable groups. Their goal for Quincy was $10,000 and they easily passed that mark last week.

The St. Baldrick's Foundation, based in Pasadena, CA, was founded on St. Patrick's Day in 2000 and has a lively leprechaun symbol as the founders hoped to

Phelan Hosting Beach Bash Friday

Mayor William Phelan will host an "End of Summer Beach Bash" at the city's new Bayswater Boatyard facility in Houghs Neck.

The event will feature a disc jockey, games and a barbecue. The bash will take place from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. Friday.

Phelan will be joined by Ward Councillor Leo Kelly and the Beaches and Coastal Commission in hosting the event. The Commission has hosted a number of beach parties in the past to encourage people to enjoy Quincy's beaches and coastline.

"This is going to be a fun way to celebrate the end of a great summer," said Phelan. "I encourage people to come down and enjoy this beautiful waterfront park and use the new playground, beach, and boat facility. This is going to be a wonderful community celebration."

End Of Summer BBQ Sept. 5

Quincy seniors are invited to an end-of-summer American barbecue Wednesday, Sept. 5, from 12 noon to 2 p.m. at the Beechwood on the Bay Senior Center, 440 East Squantum St., North Quincy.

The indoor-outdoor event will offer hot dogs, corn on the cob, potato salad, beans, punch and ice cream sundaes. A donation of $4 is requested.

Due to limited space, reservations are required and may be made by calling Maryann at 617-471-5712.

'THE CAMPAIGN TRAIL' Koch Campaign Moves Into 'YouTube Age' On Website

Tom Koch has launched his campaign for mayor into the "YouTube Age" on his website by releasing video clips from his first debate with incumbent Mayor William Phelan.

"This campaign is about honest leadership and communication with our residents and the Internet is just another great avenue to pursue those goals," he said.

The website, www.kochforquincy.co, currently features a series of clips from last week's debate hosted by the Houghs Neck Community Council. Koch said volunteers will be adding to the video library regularly.

lary.

"I talked a lot about doing better for Quincy — on traffic, taxes, development and taxes," Koch said.

"It was a great first chance for people to see the difference in leadership styles that I think will only become more clear as the campaign continues to move forward."

Koch said that while he focused on the issues, Mayor Phelan instead launched a series of negative personal attacks.

One of the big differences highlighted during the debate, he said, was the proposals of the candidates on how to solve the city's drug problem.

Koch outlined a "call to arms" led by the mayor's office to address the problem, while he said his opponent essentially said that the status quo is working fine.

"This is what we've been talking about — leadership," he said. "The statistics and all the recent studies and stories do not lie."

"We need leadership on this issue and so many others — from managing the massive high school project to traffic and over-development, to making sure our taxpayers get what they pay for from their rising bills."

Puleo Takes Issues To New Campaign Blog

Nick Puleo has launched a campaign blog which he plans to use as a forum for a discussion of the issues as he runs for School Committee in the November municipal election.

"The blog is a great opportunity to enhance the discussions we as a community have about the schools in our city," he said.

"For too long, we've focused on a very narrow set of issues, pushing everything else to the back burner."

"Let's put the concerns of parents, teachers and residents back on the table and have a meaningful discussion about improving quality."

and teacher contracts.

Puleo started the blog this week, posting policy positions and campaign updates.

Those wishing to view it should visit www.nickpuleo.com and open "campaign blog."

Puleo acknowledged that many Quincy voters do not have access to the Internet so he plans to hold open forums at various spots across the city.

Throughout his campaign, he has sought to expand the issue areas beyond the new Quincy High School and teacher contracts.

Last week, he proposed creating a million dollar quality fund to increase the budget for extracurricular activities and enrichment programs, which he plans to discuss on his blog.

"Having input from as many people as possible will only help to strengthen our schools," he said.

"Finding new ways to improve the experiences of children throughout the city is a challenging task."

"These aren't decisions than can or should be made in a bubble."

Liang To Hold Campaign Office Hours

If Jimmy Liang can't come to you, you can come to him.

The restaurateur and candidate for the City Council from Ward 6 has opened an Elect Jimmy Liang office at 38 Billings Rd. and will be on hand Wednesdays from 2 to 4 p.m. to meet potential constituents and discuss issues with them.

"I will be in the community going door-to-door to meet the people of Ward 6 and to listen to their concerns and ideas," said Liang. "However, I don't want to miss anyone just because they may not be at home when I visit."

"That's why I have set up special hours at my campaign office so that people can come by to voice their concerns and to hear my ideas about working toward unity in Ward 6."

And if you can't find time to meet Liang in person, you can still call him at his headquarters at 617-331-2081.

Keenan Sees 'Dramatic' Hikes In City's Water, Sewer Bills

City Councillor at Large John Keenan is concerned that an increase in MWRA rates coupled with a shift in Quincy's method of payment "will result in rather dramatic increases in water and sewer bills this year."

In a letter to Public Works Commissioner Steve O'Donnell, he asked for a comparison of an average water and sewer bill for Fiscal 2008 to one of Fiscal 2007 and how the city plans to explain it to the rate payer.

Keenan noted that Quincy's Fiscal 2008 water and sewer assessment increased by 7.5 per cent over Fiscal 2007.

At the same time, the City Council, at the recommendation of Mayor Phelan, established enterprise funds with which to pay the assessment, thus removing it from the tax levy.

"The practical effect," said Keenan, "is that water and sewer bills will increase, while the portion of tax bills that went to pay water and sewer costs will be eliminated."

"The combination of the MWRA rate increase and the shifting of costs to the enterprise accounts from the tax levy likely will result in rather dramatic increases in water and sewer bills this year," he said in his letter to O'Donnell.

"The above prompts me to inquire as to the rate of increase in the water and sewer bills of Quincy's residents and businesses for Fiscal Year 2008.

"Specifically, what will be the average residential and commercial water and sewer bills for FY 2008? What were the average bills in FY 2007 for residential and commercial ratepayers?"

"In what billing cycle will the rate increases resulting from the higher assessments and enterprise accounts be assessed?"

"Finally, does the administration have any plans to convey any information of this type to homeowners and businesses, and if so, what are those plans?"

"It is important that all ratepayers be made aware so that they can plan accordingly."

Phelan, Koch Trade Charges In Debate #1

(Cont'd From Page 2)

PUBLIC SAFETY AND DRUGS

"We're losing a generation of kids to drugs," Koch said, adding, "Status quo is not enough." He said he wants more enforcement and beat cops in Quincy Center and Wollastons.

"It's not adequate to stick our heads in the sand and hope it goes away," said Koch.

Koch promised to bring social agencies, spiritual leaders and educators together to fight the drug problem. At the same time, he believes the city needs more policing and beat cops. He charged that the police drug unit had 10 to 12 members in prior years and now the unit has five members.

Phelan said he's proud that Quincy was listed as the second safest city in the Commonwealth (FBI statistics provided by the city), second only to Newton which has a different population and income.

There is a "drug epidemic in our schools," said Phelan who then cited numerous programs that he has initiated in the past six years to combat the drug problem, including his support for police resource officers in each school, the DARE program and for children who witness violent crimes and for safe neighborhood recreation areas.

"Policing is important, but educating, getting kids young is more important," Phelan also pointed out that the new Germantown Community Center just opened in that very day.

GAY MARRIAGE

The hour long debate concluded with a question asking the candidates where they stood on the issue of gay marriage.

Phelan supports gay marriage calling the issue a matter of equal rights. If he were in the legislature, he would have voted for it.

Koch said, "I believe marriage is between a man and a woman. We will treat everybody with respect." He said he will support the laws of the state which recognize gay marriage.

Rev. William English, pastor of Holy Trinity Church, attended the debate as did candidates for at-large council seats, Jennifer Logue and Victor Ng, and current Councillor At Large John Keenan, Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond, former Councillor Michael Cheney and School Committee members David McCarthy and Jim Timmins.

The election will be held Tuesday, Nov. 6.

State School Builders To Tour Sterling, Central

Representatives of the Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA) will tour the Sterling and Central Middle Schools this week to substantiate the high priority placed by the city on repairs to both buildings.

The MSBA originally gave the schools a rating of "3" but Mayor William Phelan and the School Committee appealed for reconsideration and the MSBA raised the priority to "4" as in schools with the greatest need.

"We have worked hard to have both schools receive the improvements that they need," said School Superintendent Richard DeCristofaro.

"Our efforts to change the MSBA designation allow us to up the priority list and get our schools repaired sooner rather than later.

"I commend the Mayor and the School Committee for their work to make sure that the needs of Central and Sterling remain a priority."

The aim of the tour, which was announced by Phelan, DeCristofaro and Director of Buildings Mike Ryan, is to substantiate the interest forms filed by the city in order to be eligible for state reimbursement of renovation expenses.

Following the building reviews, the MSBA will continue its funding process in the coming months.

School Bells Sept. 5 For Grades 1-9

and full day kindergarten supported by a significant increase in academic classroom text/learning materials.

"This budget provides opportunities for special populations of students, technology for classrooms and excellent class size."

Students returning to five of the city's public schools will be greeted by familiar faces in new roles at the helm of their schools.

Earl Metzler, who was principal at the Sterling Middle School, takes over from Lou Ioanilli as principal of North Quincy High School.

Christine Barrett, who was assistant to Metzler last year, becomes acting principal at Sterling.

Renee Lalumiere, who was acting principal a year ago, takes over from Kevin Marks as principal at Montclair School.

Ruth Witmer has been promoted from assistant to principal succeeding Dennis Carini at both the Lincoln-Hancock School and the Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center.

The final day of school for high school seniors in good standing will be Friday, May 23, with graduation for Quincy High School scheduled for Monday, June 2, and North Quincy High School Tuesday, June 3.

Monday, June 16, will be the last day of school (Day 180 by state requirement) for all the other students unless up to an extra five days are needed to make up for cancellations during the year. The final day then will be Monday, June 23.

Vacations of a week or more are scheduled for Dec. 23 to Jan. 2, Feb. 18 to Feb. 22 and April 21 to 25.

School hours for elementary schools (grades K-5) are divided into two tiers.

The first tier for grades 1-5 will be 7:45 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Atherton Hough, Charles A. Bernazzani, Lincoln-Hancock, Merrymount and Wollaston Schools. Kindergartens will have two sessions, 7:45 to 10:30 a.m. and 11:15 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The second tier for grades 1-5 will be 8:15 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at the Beechwood Knoll, Montclair, Francis W. Parker, Snug Harbor, Squantum and Clifford H. Marshall Schools. Kindergarten will have two sessions, 8:15 to 11 a.m. and 11:45 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

The Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center will operate from 7:35 a.m. to 1:50 p.m. with kindergarten sessions from 7:35 to 10:20 a.m. and 11:05 a.m. to 1:50 p.m.

Hours for the five middle schools, Central, Point Webster, Sterling, Atlantic and Broad Meadows, will be from 8:15 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and the high schools from 7:45 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

QARI Plans Citizenship, ESOL Classes In September

Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI) will offer expanded ESOL (English for Speakers of Other Languages) classes in four levels and two citizenship classes in September.

"Through the support of the Comcast and Sovereign Bank Foundations, QARI has been able to expand the ESOL program and reach more people in need of language classes," said John Brothers, executive director of QARI.

The primary emphasis of the program is on ESOL for living and employment, that is, English skills that will allow individuals to compete successfully in the workplace and pursue a higher standard of living.

For the Fall semester, QARI will offer six classes including Intensive Beginner, Beginner, Advanced Beginner, Intermediate and Advanced Intermediate levels.

ESOL classes, scheduled to start in mid-September, are offered in the morning and the evening to accommodate adult students. They meet twice a week for 16 weeks, except for Intensive Beginner which meets for 12 weeks.

Registration is on a first come, first served basis and class size is limited. The fee for most classes is $90. Registered students may purchase their books for $25 from QARI.

Fallon Ambulance To Host Critical Stress Conference

Fallon Ambulance Service will host a regional conference on crisis intervention Thursday through Sunday, Sept. 20-23, at the Sheraton Braintree Hotel.

The conference is presented by the International Critical Incident Stress Foundation, Inc. (ICISF), which assists individuals and organizations in mitigating the impact of traumatic distress.

The conferences are designed to benefit law enforcement officers, healthcare professionals, educators, clergy and other social workers.

Topics to be explored at the four-day conference include terrorism, suicide prevention, pastoral crisis intervention, grief following trauma, line of duty deaths and post combat recovery and reintegration of first responders.

Christine Hamilton, director of Risk Management at Fallon Ambulance, called the work of the ICISF extremely critical to healthcare workers.

"We live in a different world following 9-11 and that has changed the role and responsibilities of anyone in a 'first responder' situation," she said.

Fallon provides ambulance service for Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Milton, Dedham and Brookline. from its headquarters at 111 Brook Rd., West Quincy.

Sunflower Contest Ends Friday

The 12th annual citywide "grow together" family contest to grow the biggest sunflower outside of Kansas will come to a conclusion Friday, Aug. 31.

The family that grows the tallest sunflower by that date will receive gifts donated by Quincy businesses and have their picture published in The Quincy Sun.

Participants are invited to call the Beechwood Community Life Center at 617-471-5712 to report the measurements of their sunflowers.

More than 200 Quincy families registered in the contest and planted hybrid sunflower seeds donated by Almquist Flowerland in June.

The seeds were distributed at Beechwood, City Hall and The Sun to encourage children, parents and grandparents to plant and garden together.

Excellence In Nursing And Betty Stone Memorial Scholarship Recipients Named Quincy Medical Center Hosts Appreciation Night

In honor of National Nurses Week, Quincy Medical Center recently hosted an Evening of Appreciation for its nursing staff.

The event held at Furnace Brook Golf Club included a comedy show and the presentation of the 2007 Excellence in Nursing Award and three Betty Stone Memorial Scholarships.

The 2007 Excellence in Nursing Award, designed to honor outstanding professionalism and compassion of a QMC staff nurse, was presented to Kerri Piccuito Dawidczyk, RN, a staff nurse with QMC's A6 Medical/Surgical patient care unit.

Piccuto Dawidczyk first came to QMC more than a decade ago as a high school student interning at Quincy Medical Center through the medical center's longstanding partnership with the Quincy Public School system.

After graduating from Quincy High School in 1998, Kerri joined QMC as a nurse technician and continued to work at the medical center while completing nursing school at Quincy College. A member of the United States Marine Corps, in 2003

Piccuto Dawidczyk's unit was deployed to MCB Camp Lejeune in North Carolina, where she completed a one-year mission as part of Operation Iraqi Freedom.

Piccuto Dawidczyk was nominated by her nursing colleagues for her expert clinical skills and continued commitment to enhance nursing care at QMC. She also was recognized for her role as a mentor to the next generation of students training at QMC. She is a leader within the Staff Nurse Council and has continually worked to promote quality, respect and patient care.

In addition, to the 2007 Excellence in Nursing Award, the Betty Stone Memorial Scholarship winners were also announced during the evening celebration.

The Betty Stone Memorial Scholarship honors the life of Elizabeth "Betty" Pywell-Stone, RN, a beloved nurse and colleague who worked at QMC for 24 years. The scholarship was created in her memory as part of the Nurses' Appreciation Fund, which supports programs designed to recognize the compassionate care and expert skill of our caregivers by providing professional development opportunities to further enhance the advanced nursing care at Quincy Medical Center.

This year three $1,000 scholarships were presented:

- Braintree resident Janette Kingston, a nurse technician with the A3 Medical/Surgical Unit. Kingston joined QMC in 1997 and is in her first year of the full time RN program at Quincy College.

- Brighton resident Roxanne White Barboza, a nurse technician in the Emergency Department. White Barboza joined QMC in 2004 and is working towards her RN degree at Roxbury Community College.

- Quincy resident Laina Crispo, a nurse technician who joined QMC in 2006 after interning at QMC through Quincy High School's Patient Care Program. She is enrolled in nursing school at Quincy College.

Quincy Medical Center is a 232-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services.

Volunteers Sought For Beechwood Center

Beechwood on the Bay is seeking volunteers to assist with the rapidly expanding activities at the Senior Center.

"We have welcomed increasing numbers of senior participants throughout the summer and are hoping to provide new and expanded activities this fall," said

"We are a private, charitable organization and have very small budget for our Senior Center. That's the bad news. The good news is that wonderful caring folk help us — as volunteers."

Currently, Beechwood is seeking volunteers to assist with arts & crafts, lunch programs, horseshoes and outdoor recreation, knitting and crocheting instruction and "Rocking Nannies" (volunteers who help in the infants' room).

A volunteer orientation and social is being planned for September. Call Maryann at 617-471-5712 for more information and to volunteer.

Quincy Author Reading From First Novel Sept. 5

Quincy author Matthew Jarpe will be reading from his first novel, Radio Freefall, on Wednesday, Sept. 5, at 6 p.m. in the Main Meeting Room of Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy. Jarpe will also donate a copy of his book to the library collection.

Jarpe's book features a megalomaniac plotting to take over the world while rock stars, a computer geeks and the crew of a space ship in orbit attempt to take him down.

Publishers' Weekly reported that "Rock and roll and old-school hard SF (science fiction) got together like peanut butter and jelly in Jarpe's debut novel."

Jarpe lives in Quincy with his wife Michelle Morris and their son, Sam. He works as a biochemist at Biogen Idec, Cambridge.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Inspections & Education

There are many occupancies that we inspect yearly: restaurants, bars, lodging homes and gas stations are just a few.

We're in these places once, maybe twice if an inspection requires a follow-up. We then attempt to check whether in place fire systems are being maintained as specified by code, and overall, if combustible contents are in check and potential ignition sources are isolated or minimal. While each type of occupancy requires us to look upon it with unique scrutiny, our education efforts are a major part of any inspection, maybe the most important part.

The real payoff to inspections, particularly in those occupancies frequented by the public or those unique residential occupancies such as a lodging home, occurs when owners and management embrace what we are attempting to sell during those inspections, that being the basics of a fire safe environment for that type of occupancy.

It really isn't that complicated, not is it all that difficult, while certain occupancies require a different emphasis. For instance, we don't approach a gas station inspection as we do an assembly occupancy; there is less emphasis on exit access for instance, than there is in an assembly occupancy. However, in any of our inspections, we attempt to focus on specific risks conveying the importance to the owners or managers of minimizing those risks throughout the year, not just for that day.

Whether our efforts arise from common sense, from actual fire experience or fire statistics, the importance of our message can't be over-emphasized while there can be a frustration when our efforts are ignored. I believe that all of us live with an underlying optimistic wish that such and such a tragedy can't happen to me.

Our frustrations as inspectors occur, where we have experienced the downside of fire, the devastation, both in lives lost and property loss and know that it can. Through inspections, we attempt to bridge that gap between the optimistic wish that says it can't happen here, and the reality of our experience which conveys that it can, but this is all you have to do to minimize the chances of it occurring or the impact it does.

I understand that all sorts of demands and responsibilities distract owners and managers, and that fire safety may not be at the forefront of their focus each and every day. Our education efforts, however, year after year, are an attempt to develop a solid foundational priority for it where it becomes effortless for the owner or manager to maintain.

We are here and eager to add to your awareness of fire safety as well and welcome the opportunity to do so. Thank you.

License Board Mulls:

Is A Cup Of Coffee Food?

License Board members mulled the question of whether a cup of coffee is food or not as they considered an application by Steve Hebert, owner of Java Java, for a fast food license at 60 Quincy Shore Drive.

Hebert filed an application under the city's Fast Food Vendor ordinance but labeled his request "under protest" because he will be serving only liquid items at the Java Java outlet.

Herbert and his attorney claim he does not need such a license.

Attorney Carl Johnson said Hebert has a right to his drive thru operation because his liquid menu is not covered by the requirements of a Common Victualer license or the city's Fast Food Vendor ordinance.

The Fast Food Vendor ordinance describes such items as pizza and hamburgers but makes no mention of liquid items.

As a result, Johnson said that Java Java's menu "does not constitute the kind of food controlled under the ordinance." Johnson also cited the coffee machines in the city's 24-hour stores, such as 7-11's.

Police Chief Robert Crowley also questioned the fast food label for Java Java's offerings. Crowley said, "I'm not in favor of this location. I've said it numerous times, but I don't think it falls under fast food definition."

The board reviewed definitions of "food" provided by Assistant City Solicitor Robert Quinn and discussed Java Java's menu before deciding it was nourishment and voting unanimously to consider a Fast Food Vendor license for the business at their next meeting.

The Java Java menu includes such items as a "Snicker" made of rich dark chocolate, a "Milky Way" which is blend of white chocolate with caramel topped with whipped cream and a "Nutty Irishman" which includes macadamia nuts, whipped cream and dark chocolate.

The next meeting is Tuesday, Sept. 11.

Attorney Cedrone Logan Moves To McGrath Highway

Attorney Christine Cedrone Logan, a onetime member of the School Committee for eight years and its vice chairman, has relocated her law practice to 21 McGrath Highway, Suite 306, Quincy Center.

Putty vs. Tape vs. String

Q. I'm about to start a project to replace my old kitchen faucet, and of course have been getting all sorts of advice about the best way to do it. I'm confused, though, when it comes to sealing the pipe connections. Some people tell me to use a product called plumber's putty, others say use tape, and one retired plumber said string is the way to go. What kind of tape or string are they talking about? Which of the three is best to use? — Terry Y., White Plains, N.Y.

A. Any one of these three products can be used at your discretion in plumbing repairs, as they accomplish pretty much the same thing. They are placed around the threads of screw-in connections to provide a seal against water leaks.

Plumber's putty is a vegetable-based material that does not dry out and is easy to apply. It's used in other applications besides sealing threads, because it can be rolled into a string or a ball or spread along a surface. Plumber's tape, more properly called Teflon tape, is wrapped tightly around pipe-stem threads before connections are screwed together, sealing the threads.

Packing string is an older type of sealing material that is often seen wrapped around the stems of older fixtures. It's still a versatile and reliable product, resistant to heat and pressure, though perhaps a bit more frustrating to apply than the two products above.

None of these products is a replacement for proper-fitting hardware and gaskets. Follow the directions provided by either the sink manufacturer or included with the replacement or repair materials. If directions call for use of one of these sealants, use the recommended type: putty, tape or string.

Send questions or home-repair tips to megur2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Helpful Hints From Experts

Home Office Workers Deal With The Sounds Of Summer

(NAPS) — Many traditional joys of summer can pose challenges for those who work from home.

Summer can disrupt the typically tranquil office environment of home-based workers. Conducting business can be difficult with a radio blaring outside, the kids next door yelling and splashing in their pool or a neighbor's weed whacker whirring in the background. According to Jeff Zbar, a leading home office expert and creator of the resource www.ChiefHomeOfficer.com, not only do these sounds of summer make it hard for home-based businesspeople to work, but when making phone calls, the distractions can leave the person on the other end with an unprofessional impression of the at-home worker.

Whether they're entrepreneurs or teleworkers, Zbar says home office workers can reduce distracting noises with a few simple steps:

- Buy a CD featuring ambient sounds such as waves crashing or rain falling. Not only will the CD block out the noise; it will help at-home workers relax on the job.

- Turn on a fan. The gentle hum and "white noise" will muffle distracting sounds and the mild breeze makes a home office more pleasant.

- Move to another room. If work is portable, pick it up and take it to another area in the house, away from the noise. The change in setting might also boost productivity.

- Keep kids occupied. Give kids who are home for the summer a quiet activity, such as an art project or a new book to read. Save more dynamic activities like playing outdoors for the end of the day when business is winding down.

- Tap technology. Wireless innovations for computers and headsets help make work more portable and productive. Home-based workers can move throughout the house and remain connected. Many wireless headsets today even come with an extended boom and noise-canceling microphone to filter out background noises and let the user adjust talking and listening volumes to guarantee crystal-clear sound.

"Wireless laptops and headsets are two useful tools that let home workers multitask with ease," says Zbar. "Laptops provide portability and access, and most headsets feature one-touch controls, hands-free mobility and the range needed to walk around the house and even go outside while on a phone call. That's what today's productive home officer needs."

The Plantronics CS55H Home Edition is an example of a wireless headset that offers all of these helpful features. It can be purchased at office superstores nationwide and at www.plantronics.com.

By combining technology and traditional methods, at-home workers will be able to overcome noisy distractions and get their work done more efficiently—so they can enjoy some summer fun.

QCAP To Host 'Risky Mortgage' Seminar Sept. 8

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) will host a one-day seminar entitled "Are You In A Risky Mortgage" Saturday, Sept. 8 from 1 to 3 p.m. at 1509 Hancock St., fourth floor conference room, downtown Quincy.

Topics for discussion include:

- Are you at risk of foreclosure?
- Questions you should ask your broker or loan officer

- Products available for those who are in questionable mortgages.

Registration is required. No personal information will be collected at this seminar except your first name.

For more information on this workshop or future workshops, contact Ann Marie Casey at 617-479-8181 ext. 119.

Quincy Community Action Homebuyer Workshop

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) will sponsor a free, three-session homebuyer workshop Sept. 6, 11 and 13 in the fourth floor conference room, 1509 Hancock St., Quincy, from 6 to 9 p.m.

Participants must attend all three sessions to receive a certificate of attendance.

Workshop speakers are professionals from different real estate fields. Participants receive a workbook, which contains references that pertain to homebuying.

Upon completion of the course, participants will receive a certificate, which is a pre-requisite for down-payment closing cost assistance, favorable soft second and Mass Housing mortgages.

Registration is required.

For more information, contact Ann Marie Casey at 617-479-8181 ext. 119.

Decorating Trends: The Outside Story

(NAPS) – According to a recent survey by the American Institute of Architects, 64 percent of design firms are seeing an increased interest in outdoor living spaces, as compared to just 47 percent a year or so ago. A patio or deck is one of the top three features people look for in a new home, with porches growing in popularity. The theme these days seems to be upscale style and coordinated accessories to create an outdoor space that mirrors the interior. Three trends have emerged:

1. Creation of a personalized oasis through garden décor.
2. Adding some heat with grills, outdoor fireplaces and fire pits.
3. Use of decorative outdoor lighting, ranging from solar to outdoor candles.

For those homeowners looking to get started with the creation of a compelling outdoor space or to maximize what's already been created, you have to start with the basics. That means making your wood deck, fences, siding and furniture look their best.

Experts recommend looking for products that are specifically designed to withstand harsh weather conditions, from torrential rain to strong UV rays. To meet this need, Behr has developed a line of Premium Stains and Weatherproofers, all with NanoGuard technology. This innovative technology uses tiny nanoparticles to create an interlocking molecular structure that fills the voids created by larger particles, resulting in products that provide superior adhesion; a durable finish that resists cracking, peeling and blistering; and excellent dirt, moisture and UV resistance. The result is that these are Behr's longest lasting exterior wood coating products and all have easy water clean-up.

Depending on your outdoor space and the condition of your wood, you can choose from four different opacity options from Behr for weatherproofing your wood, each with its own unique benefits:

- Premium Solid Color Weatherproofing Stain-hides surface imperfections but lets the wood texture show through.

- Premium Semi-Transparent Weatherproofing Stain-excellent for adding new color, while allowing the natural beauty of wood grain to show through.

- Premium Wood-Toned

Weatherproofing Wood Finish-adds a hint of wood-toned color yet allows wood grain to completely show through.

- Premium Transparent Weatherproofing Wood Finish-allows the natural beauty of the wood grain to completely show through.

Experts also advise looking for products such as these that offer exceptional warranties, which gives you the confidence of knowing that after you weatherproof your deck, porch, patio, fence or siding, you can then concentrate on decorating and enjoying your space for years to come.

Visit www.behr.com for more helpful tips and information.

Hydrangeas Add Splash Of Color

(NAPS) – Hydrangea fans can paint their gardens this season with a new breed of colorful blooms.

Gardeners across the country can create a riot of color with these red, pink, blue and purple hydrangeas that add beauty and variety to mass landscapes, border plantings, container plants and even partially shaded areas. Here's a closer look:

Whatever The Weather

The new hydrangeas produce flower buds on new growth in the spring. This

A Colorful History

Forever & Ever Hydrangeas®, the original in the series, was introduced in 2005. Its mop-headed flowers grow pink or blue depending on soil pH. Each has a long season of bloom and the large flowers can be enjoyed as cut or dried flowers. Pruning of spent blooms encourages more blooms throughout the season.

Red was the second in the series. With burgandy-red stems, its mop-headed flowers begin blooming red and then transform to shades of purple as the blooms age.

A third, Double Pink variety was introduced in 2006. It is a showstopper with 6-inch, full clusters of double star-shaped pink flowers that create a billowy mound on a compact plant.

The Double Pink can produce pink or beautiful blue blooms depending on soil pH. Alkaline soils produce pink blooms while acidic soils result in blue blooms. Ask your garden center professional or state extension agent how to obtain a soil test to determine pH.

School Superintendent's Message

New School Year Offers Excitement, Challenges, Opportunity

It is an honor and privilege to welcome students, parents and the Quincy Public School's staff to a new school year.

This 2007-2008 school year offers excitement and challenges amidst excellent educational and enrichment opportunities.

As we all settle into September, fall open houses, orientation evenings, academics, athletics and new challenges, please understand that we begin, as always, together. The invaluable partnership among our schools and the families we serve is critical to the success of each and every one of our students.

The Quincy Public

Dr. RICHARD
DeCRISTOFARO

Schools is fortunate again this year to have an increase in our school budget. This additional funding has allowed us to continue our successful early intervention programs in literacy and full day kindergarten supported by a significant increase in academic classroom text/learning materials. This budget provides opportunities for special populations of students, technology for classrooms and excellent class size.

Our school system again has been supported by the caring leadership of Mayor Phelan, Vice Chair Elaine Dwyer and the extraordinarily hard working school committee: Dave McCarthy, Anne Mahoney, Jim Timmins, Linda Stice and Kevin Milvey. I also want to thank The Quincy City Council for their invaluable input in regard to this year's budget.

It is with confidence and pride in the Quincy Public Schools that I welcome students and staff back and pledge my support to all of the families we have the privilege to serve. If ever you need to speak with me, feel free to call my office at any time!

Sincerely,
Richard DeCristofaro, Ed.D

Back-To-School Safety Rules

By LT. DAN MINTON
Crime Prevention Officer

It's that time of year again. Time to send your children back to school. It can be a frightening time for parents, but if you prepare your child for the big world you may help save them from getting into trouble.

- Make sure your children are taking the safest route to school and friends' houses, one that avoids danger spots like alleys, new construction, and wooded areas.

- Encourage your children to walk and play with friends, not alone, and to stay in well-lit, open areas where others can see them.

- Don't hang a house key around your child's neck. It's a telltale sign that you won't be at home when they return from school. Put it inside a pocket or sock.

- Teach children to walk confidently and stay alert to what's going on around them.

- Encourage your children to look out for other kids' safety and report anything they see that doesn't seem right.

- Tell your children to stay away from strangers who hang around playgrounds, public restrooms and empty buildings.

- Rehearse with children their full name, address, and phone number (including area code) and how to make emergency phone calls from home and public phones.

- Tell children never to accept gifts or rides from someone they don't know well.

- Check your neighborhood for areas that threaten children's safety, like brush in wooded areas, overgrown shrubbery, abandoned buildings, bad lighting, vacant lots littered with debris, no sidewalks or bike paths next to busy streets.

- Teach children to go to a store clerk or security guard and ask for help if you become separated in a store or shopping mall. Tell them never to go into the parking lot alone. Accompany your children to public restrooms.

- Teach children no one, not even someone they know, has the right to touch them in a way that makes them feel uncomfortable. Tell them that they have the right to say "No" to any adult in this situation.

If you teach the above tips to your children, they will be better prepared to survive in this great big, sometimes crazy, world.

College Planning

Get An 'A' In Financial Aid 101: Simple Tips For Funding Your College Education

(NAPS) — In today's job market, very few dispute the importance and benefits of higher education. The record number of students enrolling in colleges and universities across the country certainly backs this belief. However, while incoming students get ready to embrace the academic and social rigors of college life, many will have their most difficult test before they even arrive on campus...paying for tuition.

The cost of tuition continues to skyrocket. In fact, on average, the cost of college tuition at both public and private universities has doubled over the last 20 years. The news is not all bad though, as the selection of financing options and financial aid packages available to students continues to grow. Before you begin exploring the many different choices, consider these tips from GMAC Bank, which offers private education loans for undergraduate, graduate and continuing education students.

• Know your costs. The first step in financing a college education is to get a clear picture of how much it will cost and to begin building an annual budget for each year of college, per student.

"You need to look beyond just the tuition of a college or university," said Debra Scott, director of the education loan program for GMAC Bank. "College expenses also include dorm fees or rent for off-campus apartments, meal plans, the cost of books and other miscellaneous fees, even the cost of traveling home during school breaks."

• Know your options.

Today's students and parents need to be savvy about uncovering programs that can offer financial assistance. While the variety and choice of options might seem confusing, the best starting point is to consider three primary sources: federal assistance, scholarships and private student loans.

• Federal Assistance — Begin your financial aid quest by looking into grants and loans offered by the federal government. For example, federal grants such as Pell Grants can range from $100 to $4,000 per year based on level of need and do not require repayment. Federal student loans, such as the well-known Stafford or Perkins loans, are available for undergraduate students, graduate students and for parents of dependent undergraduate students and do require repayment.

• Scholarships — Like grants, these are funds used to pay for higher education that do not need to be repaid. Scholarships are offered by a wide range of institutions—from awards offered by your potential college or university to those bestowed by local organizations, corporations and a variety of other sources. Scholarships are awarded based on a variety of criteria (not all are based on academic performance or financial need), so be sure to check for further information on eligibility. Leave no stone unturned in your search, as many scholarships go unused each year.

• Private Student Loans — Another option is the private student loan. Flexible by nature, these types of loans can cover all or a significant amount of your tuition and other expenses. Private loans can be used to cover any cost associated with attending school, such as tuition, books, computers, travel and living expenses. Typically deferred until after graduation, they can also be used in coordination with other sources of funding. For example, a financial aid package may only cover tuition and board, so a private student loan may be helpful in paying for other education-related expenses.

"Students should realize that they are not limited to one type of financial aid," added Scott. "More and more students are funding their education through a variety of sources including a financial aid mix of private loans in combination with savings, federal loans, grants, or scholarships and part-time jobs."

Arranging financing for college is the first real-life lesson in managing money that many young people will experience. With some thorough research, you could be well on your way to getting an "A" in Financial Aid 101. www.edloans.gmacbank.com for more information.

Gearing Up For School Today

(NAPS) — For millions of American families, back-to-school shopping has evolved from a quick dash for paper and pencils into a process that begins much earlier in the summer.

The U.S. Department of Education estimates that almost 18 million students will enroll in American colleges and universities this year. And a new national survey shows that families with college-bound students have been shopping for weeks for the electronic gear that students will rely on during their academic careers.

Responding to the survey, commissioned by electronics retailer Circuit City and conducted by independent research firm Decision Analyst, Inc., 53 percent of college students said they first started shopping for tech gear two months or more before classes began. The same consumer research revealed that nearly 62 percent of U.S. colleges and universities now require or recommend that students own computers.

"There's no question that college students use their computers day in and day out, not only for academics and communications, but also for music and video games," said Elliot Becker, vice president for technology at Circuit City. "But companies are only the tip of the iceberg. These days, students take a wide variety of gear to college. Whether it's cell phones, MP3 players, digital cameras or dorm-sized TVs, today's college students are more 'plugged in' than ever before."

Better Grades

Nearly 90 percent of students surveyed said owning their own computers helped them earn better grades. Eight out of ten students said they would choose a notebook computer over a desktop model.

It's important to choose a computer model that fits the student's individual and academic needs. Many college Web sites post computer requirements for their various course offerings. Families should remember that a computer is a tool their students will use throughout their college careers, so they should make sure they buy a model with enough memory and computing power to accommodate student needs.

Different Usage Patterns

It's not surprising that college students use their computers and cell phones on a daily basis. But the survey also revealed different usage patterns for male and female students. Male college students tend to use MP3 players and video game consoles more often than female students; female students use digital cameras more often than the guys.

The survey also hints at some subtle regional differences: Western college students watch slightly less TV and take more pictures than their counterparts elsewhere in the country. More students in the Northeast are likely to pay video games than students elsewhere.

Bank To Distribute Back-To-School Kits

For the remainder of the week, South Coastal Bank's Quincy branch office at 1259 Hancock St. will give away back-to-school kits to students K through 5.

The kits will include notebooks, folders, pencils, pens, crayons, magic markers, glue sticks and pencil boxes. The bank has 250 of them and will pass them out while the supply lasts.

They will be distributed to students only and each student is limited to just one. Students are not required to have South Coastal Bank account.

A Job Well Done

On Thursday, Aug. 16, at approximately 10:40 p.m., Officers Tom Loughlin and Joe Pacciorretti were dispatched to Ross Parkway in Quincy Square on a call of a woman who just had her purse stolen. Enroute to the area, the officers were told that the suspect, a blonde female, was headed to the parking garage followed by a witness.

Officer Pacciorretti reported he had a suspect on the Paul Harold Bridge. As Officer Loughlin approached the area, a male pointed to the area where Officer Pacciorretti had the female stopped. Officer Loughlin also noted an older female was approaching. Officer Pacciorretti. The male then walked up to Officer Loughlin and told him that he was the witness who called. He said he was in Alba's Restaurant when he saw the two women flee out the door.

A woman in the restaurant said they had tried to steal her purse. The witness stated the two females were definitely together. Officer Loughlin spoke with the older woman, who stated the blonde female was her daughter and they did not steal the purse.

As Sgt. Robert Bina went to Alba's Restaurant and located the victim, Officer Loughlin then attempted to place the daughter in the rear of the cruiser. The daughter (suspect #1) then resisted by kneeling Officer Loughlin in the leg, then scratched his hands with her fingernails. She was placed in handcuffs and under arrest.

Sgt. Bina went to Alba's and interviewed the victim, who said she was outside the restaurant talking on her cell phone when the blonde woman walked by and grabbed at her purse. The victim held on to her purse and during the brief struggle, the older woman (suspect #2 - the mother) said to her daughter, suspect #1, "What are you doing?" Suspect #1 retorted, "You told me to do it!"

The victim showed Sgt. Bina the abrasion marks on her arm from the purse straps she received from her struggle to hold onto the purse. The victim said the two suspects left and this is when the male witness told her to go inside and call the police while he followed the suspects.

Sgt. Bina arrived on scene with the victim, who confirmed the identity of both females, identifying the blonde as the suspect who grabbed the purse. Both suspects - the daughter and the mother crime team - were placed under arrest and transported to the police station.

During the booking, suspect #1 gave a false name, but through fingerprints, her actual identity showed she had three default warrants and two straight warrants. Suspect #1, a 20-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with attempt to commit a crime, providing a false name to a police officer after arrest, resisting arrest, assault and battery on a police officer, along with the five outstanding warrants. Suspect #2, the 40-year-old Quincy mother, was charged with attempt to commit a crime.

Nice Work!

In this case, the outcome worked out well. The thieves were unsuccessful in stealing the purse, the victim suffered minor injuries, there were two witnesses and the suspects were caught.

Carrying a purse, handbag or pocketbook provides opportunity for would-be thieves. Consider the need to carry a purse and the tedious tasks of replacing documents such as credit cards, licenses, etc., along with sentimental items that cannot be replaced. For this victim, all she really needed to carry was her license, credit card and cash, which could be carried in a pocket or other hard-to-steal location.

LT. DAN MINTON

MASSACHUSETTS STATE TROOPER Sgt. Michael Crosby addressed North Quincy High School students about driving safety.

Assemblies Highlight Pre-Prom Safety At North Quincy High School

The Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit's Student Police Academy, led by Lieutenant Dan Minton and North Quincy High School teacher, Rimas Ambraziejus, recently held classes for seniors at North Quincy High School to encourage safety awareness for the Prom and events surrounding graduation.

The assemblies were held over a three-day period.

The first presentation covered, "Drinking and Driving," with Officer Bill Ward discussing the laws and penalties. He recounted many tragic stories he has witnessed as a police officer.

Videos were shown about a true story involving alcohol poisoning and a re-creation of a drunk driving offense.

Lt. Minton and Officer Ward brought out "Fatal Vision" goggles, which imitate the effects of being under the influence of alcohol. Students were shown the simplicity of passing field sobriety tests when sober and then put the special goggles on to see how their skills were diminished with the very same tests.

On the next day, State Trooper Sgt. Mike Crosby brought his "Roll-Over" car to the school and exhibited what happens to adults and children when they are not strapped in seatbelts and the car rolls over. During the demonstration, Sgt. Crosby also recounted numerous stories about the tragedies he has seen and stressed the importance of wearing seatbelts.

On the third day, a special guest, Lynda Steverman, spoke to the senior class in the auditorium about "Choices." She spoke about the death of her son after drinking at a college party and walking away down a rural roadway. There was an extensive search for him, but sadly, he was not found until months later about a quarter mile from the party house.

Mrs. Steverman's message to the seniors was that alcohol impairment can lead to dire consequences. She showed a heart felt documentary about her son and spoke of the incident in depth.

She then told the seniors they are now adults and are responsible for their decisions to use alcohol. She also stressed the importance of taking care of each other, especially when friends may have had too much to drink.

The students were deeply affected by the presentation, which led to numerous ovations.

After the presentation, Principal Louis Ioanilli said, "The auditorium was full and you could have heard a pin drop."

Many of the students came up to Mrs. Steverman and thanked her for sharing her personal story.

The Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit thanks Trooper Crosby and Mrs. Steverman for their efforts in making this year's prom season safe.

LYNDA STEVERMAN speaks to students about alcohol "Choices" and consequences as the students become adults.

CYCLING AND FOOT INJURIES

If you are an avid cyclist, you know that there are times during a great ride that you feel at one with the machine. However, unless everything is aligned correctly and you are properly warmed up, you can hurt your feet. Overtraining, improper seat height, and not warming up can contribute to an inflammation of your Achilles tendon. The stress that cycling puts on the tiny sesamoid bones beneath the first metatarsal bones can lead to sesamoiditis. Cyclists may also experience numbness, tingling, or burning in the toes. This is a result of small nerve branches being cramped. If this occurs, try wider shoes or loosening your straps or laces. If any of these problems persist, your podiatrist can recommend treatment.

If you are the unfortunate victim of a sports injury, be sure to follow through with a professional diagnosis and treatment plan from your podiatrist. Early intervention can often speed healing and recovery time. We'll also recommend ways to prevent foot problems from recurring. Don't suffer with any foot injury, condition, disease, or other problem. Call on us instead at 781-986-3668. Foot care for the family is conveniently available at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Dancing Your Way to a Fit Lifestyle

Q. I enjoy dancing and started taking a group exercise dance class twice a week. Each class lasts about an hour, and we move the entire class, leaving me exhausted at the end of class. Compared with other types of cardio activities such as the treadmill or biking, could I just use my dance class as my cardiovascular workout or would I need to do more?

A. Dancing is an excellent form of exercise that is becoming more and more popular with television shows featuring dancing, home DVDs and videos, and group exercise classes in fitness centers focusing on dance-inspired workouts.

Dance styles from ballroom, Latin dance, hip-hop, funk and many more are being used to give exercisers a challenging workout while still having fun. The moves done while dancing are definitely beneficial cardiovascular exercise — how much you challenge yourself will determine how many calories you burn.

On average, a dance class in which the participant is moving the entire time can burn from 300 to 400 calories for a 55-minute class. This type of cardiovascular workout is great due to the use of your entire body and the constant movement.

Many people are able to keep their heart rate elevated throughout a dance group exercise class because they are not thinking that they are exercising, but just having fun. Also, the challenge of learning new dance styles and choreography keeps participants excited.

But while dancing provides a great workout, it cannot be your ONLY type of exercise. Since you attend class twice a week, you would still need to exercise two to three days more each week. This should include some type of strength training and additional cardiovascular workouts.

A balanced workout is important for promoting overall fitness and should include at least four days a week of cardiovascular exercise and at least three days a week of strength and flexibility training.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. Andrea Renee Wyatt, M.S.S., C.S.C.S., is a certified personal trainer with an extensive background in strength and conditioning as well as therapeutic recreation. Part Of Healthy Back-To School Routine

Meningitis Vaccination Urged For Adolescents 11-18

(NAPS) — A recent national consumer survey found that while most parents have heard of meningococcal disease or meningitis, nearly half are not aware that public health officials recommend vaccination for adolescents and young adults and only one in three patients have had their child vaccinated against the disease. However, once made aware of meningococcal disease and the availability of a vaccine to prevent it, 81 percent of parents indicated they would speak to their child's physician about vaccination.

The National Meningitis Association (NMA) urges parents to talk to their child's doctor about meningococcal disease and to make an appointment to have their adolescent children vaccinated to help keep them healthy this school year.

Meningococcal disease is a serious bacterial infection that can lead to death or permanent disability within hours. Adolescents and young adults are at increased risk for the disease; however, a majority of cases among this age group can potentially be prevented by vaccination. Health officials now recommend meningococcal immunization for all adolescents and young adults' 11-18 years of age. Only one shot is needed to help protect adolescents during these years when they are at higher risk for getting the disease.

"My son Chris was a healthy, active high school student and star athlete when meningococcal disease took his life," said Leslie Maier, Director of NMA, who knows firsthand the devastating effects of this disease. "Back-to-school health care visits and fall sports physicals are perfect opportunities for parents to proactively discuss meningococcal disease with their child's doctor and make an appointment for vaccination."

Meningococcal disease strikes nearly 3,000 Americans each year. Adolescents and young adults account for nearly 30 percent of all U.S. cases. Certain factors, such as dormitory-style living, weakened immune systems that may be caused by hectic extracurricular schedules, close personal contact with other adolescents or irregular sleep patterns, may put adolescents at increased risk for infection.

Early symptoms of the disease are similar to the flu and can include high fever, headache, stiff neck, confusion, nausea, vomiting, exhaustion and a purplish rash. The disease moves quickly and can lead to death or permanent disability, such as hearing loss, brain damage and/or loss of arms and legs, within hours of first symptoms.

Vaccination is the best way to prevent meningococcal disease and has minimal side effects, mostly soreness from the shot or mild fever.

NMA is a nonprofit organization founded by parents whose children have died or live with permanent disabilities from meningococcal disease. Their mission is to educate families, medical professionals and others about the disease and prevention approaches.

Visit www.nmaus.org to learn more about meningococcal disease and prevention methods.

Eye On Health

Five Tips For A Healthy Aging Eye

(NAPS) — Many people don't pay attention to their health until something goes wrong. EyeCare America, a national nonprofit organization that provides eye exams and eye health information to medically underserved communities, wants to provide older Americans with five tips for a healthy aging eye. By following these simple tips, seniors can take the lead and be more proactive in the care of their vision.

Five Tips for a Healthy Aging Eye:

1. Vitamin A is great for your eyes and will help you maintain healthy vision. Foods rich in vitamin A include carrots, yams and dark leafy greens.

2. Find out your family history of eye disease. In many cases, having a family member with an eye disease, such as glaucoma, greatly increases your chance of getting the disease.

3. Protect your eyes from the sun. Overexposure to the sun's rays can lead to cataracts. Your sunglasses should have UVA and UVB protection.

4. If you are over 65 years of age, have your eyes examined annually.

5. Call EyeCare America's Seniors EyeCare Program to see if you qualify for a free eye exam.

EyeCare America encourages people to call the EyeCare America Seniors EyeCare Program. This program offers eye exams and up to one year of medical care at no out-of-pocket cost for seniors who are without an ophthalmologist (a medical eye doctor). To see if you, a loved one or a friend, 65 and older, is eligible to receive a referral for an eye exam and care, call (800) 222-EYES (3937). The Seniors EyeCare Program help line operates 24 hours a day, every day, year-round. Operators speak English only.

EyeCare America's Seniors EyeCare Program is designed for people who:

- Are U.S. citizens or legal residents.
- Are age 65 and older.
- Have not seen an ophthalmologist in three or more years.
- Do not belong to an HMO or the VA.

To supplement its award-winning referral program, EyeCare America has recently created a new Web site specifically designed to assist online users in learning more about vision-limiting diseases such as cataracts, glaucoma and macular degeneration.

The site, eyecare-america.org, contains up-to-date clinical information about eye diseases that is reviewed by certified ophthalmologists, with links to current treatments and even an interactive tour of the eye's anatomy. Visitors can share important health topics with family through a convenient e-mail forward function and order free pamphlets that give in-depth information on treatment, tests/diagnosis, and causes and risk factors for a wide variety of common eye diseases.

Milton Hospital Offers Free Prostate Cancer Screening

Milton Hospital will host a free prostate cancer screening for men on Tuesday, Sept. 18 from 5 to 7 p.m. on the second floor of the hospital in the Brooks wing, 199 Reedsdale Rd., Milton.

Blood Pressure Clinics Free For Seniors

Weekly blood pressure screenings for elders will be held the first and third Monday of the month from 10 to 11 a.m. at the Council on Aging, 83 Saratoga St., North Quincy.

Gail Crawford, a registered nurse, will donate her time and talents to assist senior citizens to have their blood pressure taken on a bi-weekly basis.

For more information, call 617-376-1506.

Registration is required for the screening appointment. Call the Milton Hospital Community Education Department at 617-696-8810.

Participants must have their blood drawn in advance during the week of Sept. 10.

Blood drawing may be completed on a walk-in basis in the Milton Hospital laboratory, located on the ground floor of the hospital. No appointment is necessary for the laboratory.

According to the Prostate Cancer Foundation, over 234,000 men in the United States will be diagnosed with prostate cancer this year. When caught and treated early, prostate cancer has a cure rate of over 90 percent.

Milton Hospital provides community-based health care to people of all ages in Milton, Quincy, Braintree, Randolph, Canton, Hyde Park, Dorchester and other local communities.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

SLEEPLESSNESS AND SMOKING HURT GUMS

When researchers recently undertook a study to identify the biggest risks for poor oral health, they found that smoking was the leading factor to be associated with the progression of periodontal (gum) disease. More than 41 percent of the study's subjects with progressive gum disease were smokers. After that, a lack of sleep was found to be the second highest risk factor. Study subjects who got seven to eight hours of sleep nightly had less gum disease than those who slept six hours or less per night. The study, which also took factors such as nutrition, stress, hours worked, and eating breakfast into account, found that high stress levels and daily alcohol consumption also significantly impacted periodontal disease progression.

Today's informative column on the risks for poor oral health has been brought to you in the interest of better dental health. Good oral healthcare is important for your overall good health. When was the last time you had a comprehensive dental examination? We make every effort to see you promptly and listen to your concerns and needs. Keeping you healthy and happy is our first concern. We will let you know about new procedures and technologies and what they can do for you. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. A shortage of sleep may impair the body's immune response, which may lead to higher levels of gum disease.

O'Connell-Thomson Basketball Tourney A Big Success

The second annual O'Connell-Thomson Basketball Tournament was recently held at the Fenno Street courts, and for the second straight year, the tournament was a huge success.

The 16-team tournament featured a number of current and former Division 1, II and III local college basketball stars, as well as many of the top high school players from Quincy.

The event was held in honor of John O'Connell and Dennis Thomson, standout athletes who graduated from North Quincy High School in 2002 and whom both had their lives cut tragically short in the past three years. Their families have set up memorial scholarship funds in their honor to benefit North Quincy High School graduates, and this tournament raised $3,000 to help to fund three scholarships for the John O'Connell Scholarship Fund and the Dennis Thomson Scholarship Fund.

Dave Jaehnig, a Quincy resident and current Westfield State basketball player, captained his team to the championship of the two-day tournament.

The O'Connell-Thomson Tournament Committee would like to thank all of the local businesses that helped to make the event such a success. They included: Granite City Self-Storage, Balducci's House of Pizza, P.J. Kennedy & Sons, Wood Commercial Painting, Malachy's, Beni Café, Fuji 1546, Sean's Barber Shop, The WaterClub, Sagamore Plumbing & Heating, Egan's Sunoco, Parkway Automotive, The Granite Rail, Barefoot Bob's, West Elm Variety, Hancock Tavern, Baby Cakes, Remington's of Boston, the Boston Bruins, The Chantey, The Four's, The Vault, Classic Hairstyling, Nick's Pizza and Sign Centric.

The Committee also recognizes the countless donations and support from the many individuals and families that contributed to the tournament's success. Including the Committee to Elect Tom Koch, the Committee to Elect Jimmy Liang, the Committee to Elect Jay Davis, JoAnn Bragg and family, Doug Gutro, George Burke, Allan Yacubian, Paul Bregoli, Ed Duff, Nancy Scanlan, the Smith and Scanlan families, the Kalell family, the Monaco family, the Burke family, Neal Smith, Stephen Sawyer, Keith and Eileen MacPherson and Denise Darby and Elizabeth Hackett.

And a special thanks to Barry Welch and the Recreation Department, Mark Jaehnig and the Parks Department, Beacon Sports, Jerry Shepard and all of the referees, and the countless number of people who volunteered their time.

THE FENNO STREET courts were where all the action was at the 2nd Annual O'Connell-Thomson Basketball Tournament. The tourney helped raise monies for scholarships given out each year by the John O'Connell and Dennis Thomson Memorial Scholarship Funds.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

On Labor Day let us pay tribute to the workers of America: the men and women whose love and labor have made our country great. Let us remember those who brought it from a wilderness to a land of plenty with opportunity for all. Let us take time to reflect upon the dignity and the privilege of productive labor. Let us honor those craftsmen who have taken the brainchild of scientist, engineer and inventor and turned them into products of mass production. This melting pot of talent has resulted in a better life for all Americans.

Yes, strong backs, hands and hearts mined the gold in our west, laid the railroad tracks across our country and put America on wheels in Detroit.

On this Labor Day let us remember that even with the automation in industry today, the strength of America still lies in the strength of its work force. . . .

Badeah 'Bunny' Good, 80

Teletype Operator

An Islamic funeral service for Badeah "Bunny" (Allie) Good, 80, of Quincy Point, a former teletype operator, was held Aug. 24 at the Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St., Quincy.

Mrs. Good died suddenly Aug. 22 at home.

Born in Quincy, she was raised and educated in the city. She had lived in Weymouth for 40 years before moving back to Quincy.

Mrs. Good had worked for General Dynamics at the Fore River Shipyard as a teletype operator.

She sometimes worked two jobs in order to provide for the family and their modest home. She raised her children alone, and never balked or wavered from her responsibilities. And when her deaf son faced special challenges throughout his life, she remained steadfast in his support.

Years later, when her mother suffered a debilitating stroke and was paralyzed, for three long years she spent five days per week by her mother's side, caring for her, cooking for her, and assisting in her therapy.

When she moved to the senior citizens complex at 1000 Southern Artery, Mrs. Good became the unofficial social director, game-organizer, and all-around guide to newcomers.

She enjoyed attending seniors events and family get-togethers and was an avid fan of the Boston Red Sox and New England Patriots.

She is survived by three daughters, Nora Moukalled of East Bridgewater, Ellen Roberts of Weymouth and Roberta Hurley of Weymouth; and a son, David Good of Weymouth; two brothers, Simon Allie and Michael "Moe" Allie of Weymouth; four sisters, Fatima Allie of Weymouth, Alice Henry of Tecumseh, Michigan and Sarah Allie and Miriam Joseph, both of Quincy.

She is also survived by 11 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

SHINE Counsel At Aging Office

A SHINE counselor will be available Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Quincy Council on Aging office, 83 Saratoga St., Quincy, to assist the elderly and adults with disabilities with health information and benefits.

SHINE is an acronym for Serving the Health Information Needs of Elders.

Call 617-376-1247 to make an appointment or to speak with a SHINE counselor.

Friendly Visitors Sought At COA

The Quincy Council on Aging is seeking volunteers to call on the elderly who live alone and would welcome a friendly visitor.

The COA is also seeking seniors who live alone and would like a friendly visit themselves.

Call the COA at 617-376-1508 and ask to speak with Lena Trough, the friendly visitor coordinator.

The Council is mandated by law to do background checks on all volunteers.

Home visits can be arranged for shut-ins.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel! Fruitful vine - splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God! Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! Humbly believe in you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Hail Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer 3 consecutive days, and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. J.U.

provide identification. According to Turowski, the waitress said, "She looked okay."

"We're very sorry and we are very embarrassed," said Kai Lau who holds the license for The Little Q Hot Pot.

The same restaurant was caught serving alcohol to a minor patron on January 9. After that offense, the Board issued a two-day suspension, but suspended the punishment for 12 months.

At that time, Turowski encouraged managers to enroll their wait staff in a TIPS (Training in Proper Service Protocol) Program.

The TIPS training educates those serving and selling alcohol regarding state and local laws. Lau and his managers have completed TIPS training; but none of Lau's staff of seven full and part-time waiters and waitresses has ever signed on for the program.

This time, Board members voted the suspension and directed that it be enforced on a Thursday and Friday night.

The Board took no action and placed on file a complaint against Granite Rail on Cottage Avenue where two patrons were served alcohol after presenting false identifications.

One identification was a New Jersey card and the second, a military identification belonging to the brother of the minor patron. In both instances, the waitress checked the identification, but she served the youths.

Due to personal reasons, Police Chief Robert Crowley absented himself from that hearing.

Crowley Wants McIntyre Mall Smoking Ban fashioned wrought iron lampposts. The walkway allows pedestrian access from Hancock Street to the Quincy T Station.

Crowley told the License Board at Tuesday's meeting that he wants the "City Council to look into a smoking ban on that entire mall." He said he intends to ask City Council President Douglas Gutro to consider his proposal for the No Smoking ordinance for the area.

Smoking and loitering were two issues discussed at Tuesday's meeting when Juliet Loebardt, owner of Get Fresh Rotisserie & Grill, sought a license for outdoor food and beverage service at her restaurant which opens onto the mall path.

The Board unanimously approved the application for nine outdoor tables with seating for 25 on 17 feet of mall's 30-foot wide space. The dining area will be marked by planters at the lamppost, according to

ROBERT CROWLEY

Loebardt who said she only has four tables at this time.

Loebardt said that foot traffic and loitering is only heavy when the high school lets out. Part of the problem is that loiterer and the students use the area for meetings and smoking.

"The kids are underage. They shouldn't even have access to tobacco," said Loebardt.

"This plays right into our policy of trying to encourage this kind of venue," Board Chairman Joseph Shea said of the outdoor dining

7 Deadly Mistakes That Will Cost You Thousands When You Sell Your Home

Quincy - A new report has just been released which reveals 7 costly mistakes that most homeowners make when selling their home. This industry report shows clearly how the traditional ways of selling homes have become increasingly less and less effective in today's market. Most homesellers don't get what they want for their home.

As this report uncovers, most homesellers make 7 deadly mistakes that will cost them literally thousands of dollars.

In answer to this issue, industry insiders have prepared a free special report entitled "The 7 Step System to Get Your Home Sold Fast and For Top Dollar."

To hear a brief recorded message about how to order your free copy of this report, call 1-800-611-0351 and enter ID # 1000, call any time. Call NOW to find out how you can get the most money for your home.

This report is courtesy of Oreck. It may be sold or used for sale.

proposal before the 5-0 vote.

Shea said all the details of the new dining area will be reviewed prior to being forwarded to the Alcoholic Beverage Commission (ABC) which must approve the expansion.

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele said the board's approval can be withdrawn on 24-hours notice if any problems arise.

After the meeting, Loebardt said she may put out her tables as early as this week.

The License Board also approved, by a 4-0 vote, an outdoor dining area requested by Commander Jim Doherty for Nickerson Post on Moon Island Road, Scituate.

The outdoor area at the Nickerson Post will accommodate 40 persons on a 20 by 38-foot deck with a three-foot railing, according to manager Myles McDonough.

Under the license agreement, Nickerson Post must stop serving alcohol on the deck at 11 p.m. and no speakers or music is allowed.

The Board also voted 4-0 to convert the post's license from a club Al Alcohol License to a Veteran's Club Al Alcohol license which limits patrons to members and member-sponsored guests and all visitors must sign in.

For personal reasons, Chief Crowley did not vote and absented himself during both discussions of the Nickerson Post.

The ABC must approve both changes.

To Connect Crown Colony With Highway Ground Is Broken For $18M Ramp

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Ground was broken Tuesday for the state's $18 million Crown Colony ramp which will open a direct roadway from Crown Colony to 193N (Rte. 128).

Lt. Gov. Tim Murray who chaired the event lauded Quincy's city and legislative leadership as well as private business leaders for bringing the ramp close to reality.

On hand for the ceremony were State Secretary of Transportation Bernard Cohen, State Sen. Michael Morrissey, Mayor William Phelan, MassHighway Commissioner Luisa Paiewonsky, State Rep. A. Stephen Tobin, State Rep. Bruce J. Ayers, Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis and State Rep. Ron Mariano.

The project, which involves three phases, should be completed by the spring of 2010 under a multi-billion dollar emergency needs bond passed in May by the state legislature.

The major phase involves construction under MassHighway of a quarter mile roadway from behind 400 Crown Colony Dr. to the interstate highway system.

Also planned is a half-mile ramp at the Burgin Parkway, which will reduce congestion on the parkway. The third part involves the widening of the entrance to the Crown Colony development.

"They recognized what needed to be done for some time," Murray said of the city's state and local leaders, noting that such needs were not addressed by the previous state administration.

He predicted that growth would ripple throughout the area, suggesting that "As Quincy goes, so goes the South Shore."

Morrissey noted that the state not only is constructing the ramp project, but is also

International Festival Will Celebrate City's Diversity Sunday

The city's first "International Festival" celebrating Quincy's diversity, will be held Sunday from noon to 5 p.m. on downtown Hancock Street.

The event will feature music, games, food, and crafts from a wide variety of cultures and ethnic groups. There will be live music and entertainment throughout the day and plenty of games and fun for young people.

There is no charge for the event and free parking is available in both the Ross Parking Garage and the Hancock Parking Lot.

"Quincy is home to many people from throughout the world and each of our people brings a part of their culture and heritage with them," said Mayor William Phelan. "This event will allow us to celebrate our differences as a strength of our community and provides an opportunity to learn about the many cultures that call Quincy their home."

Live entertainment will include a Lion dance from the Wong Keung International Martial Arts Center, salsa dancing performed by World Rhythms, Vietnamese dance performance from Samantabhadra Buddhist Center, Irish step-dancing, a Brazilian martial arts performance presented by Mestre Chuviz, Kobudo Drums, and a demonstration from the Vrindavana Preservation Society.

There will be craft and food from an even larger representation of cultural organizations.

Sponsors of the event include the Quincy Medical Center, the Manet Community Health Center, United Commercial Bank, the South Cove Community Health Center and the City of Quincy.

Hancock Street will be closed to vehicular traffic

Residents Urged To Water New Trees

Because of the lack of rain, residents are urged by Mayor William Phelan and Park-Forestry Director Mark Jaehnig to water new trees planted by the city in the past year.

"With the weather we've had, we ask residents to periodically take the hose to the area surrounding the base of the new trees," said Jaehnig. "The drought we've had is especially tough on younger trees and we ask residents to help protect our new trees by helping out with some water during the extended dry periods."

"Quincy's tree-lined streets allow us to maintain a quaint small-town feel," said Phelan. "They clean our air, cool our neighborhoods during the summer months, they look beautiful, and are good for our local environment. I am proud of the work we have done to plant new trees and we will continue to add to our urban forest."

The city planted more than 300 trees throughout the neighborhoods the past 18 months and plans to plant more in October. The tree plantings are part of the "Neighborhoods First" program.

Quincy Sun Price Is Now 50 Cents

As announced last week, The price of The Quincy Sun is 50 cents effective with this Sept. 6 issue.

The 10-cent increase is for copies of The Sun sold at newsstands and delivered to homes by newscarriers.

The yearly mail subscriptions were increased in August and are not afected by this new rate.

At 50 cents, the price of The Sun is still lower than that of most weekly newspapers in the South Shore and New England areas.

As we noted last week, we regret the increase which is our first in seven years, but rising production and other costs force us to make this adjustment.

Again, we want to say we are most grateful to our loyal readers and advertisers who have encouraged and supported us in our role as Historic Quincy's Hometown Weekly Newspaper since September, 1968.

We hope you will understand the need for the price adjustment.

Thank you, sincerely,

Colby Morrissey Leads Youth In Island Explorations

This summer, over 3,700 youth from all over the city of Boston traveled to George Island as part of Save the Harbor/Save the Bay's "All Access Boston Harbor" summer youth program.

Overseeing this program is Quincy native Colby Morrissey. Starting at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday through Friday, for seven weeks, Colby can be found at the Bank of America Pavilion preparing various neighborhood community groups for a day of fun in one of Boston's most beautiful natural resources.

"It's a lot of kid's first time to George's Island. Some have never even been on a boat before," Colby said. "It's great to watch their excitement as we pull away from the dock and head out into the water."

After their boat ride aboard the Virginia-C II, the kids explore historic Fort

The youth also search for answers to an educational scavenger hunt provided by Colby.

Although, this was Colby's first summer working as a marine educator for Save the Harbor/Save the Bay she has accepted a full-time staff member position at this recently named "Best of Boston" non-profit.

"It's been a rewarding summer," says Colby. "And I am really glad I will be able to continue working throughout the year to educate people on the importance of preserving the harbor."

Since the launch of "All Access" in 2000 the program has brought over 15,000 young people to the Harbor Islands. It is one of two summer youth education programs run by Save the Harbor/Save the Bay.

Save the Harbor/Save the Bay is a public interest non-profit environmental advocacy group whose mission is to restore and protect Boston Harbor and Massachusetts Bay, and keep them clean forever for everyone to enjoy.

"The best way to save the harbor is to share the harbor," explains Save the Harbor/Save the Bay's president Patricia Foley. "By instilling an appreciation for the Harbor in our young people now, we are ensuring that the improvement and preservation of our great waterfront will continue throughout generations."

Swingle's Quarry, Family Highlighted TV Documentary To Recall Quincy's Granite Industry

By TOM HENSHAW

Jonathan Samuel Swingle came to Quincy from Ohio in response to a want ad in 1886, a 30-year-old book-keeper and former coal miner with $20 in his pocket and a burning desire to succeed in whatever business was there.

He remained to make his fortune quarrying granite, reviving and guiding a once great Quincy industry through its final period of distinction.

Other Photo On Page 9

Now, his granddaughter, Jo Anne Swingle Hennigan, and her partner, Joe Greene, a programmer at MIT, are seeking to revive the granite industry once more, this time on tape for a TV documentary. They've been at it for three or four months.

"We're still gathering information," said Greene.

"We're interested in asking people if they have pictures of Swingle's Quarry before it was filled in. We're trying to get information before it goes away. The people who knew it best are getting older."

"I've started writing the script to the documentary but even as I write something else comes up for us to research."

Hennigan and Greene have hundreds of pictures

Police Union Head Taking Chief To Court

The long-running dispute between Police Chief Robert Crowley and the Quincy Police Patrol Officers Association, spilled over into Quincy District Court last week.

Union President Bruce Tait issued a criminal complaint charging that the chief deliberately ordered Officer Michael O'Brien to drive a car when he knew his license had expired.

"They are processing the complaint in District Court right now," said Tait Tuesday afternoon. "There will be a court magistrate's hearing to determine if there is probable cause."

Crowley was not available for comment.

The complaint against Crowley notes that it is illegal to knowingly allow someone to drive a car without a license when the vehicle is under his control, like the chief and a police car.

Tait's report of the incident said Crowley had a sergeant watch O'Brien get into

Quincy Public Schools Enter Year 2 Full-Day Kindergarten

The Quincy Public Schools will enter its second year of full-day kindergarten classes in the 2007-08 academic year.

But, due to faulty information supplied by the schools, stories in The Quincy Sun last week made it appear that the two-a-day sessions had returned.

Hours for the first tier elementary schools, grades K-5, will be 7:45 a.m. to 2 p.m., with Tuesday release days 7:45 to 11:25 a.m.

First tier schools include Atherton Hough, Charles A. Bernazzini, Lincoln Hancock, Merrymount and Wollaston.

Hours for the second tier elementary schools, grades K-5, will be 8:15 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., with Tuesday release days 8:15 to 11:55 a.m.

Second tier schools include Beechwood Knoll, Montclair, Clifford H. Marshall, Francis W. Parker, Squantum and Snug Harbor Community.

Hours at the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center will be 7:35 a.m. to 1:50 p.m., with Tuesday release days 7:35 to 11:15 a.m.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Sept. 5, 1666, fire-fighters in London begin blowing up homes in an attempt to halt the spread of a great fire, which left 100,000 people homeless. The following week, a royal proclamation mandated that rebuilding of homes be done with brick and stone.

• On Sept. 7, 1813, the United States is first personified as Uncle Sam. Samuel Wilson, a meat packer from Troy, N.Y., supplied barrels of beef to the Army with the barrels stamped "U.S." The soldiers began referring to the food as Uncle Sam's.

• On Sept. 6, 1847, writer Henry David Thoreau moves in with Ralph Waldo Emerson in Concord, Mass., after living for two years in a shack he built himself on Walden Pond. During his time at Walden, Thoreau spent a brief time in jail for refusing to pay taxes to support the war with Mexico.

• On Sept. 4, 1886, Geronimo becomes the last American Indian warrior to formally surrender to the United States. After several years of imprisonment, Geronimo was given his freedom, and he moved to Oklahoma where he became a successful farmer and occasionally worked as a scout and adviser for the U.S. Army.

• On Sept. 8, 1935, 19-year-old Frank Sinatra sings with a group called The Hoboken Four on the radio talent show "Major Bowe's Amateur Hour." The appearance led to many small nightclub performances, thus beginning a long career.

• On Sept. 3, 1966, "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet" airs its last episode after more than a decade on television. The popular sitcom focused on the comic antics of the real-life family of Ozzie and Harriet Nelson, including son Ricky, who later became a rock musician.

• On Sept. 9, 1971, prisoners riot and seize control of the maximum-security Attica Correctional Facility near Buffalo, N.Y., with 1,281 convicts holding 39 prison guards and employees hostage for four days. At least 39 people were killed when state police and guards stormed the prison.

The Tradition Goes On

George Parker, you might say, was a true original. He could be tough, rough and gruff.

And, a big hearted softy, too. The tough side showed up when, for example, it came to phonies. They got an earful and learned to stay out of his way.

And, as for elected officials he felt weren't doing the job they were elected to do, he was quite happy to give them a free job performance rating. They didn't need an opinion poll.

But those closest to him knew the other George Parker: the big Teddy Bear ready to help a worthy cause especially one for the kids.

George, who owned and operated the Yellow Cub Co. of Quincy, for 35 years died in May, 2000 at age 65. He had a heart as big as one of his Yellow cabs.

I think of him each Labor Day. It was on Labor Day, 1976 that we met.

The Sun was the Quincy-South Shore pledge center for the Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy Telethon.

George came in that first year with two $400 checks to get us off to a good start. One was a company check and the other a personal one.

And for the next 10 years, it was an annual ritual. George with two $400 checks each Labor Day.

During those 10 years the pledge center raised over $1 million for Jerry's Kids, thanks to George and a lot of other nice people. As The Sun expanded, we ran out of space in which to set up a pledge center and reluctantly closed it.

But that didn't stop George.

For the next 10 years he kept coming to The Sun office around Labor Day with two checks for $800. In 1999, he wasn't feeling well but sent a check for $1,000.

At the time of his death the following year his total donated to MDA had reached $19,500.

But that wasn't the end.

JOE PARKER

The Labor Day weekend after his death, two more checks for $800 arrived.

One was for $500 from George's brother, Joe and the latter's wife, Joan of Brockton. The other a $300 Yellow Cab check from Wayne McCulley, George's long-time friend and business associate.

Sadly, Joe died in April of last year but the tradition continued.

There were two more checks for $800 that Labor Day from Joe's wife and Wayne. That brought the total to $25,500.

GEORGE PARKER

And this Labor Day, there were two more checks for $800, making it $26,300.

Joan and Wayne want the tradition to go on in memory of George and Joe.

George also gave generously to other worthy causes but the MDA Telethon was special to him.

He believed that every kid should have the right to walk, run, ride a bike and take part in sports.

When it came to kids, George was as rough and tough as a marshmallow-a big-hearted softy.

A MEMORIAL MASS for Paul Harold will be celebrated Saturday, at 4 p.m. at St. Ann's Church, Wollaston.

Paul died from cancer five years ago in August 2002 and would have been 59 Sept. 5.

His political career spanned 27 years including: city councillor, council president, state senator and Norfolk County Register of Deeds. Many believed he could have been mayor if he wanted it. He didn't.

He set the city council at-large vote-getting record in 1977 with a smashing 21,243 votes. The record still stands.

Paul was one of Quincy's brightest all-time and most popular political stars who put people first.

He left us much too soon.

MORE MEMORIES OF the peanut store:

Jeanne Reardon, the City Council's Clerk of

REARDON

Committees, reports that her aunt, Dorothy Clem, managed the store from 1945 to 1949. And that she places the store on the east side of Hancock Street in downtown, across from the Lincoln's store.

She lived on Beebe Road and started working at the store while her husband, Stanley, was in the Seabees.

Now 84, she is widowed and living in Sunapee, NH and fondly remembers the store.

Jeanne's own recollection of the store is going there with her mother and father as a youngster.

"I vividly remember the countless number of Planters Peanut Man jars on the shelves," she says.

Brian Donovan of Quincy Center says he remembers the store as being near Rogers Jewelry. "On Friday and Saturday nights, Mr. Peanut handed out free peanuts."

Ben Nichols of Plymouth also remembers the store in that area and Mr. Peanut giving out bags of peanuts.

It may have been a peanut store, but it left some big fond, memories.

35 Teachers Attend Special Workshop To Help Young Readers

Quincy teachers recently studied the latest techniques for helping young children, especially at-risk youngsters, acquire basic literacy skills, thanks to a $20,000 grant from the Boston Scientific Foundation.

The 35 kindergarten through Grade 2 teachers attended a three-day training workshop which presented innovative techniques developed by the Multisensory Training Institute of Needham (MTI).

The MTI workshops, held at Beechwood Knoll Elementary School on Fenno Street, introduced the teachers to a system of "phonemic awareness," as a tool for literacy instruction.

Phonemic awareness involves creating an awareness of sounds within words which are considered a vital step in developing strong reading and spelling skills.

Children are taught to "hear, see and feel" the sounds produced in their mouth. The program's developers believe that sensory techniques are more successful than memorizing "D" for Dog.

"We are proud to support the Multisensory Training Institute's innovative work in the area of early childhood literacy education training," said Paul Donovan, President of Boston Scientific Foundation.

Donovan believes, "This grant will help provide teachers in Quincy with the special tools they need to get at the heart of the (ill)iteracy issue."

The MTI of the Stratford Foundation is a nonprofit educational foundation seeking to education the nations most at-risk readers.

Boston Scientific of Natick develops medical devices. The company's distribution center is located in Quincy.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS OLD REAL photo postcard is a picture taken at the Harvard Aeronautical Society's Harvard-Boston aviation meet that was held at Atlantic in the first week of September in 1910. The air meet offered lucrative prizes to attract the world's top aviators and aeroplanes. The aircraft shown here was a Bleriot monoplane built by Frenchman Louis Bleriot, who a year earlier became the first man to fly across the 21-mile English Channel. At the time of the meet this plane, the first single winged plane seen in New England, also held the world's speed record of 66.2 miles per hour. Claude Graham-White, an Englishman, used this Bleriot to win the largest prize at the Harvard Meet of $10,000 offered by the Boston Globe. The Globe's challenge was to fly from Atlantic around the State House dome and twice out and around Boston Light, a total of 33 miles. Graham-White was the only aviator willing to attempt the risky flight and won what today would be almost a quarter of a million dollars. He also won most of the other prizes at the air meet. Tunnel Planned To Halt Flooding From Town Brook

By FRANK MCCAULEY

The Army Corps of Engineers will hold a public workshop at City Hall on the deep tunnel that is planned to divert flood waters from Town Brook in South Quincy.

The proposal is designed to solve chronic flooding on the Quincy Center business district and residential areas of South Quincy and Braintree.

This Week

The recommended plan includes construction of a tunnel through the rock, 12 feet wide and 130 feet underground.

The estimated cost of the project is $18.6 million.

TEACHERS STARTING SCHOOL ON SOUR NOTE

For the second year in a row, Quincy teachers are starting school on a sour note. Teachers voted Tuesday to "work to rule," reduce their services to a bare minimum required by contract until they receive last year's raises.

The 1,000 member QEA, like all school employees, negotiated raises for 1979-1980 but never received those raises.

He Would Add Members To Licensing, Zoning Boards

I am glad to see that the city's Licensing Board has changed the time of its meetings from mornings to 4 p.m. I agree with Police Chief Bob Crowley that the new time will give citizens "more opportunities and input on certain issues."

Personally, I would like to see both the zoning and licensing board meet in the evening rather than late afternoon, but 4 p.m. for the Licensing Board is a good starting point.

I, however, felt the bashing of Tommy Koch's idea of replacing the current licensing board with private citizens was unnecessary and overkill.

Koch has a right to present his ideas and reforming the structure and makeup of the board seemed responsible to me. If you disagree, as a letter written by Robert H. Smith did (Letters, Aug. 16), you can present your countering opinion, but most of Smith's letter was nothing more than an ad hominem attack on Tom Koch rather than a real discussion of the issue.

Koch's ideas weren't "senseless proposals." What was senseless is dirty politics, tactics unbecoming of a positive outlook on politics, government and the upcoming mayoral race.

Mr. Smith, like Tom Koch, has a right to his opinion.

Personally, I have my own ideas for the Licensing Board (and by extension the Zoning Board). All the current city employees on both boards should stay. I would however add three more members to both boards. Community activists would fill these seats.

Just because we have department heads on a city board doesn't always mean they have sensible reasons for their vote on matters presented before them, anymore than private citizens would be incapable of making sensible decisions.

I say enlarge these important city boards by adding real people from the community on them.

Questions Organization Of Babe Ruth In Quincy

I speak for other parents when I say: Why when the Babe Ruth season started in March were the final games held the third week in August? By the third week in August most families are on vacation, the boys are thinking about football and double sessions start next week.

Why were the final games so late this year? There were approximately 25 people in the stands for these final games. A few years ago when the games were held in July the stands were full.

Why if the boys, the coaches and their families put all the time and effort into Babe Ruth is there no reward at the end? Why aren't there trophies or at least a T-shirt, anything to indicate that your team won?

The 15-year-olds, who worked for three years to get to be starters, get nothing, except "Give me your shirt (right off your back)" and are sent on their way. The playoffs started in June and six weeks later resumed. Why?

Also there was no "A" travel team this summer. The two "B" Quincy teams beat everyone except each other so soundly that it was embarrassing. Yet the players that signed up for those teams showed up every game. Why?

It's too late for my kid but hopefully next year things will be better for the boys joining and coming back to the league.

Nautical Flea Market To Benefit Squantum School

Captain Mike Schiller of the Boston Belle is organizing a "Nautical Flea Market" for Sunday, Sept. 16 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Summer House at Marina Bay.

Proceeds will benefit the Squantum Elementary School. Admission is $3 with children under 12 free. Vendors interested in table space should call 617-592-6866.

This nautical flea market is unique in Massachusetts, according to Captain Mike who said similar events are plentiful in Florida and other seaside states. He believes this is a first in this area.

The tables will offer new and used boating gear including antique wheels, ship's telegraphs, boat models, and other collectors' items from Schiller's collections and those of other nautical antique buffs.

Each year, Captain Mike takes the entire fifth grade of the Squantum Elementary School on a harbor tour on the Boston Belle, his charter boat for private parties of up to 60 persons. The Boston Belle docks at Marina Bay.

On the tour, youngsters view the harbor islands, learn about the ocean and are quizzed on the subjects.

Master Walker McCauley Aids Beechwood Seniors

Who hasn't driven down Wollaston Boulevard in the early morning hours and witnessed the solitary figure of former Mayor Frank McCauley striding purposefully along on the beach side.

He figures he has walked a total of 17,000 miles since 1997, all in the interest of physical fitness.

And now McCauley is bringing his expertise to the elderly walkers and wannabe walkers at the Senior Center at Beechwood on the Bay.

"Frank's recent visit has launched a new walking program at Beechwood," said Maryann Mahony, the coordinator of the Beechwood Senior Center.

"We have a number of walkers who walk a vigorous three miles a day, two days a week. Our new walkers will be counting steps, not miles.

"We call the new walkers 'Step Walkers' because we hope to see folks improve their fitness and health 'one step at a time.'"

The new Beechwood Step Walkers are taking to the road every Wednesday at 10 a.m. and Mahony is looking for more seniors who are interested in short, social walks.

They can sign up by calling Mahony at 617-471-5712.

For the newcomers, veteran perambulator Frank McCauley offers these words of advice:

"It is never too late to improve your fitness. Start slowly and keep at it. And keep a written log of your steps."

DOVE Benefit, Auction Sept. 27

Tickets are now on sale for the Fall fund-raiser and charity auction for DOVE, Inc. Thursday, Sept. 27, at Granite Links Golf Club, 100 Quarry Hills Dr., Quincy..

The evening's theme is "Harvesting Hope."

The annual Fall event is the non-profit agency's largest fund-raiser of the year. There will be a raffle and auction, along with dinner, live entertainment by Java Live and dancing.

Interested persons should contact Kathy Norris at 617-770-4065 to purchase tickets at $100 per person.

Now in its 29th year, Dove, Inc., provides services for domestic violence victims, such as a shelter in Norfolk County, and resources for the prevention of domestic violence. The agency is the only agency of its kind in Norfolk County and serves 28 cities and towns. DOVE's services are not limited to Norfolk County.

All the proceeds, after expenses, support DOVE's education and outreach program, as well as shelter services. The event is co-sponsored by First American Title Insurance Co.

Auction items include a sailboat cruise, four one-day passes to Walt Disney World, dinner for 8 at Tosca Restaurant, Red Sox tickets, Celtics VIP tickets and Bruins' suite tickets as well as a one-night stay at the Clarion Hotel on Nantasket Beach which includes a massage at Clarion's Spa and a gift certificate at Raffael's Restaurant.

Honorary Committee members include Boston newscaster Chet Curtis, Congressman William Delahunt, State Rep. Joseph Driscoll, retired Buffalo Bills linebacker Chris Keating and his wife Nancy; District Attorney William Keating, Sen. Michael Morrissey, Mayor William Phelan and his wife Tracey, Denise Reneghan of Bay State Charitable Foundation, Matthew Reneghan of Captain Fishbones in Marina Bay and WBZ anchor Scott Whale.

Kathleen Burke Wed To Paul Matthews

Kathleen Burke and Paul Matthews, both of Quincy, were married recently in St. Ann's Church, Quincy. Rev. John Ronaghan officiated at the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of William and Therese Burke of Quincy. The groom is the son of Joseph and Sarah Matthews of Derry, North Ireland.

Maureen Lethin of Quincy was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mary Burke of Quincy, Gretchen Maddock of Laconia, NH, and Carolyn Algar of Cape Town, South Africa. Junior bridesmaid was Colleen Lethin of Quincy.

Sean Matthews of Melrose was best man. Ushers were: Paul Burke of South Boston, Mark Millane of Quincy, Brian Flaherty of Rockland and Ciaran Matthews of Dublin, Ireland.

The bride is a Grade 6 teacher at Central Middle School. She is a 2002 graduate of Wheaton College and has studied at Eastern Nazarene College.

The bridegroom, a 2007 graduate of Quincy College, is a Quincy Police officer.

A reception followed at The Quincy Neighborhood Club. Rather than provide favors, the couple chose to make a donation to the Angel Fund in memory of Christopher Kennedy and Jimmy Kennedy. The Angel Fund is dedicated to the fight against ALS (Lou Gehrig's disease). After a wedding trip to Tahiti, Moorea, and Bora Bora, the couple will live in Quincy.

MR. and MRS. PAUL MATTHEWS

N.Q. Catholic Women Open Season Sept. 13

The Catholic Women's Club of North Quincy will hold its first meeting of the 2007-2008 season Thursday, Sept. 13 at Sacred Heart School Hall.

President Priscilla Langelle will conduct the meeting, at which the year's plans will be discussed.

The evening will feature a "Barbecue Dinner" by Kate Shannon, Chairman of the meeting and former president.

HN Garden Club Opens New Season

The Houghs Neck Garden Club opened its 2007-2008 season Wednesday evening with a potluck supper at the Nut Island Community Room.

The club's meetings are held September through June on the first Wednesday of each month at the Nut Island site. Guests are welcome and parking is available.

Scheduled speaker for the opening session was former Quincy resident Jeannine Doyle who is a longtime organic gardener and has been a beekeeper for eight years. Doyle now lives in Pembroke.

Doyle offers light, fact-filled presentations on her bee keeping which focus on subjects from the queen bee's installation to the honey harvest.

QHS Fashion Students Create, Model Styles

Students from Mrs. Maryrose Mirick's Fashion Design classes at Quincy High School recently displayed their creative talents at the third annual fashion show.

More than 50 students from the Fashion Club modeled the hot styles of the recent past on a runway set up in the Three Seasons Restaurant at the school.

The more than 90 retro outfits, designed and prepared by the students themselves, reflected the looks of the 1950s through 1980s to a background of the music of the period.

Appetizers and desserts were prepared by Culinary Arts students.

Mrs. Mirick and her students started the Fashion Club three years ago to give the students a chance to showcase their designs and take part in an after-school activity.

"When students get involved with their school community it is a win win situation," said Mrs. Mirick. Current Fashion Club officers include: Danielle Millan, president; Ashley Fooks, vice president; Samantha Reynolds, president assistant; Amy Meloski, secretary.

TV Documentary To Recall Quincy's Granite Industry

already, most of them on loan or copied from those at the Thomas Crane Library, the Quincy Historical Society, historian Tom Galvin and the collections of just plain folks.

"I have created a web site on the Quincy quarries," said Greene. "The information and pictures are scattered around now. We're trying to bring them together in one spot."

"The documentary will be modeled after Ken Burns' 'Civil War.' He has given us some advice through his secretary. The object will be to personalize the statistics, to pull out who the characters were and make them part of the story."

While the documentary will be built around Swingle's Quarries (he once owned four of them) and the Swingle family, Greene said other aspects of the granite industry in Quincy and the first commercial railroad will not be ignored.

Greene, who grew up within hailing distance of the quarries in West Quincy, said Quincy Access TV, the city's cable system, has shown an interest in airing the documentary. He has taken classes in production at the cable studio.

Jo Anne Swingle Hennigan, who lives at 1000 Southern Artery, unveiled the Granite Gazing Ball in June, 2006, when it was returned to its place in front of City Hall after a 69 year sojourn at the Fore River Traffic Circle.

Her aunt, Maxine, the daughter of J. S. Swingle, presided over the original dedication of the Ball in 1925 after it was cut from a 25-ton block of rough stone from Swingle's Quarry and gifted to the city by the Quincy Granite Manufacturers Association.

J. S. died in 1929 and the granite industry in Quincy survived him by 40 years. Swingle's was the last active quarry when it was closed in 1969.

Now his granddaughter wants to bring it back again — in memory, at least.

GRANITE SLAB, weighing 25 tons, that eventually became the Granite Gazing Ball that adorns the front lawn of City Hall, is hoisted from the depths of Swingle's Quarry around 1924 while workers and executives stand by. Figures encircled are Quarry Owner Jonathan S. Swingle (standing); his son, Jay S. Swingle (seated) and his daughter, Maxine, who presided at the dedication of the Granite Ball in 1925. The others will have to go unidentified, unless some sharp-eyed reader recognizes a friend or relative.

Police Officer Speaker At Montclair/Wollaston

Community Police Officer Tom Ford will be the speaker tonight at the 7:30 p.m. meeting of the Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association. The public is welcome.

Officer Ford will present tips on keeping a house and neighborhood safe and will discuss neighborhood issues. A question and answer period will follow his presentation. The meeting will be held in the community room of the Church of the Good Shepherd located at Harvard and West Squantum Streets. Community police officers can be contacted for non-emergency assistance.

Officer Ford covers Montclair; his number is 1-857-939-1138.

Officer Dave Coletti covers Wollaston; his phone is 617-594-2037.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Faxon Park Fires

When I drive around the South Shore, I can't help but notice how low the water level is in many of the local ponds. It's an indication, of course, at how little rain has fallen lately. It can make for great sunny beach weather, but raise havoc in other areas.

One such area is Faxon Park in Quincy. There are years of accumulated, deep-rooted combustible peat and vegetative material throughout the park while all of it at present is tinder dry. Consequently, there have been frequent fires at this location lately. Our efforts could appear fruitless, while I'm here to convey that they are not.

With any outside fire, our immediate concern is exposures, structures, homes and garages adjacent to the park. Deep-seated smoldering, as much as it is a nuisance, is a secondary concern, while I'll discuss it here later in this article.

To protect exposures the most effective access must be determined upon size up of the incident. Typically this takes place along the perimeter roadways to the park. Once determined a commitment is made and hose lines are extended to place water on the fire, protecting exposures. Once again this is our immediate concern, to minimize potential loss of valuable property.

There is another issue, that being the problem of nuisance smoke and odor from deep-seated smoldering fires further in the park in areas previously burnt.

They present less of a fire hazard to exposures where there is little vegetation on the surface to facilitate horizontal fire spread. However, that's not to say the fire can't burn further downward into years of accumulated peat and humus. That's much of what we are experiencing in the park at present, fire migrating downward. It causes smoke and its odors while causing fewer hazards as long as there are no immediate combustible surface exposures to travel horizontally.

Combating access obstructions and limitations, the fire companies have done their best to minimize those nuisance deep-seated fires. Blitz guns and ladder pipes, pumping up to 250 gallons per minute of water have been used to soak those areas. However, only a substantial continuous drenching rain can alleviate this nuisance once and for all.

Dragging heavy hose lines filled with water, continuously adding line to extend further into the park while circumventing the obstacles of trees, rocks and debris, firefighters attempt to minimize that nuisance smoke and odor while soaking the areas as best they can.

Sadly, it's the best band aid approach we now have until nature can saturate the depth below the surface introducing moisture back into the ground once again.

Pray for rain!

Yoga Classes Return To Beechwood Center

Yoga classes will return to Beechwood on the Bay this month with Chair Yoga classes scheduled on Wednesdays at 9:30 a.m. and the Active Yoga classes on Thursday evenings at 6:45 p.m.

Instructor Ellen Murphy will teach both classes at Beechwood, 440 East Squantum St. For additional information or to register, call

Stephen Moynihan Named To Union Health Group

Stephen Moynihan, president of the Quincy Retiree Association (QRA), has been named to represent retired city employees if the city decides to join the state employees' health plan.

Elections among the various unions of city workers are scheduled to take place in September to determine whether the city will adopt "coalition bargaining" to negotiate health plans.

The vote will consist of 90 per cent participation by active employees and a 10 per cent vote for retirees. The city needs a positive vote of 70 per cent to adopt coalition bargaining.

STEPHEN MOYNIHAN

This means that the city's contribution to the employees' health plans will be taken off the bargaining tables of the individual unions and negotiated separately by a Public Employees Committee (PEC).

Then a vote will be taken on whether or not to join the state's Group Insurance Commission (GIC), which offers a menu of plans from which to choose.

Moynihan was chosen to be the Quincy retiree's designee on the PEC by the Retired State, County and Municipal Employees Association of Massachusetts.

Since his retirement from the Quincy Public School System in 1991, he has been active as the retiree representative on Quincy's Health Insurance Advisory Committee.

Andrew Smith In Pre-Deployment Training At Fort McCoy

Army National Guard Cpl. Andrew P. Smith has arrived at Fort McCoy, Sparta, Wis., to complete mobilization, pre-deployment training.

Smith is an explosive ordnance disposal technician normally assigned to the 182nd Engineer Company, Newburyport. He is the son of William J. and Patricia L. Smith of Fifth Ave.,

Quincy, and a 1992 graduate of Quincy High School.

The training is an Army Theater Immersion mobilization training for units deploying overseas to forward operating bases in support of Operations Iraqi Freedom and/or Enduring Freedom. Soldiers prepare by participating in extensive training on equipment and procedures to learn skills needed to be successful in their mission objectives while deployed.

The training includes weapons qualification, warrior tasks, leadership tactics, improvised explosive devices, ground assault convoy operations, urban operations, entry control point operations, driving procedures, first aid, combat life saving, protective mask familiarity and confidence, detainee operations, hand-to-hand combat, reflexive fire, grenade throwing and targeting, culture/customs/language, land navigation, physical fitness, and other specific training requirements.

Extended Hours At Beechwood Music School

The Music School at Beechwood on the Bay will resume extended hours Monday, Sept. 10, according to Amy Drinkwater, Evening Program Director.

"We currently have open lesson times with our piano, voice and guitar instructors," Drinkwater said. Private lessons are now being scheduled for Tuesdays and Thursdays, 4:30 p.m. - 9 p.m.

MEMA Safety Tips For Hurricane Power Outages

Power outages affect nearly every aspect of home and business life so advance preparation is the only sure safe way to protect people, property, and pets, according to Ken McBride, the Acting Director of Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA).

"The severe winds experienced during hurricanes and tropical storms have the potential to cause power outages throughout the Commonwealth," warns McBride, adding, "Strong winds have the capability to topple utility poles and snap tree limbs causing them to fall on power lines and disrupt electrical service."

McBride recommends seven safety tips for residents at risk of power outages, particularly during hurricane and tropical storm season.

- Be careful when going outside after a storm as trees or debris can hide downed or hanging electric wires and could be live and dangerous.

- Never attempt to touch or move downed lines and keep children and pets away from them. Always assume a downed line is a live line and do not touch anything that a power line is touching, such as a tree branch or fence.

- Check flashlights and portable radios to ensure that they are working. The radio is an important source of weather and emergency information during a storm. Stock up on batteries.

- Well-water pump systems operated by electricity will shut down and residents should have a ready source of spare water. MEMA recommends filling the bathtub and spare containers with water but warns that bathtub water should only be used for sanitation purposes, not as drinking water.

- Set the refrigerator and freezer to the coldest settings prior to the storm and do not open either door unnecessarily during the outage. Food can stay cold in a full refrigerator for up to 24 hours and in a well-packed freezer for 48 hours or half that time if it is half-packed.

- Check with your pharmacist for guidance on the proper storage of medication during an extended outage.

- Unplug all electronic equipment, such as televisions, stereos, VCR, microwave ovens, computers, cordless telephones, answering machines and garage door openers.

Voltage irregularities and power surges after the outage can damage your equipment. Residents should review the process for manually operating an electric garage door.

Police Union Head Taking Chief To Court

the cruiser and drive off before stopping him and citing O'Brien for driving without a license.

O'Brien, whose license expired in February, was suspended without pay for five days. He has since renewed his license, served his suspension and returned to work.

Chief Crowley and the patrolmen have been at loggerheads since last fall when the union took a "no confidence" vote in the chief and has repeatedly called for his ouster.

Last March, the City Council passed a resolution recommending that Crowley give full cruiser coverage to all of the city's 13 districts, 24 hours a day, seven days a week. The suggestion was ignored.

Tait and Councillor Daniel Raymond criticized Crowley for returning $1.8 million to the city treasury over the past two years instead of using it for staffing.

Only last June, the union sought expedited arbitration of its complaint against Crowley for directing that officers could not take vacations a day at a time unless it falls within their vacation periods.

REAL ESTATE

QCAP First-Time Homebuyers Workshop

First-time homebuyers can attend a course in buying and financing their first home by attending two workshops scheduled Saturday, Oct. 13 or Saturday, Oct. 27.

The workshops will be held at 1509 Hancock St., 4th floor Conference Room, from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Registration is required.

On completion of both workshops, participants will receive a Certificate of Attendance. The certificate is a prerequisite for down payment closing cost assistance, favorable soft second mortgages, or Mass Housing mortgages.

The workshops sponsored by Quincy Community Action Program (QCAP) are free and open to all, regardless of income, credit rating or down payment availability.

Workshop speakers include professionals in the real estate fields with expertise in different subjects. Participants will receive a workbook containing valuable references pertaining to home buying.

To register or receive additional information, call 617-479-8181.

Neighborhood Housing Services First Time Homebuyer Workshop

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in conjunction with Dedham Institution for Savings, will host a First Time Homebuyer Workshop Monday, Sept. 10 from 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturday, Sept. 15 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The workshop will be held at the Dedham Institution for Savings, 55 Elm St., Dedham.

The workshop is open to all residents of Massachusetts.

Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive a homebuying certificate.

All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend the workshop. Participants will have an opportunity to speak with a lender.

Topics include mortgage options, legal aspects of the home buying process, how a home inspection works, and other presentations from related professionals.

Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs.

There is a $15 fee per person. To register, call 617-770-2227.

The Happy Homeowner

Home-Comfort Ideas You Can Warm Up To

(NAPS) - Even when energy prices look like they're going through the roof, homeowners can find ways to save money and stay comfortable. According to the United States Department of Energy (DOE), almost half the energy used in the average home is for heating and cooling. Homeowners should learn about their heating, ventilation and air-conditioning (HVAC) system and its effect on their heating bills and comfort level.
